V-E DAY BRINGS NEW DRIVE TO RECRUIT OVERSEAS STARS

With film studios prepared to maintain full production schedules throughout observance of V-E Day, the Hollywood Victory Committee last night announced that it would immediately launch its program to step up booking of stars and other entertainers for trips to Europe.

"At request of the War Department, we have already organized the machinery for such a program, and shall push it through as quickly as possible," the committee declared. "For the next six months, while General Eisenhower's armies are immobilized in rest centers and many wounded are in European hospitals, the need for Hollywood's contribution of talent will be even greater than while fighting was in progress.

"At the same time we must continue to concentrate on providing entertainment for the Army and Navy general hospitals in this country and for the armed forces in the Pacific. Also we are in the midst of setting up a program of star participation in the Seventh War Loan Drive.

"V-E Day in no way diminishes the need for Hollywood's personalities to give their free time to our war effort."

MANY PLEDGE TOURS

The campaign for players to go to Europe has already brought pledges from Louise Allbritton, Amos and Andy, Joan Blondell, Joseph Cotten, Bette Davis, William Demarest, Jinx Falkenburg, Joan Fontaine, Victor Francen, Jane Frazee, Gabby Hayes, Kathleen, June and Gene Lockhart, Rosita Moreno, Paul Muni, Charles Ruggles and the team of Akim Tamiroff and Leonid Kinskey. Tours will be set up as quickly as the players are cleared by the War Department, the FBI and the studios.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, May 7.—A Charles Boyer-Irene Dunne picture is being advertised here with the revealing phrase: "Their own voices"—not a dubbed film, but one which will permit audiences to hear the real voices of Boyer and Irene Dunne. At the same time the Olimpia cinema advertises "Destiny," now playing, "dubbed" during early program of the day and "not dubbed" during later evening showing. Is this an acknowledgment of failure of dubbed films in Mexico?

Twentieth-Fox will begin shooting of "Cantaclaro" within next few days. Unable to contract Jorge Negrete, Tito Guizar was considered for stellar role, but Tito, excellent singer, is not quite convincing as an actor, so the part was offered to Emilio Tuero, who asked 125,000 pesos, plus 15% of profits. Finally Antonio Badu was chosen. Badu, grateful for first stellar honors in his career, was content with 20,000 pesos. The names of Romulo Gallegos, author of the novel, and Julio Bracho, who will direct, are sufficient box office draws. Lovely Ester Fernandez is a good choice for the femme lead, and I feel that Antonio Badu will be quite satisfactory, so "Cantaclaro" should be a success.

During three weeks not one Mexican film was allowed in any cinema throughout the country, the Federal District (which comprises Mexico City and adjoining small towns) excepted. Why? Well, the C.T.M. Labor Union managed it somehow, as part of the sabotage campaign against our national cinema industry; but strangely, not one Mexico City newspaper printed the news, and we have five dailies, not counting "El Popular," the labor union publication, and "El Nacional," the official government paper. Correspondents from only three or four cities in the republic have reported sabotage measures in their districts. Of course I don't blame the correspondents; it is always hard swimming against the C.T.M. tide.

Immediately after "Twilight," now in its fourth week at the Chapultepec cinema, "Las Abandonadas," the much discussed, censored, cut, banned, and finally permitted Dolores del Rio starrer, will have its premiere at the Chapultepec and simultaneously in the cities of Monterrey, Guadalajara, Vera Cruz, Tampico, Torreon and Pachuca . . . at least, whatever is left of the film after the sensitive, revolutionary feelings of certain influentials were appeased by suppressing offending sequences. And I hope no one asks me what "revolutionary"—in the Mexican sense — means. I don't know. It's something with a capital letter, much mentioned in official circles, but, as far as I know, not yet defined. We have a monument here to the Revolution. It looks like a huge gas station. Diego Rivera once remarked that it was most appropriate, but then you can't take Diego seriously, except when looking at his murals.

Fortunio Bonanova will have important role in "Pepita Jimenez," an Aguila Films production to be directed by Emilio Fernandez. On his arrival the Catalonian actor spoke of the failure of dubbed pictures. . . . Composer Chucho Monge left for Los Angeles under four-week contract with Frank Fouce. On his return he will do musical score for "Rayando el Sol" . . . Julia Guzman, author of "Divorcees" and "Our Husbands" (both novels have been adapted to the screen), has written a delightful comedy which will open next week at the Ideal theatre.

SPU WILL SEEK CONTRACT FOR EAST'S EXTRAS

Screen Players Union announced last night that its certification by the National Labor Relations Board covers all extra work and that union will oppose any move by the Screen Actors Guild to negotiate for players employed in New York. Business Representative Mike Jeffers declared certification also covers dancers, the only jurisdiction being returned to SAG in the modified certification being that of stunts, bits and parts.

Jeffers said SPU will seek the same contract agreement for eastern extras as is finally negotiated for players on the Coast. Question of wages, conditions, constitution, etc., will be discussed by SPU members at a general mass meeting scheduled for the Woman's Club of Hollywood on May 14.

Shortly after this meeting Jeffers said negotiations will be resumed with representatives of the major companies. Interim deals already have been inked with most of the independent companies.

NAZI THEATRES WRECKED; NO MART FOR PIX

New York, May 8.—A dismal picture of theatre business in Germany was painted by Frederic Ullman, Jr., Pathe News prexy, on his return here from an ATC plane tour of Europe. All the time he was in Germany he did not see a theatre standing.

Early distribution of American films in the conquered country will be delayed by complete absence of theatres, lack of transportation, power, loss of shipping facilities for pictures.

Also operating against early picture showing are regulations, groups of five or more Nazis may not congregate in any one place except a church.

REELS GET THEIR BIG SHOT ON SOLEMN V-E

By ARTHUR UNGAR

San Francisco, May 8.—V-E Day was one of solemn observance. No hysteria, no bars open, but inward happiness on the part of the visiting and local population. There were innumerable meetings of United Nations Conference on International Organization committees. The executive and steering committees, en banc, posed before the newsreel photographers for silent shots in the sacred committee room on the second floor. Navy photographers did the filming, with lavenders to be divided among the members of the newsreel pool for distribution end of week. This is the first and only shot of the inside group of the conference that will be made. All of the steering committee members were included in the picture except Dr. T. V. Soong, who had not returned from Washington.

Secretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., told the newsreel boys there would be no more committee shots made, so now the newsreelers are dwindling in numbers, with many of the cameramen going back to their eastern posts. Within the past

ALL QUIET ON FILM FRONT; NITERIES REPORT GOOD BIZ

Los Angeles kept a more sober side showing yesterday and V-E Day passed with only isolated instances of victory celebrations. Trade at the first-run theatres was about normal for the day and evening and no house found it necessary to shut down. Adding to soberness of the occasion for filmgoers were the atrocity newsreels currently screening here. Story is expected to be entirely different when V-J Day comes, particularly on the west coast where the population is more conscious of the continuing war against Japan.

With only the Palladium doing a blackout for the evening, all other top niteries observed V-E Day by keeping their doors open. Not only did the topflight bistros remain open

ONCE a reporter, always a reporter, even though the scribe winds up as Prime Minister of England. In his V-E Day address to the House of Commons, Winston Churchill, former war correspondent, voiced a diplomatic alibi for the Associated Press correspondent who scooped his colleagues on the signing of peace terms. After announcing the surrender in words remarkably like those of the AP story, Churchill concluded: "It is not surprising that on such long fronts and in the existing disorder of the enemy, the commands of the German high command could not in every case be obeyed immediately. This does not, in our opinion with the military advice at our disposal, constitute any reason for withholding from the nation the facts communicated to us by General Eisenhower of the unconditional surrender already signed at Reims."

WARNERS has tabulated service and number of pictures recorded by six lensers now on the lot. Group has 165 years in service and 1502 films to their credit. Arthur Edeson is top man with 35 years and 300 pictures behind him. Sol Polito claims 30 years and 290 pix. Ernie Haller has also been in for 30 years and has handled 276 pictures. Sid Hickox has filmed 222 starters in 25 years. James Wong Howe lists 25 years and 219 films. Peverly Marley is "baby" of the group with only 20 years and 195 flickers. Mileage for the combination is approximately 15,000,000 feet of film.

UNIVERSAL is acquiring a sizeable lineup of top talent in its recent inking of directors and producers, some on term and others on single-picture commitments. Signed within past few days, William Dieterle and William A. Seiter join Fritz Lang in direction of three of studio's top productions, and Lucien Hubbard and Jane Murfin recently were inked to producer contracts. Joan Harrison also is new studio signee as producer. Studio plans to concentrate on such top names hereafter, bringing in topflight directors on either one or two-picture assignments.

CHANGE in policy of the legitimate departments maintained by major studios in New York is seen in reports from the east. It has been the practice for executives of the studio legitimate branches to make all suggestions regarding production of the plays in which they are interested. This season, it is noted, the studios seem increasingly inclined to "requisition" plays and musicals which have been produced independently of the studio influence. At least five such requests for New York shows have come from Hollywood this season.

RETURN of Harry (Pop) Sherman from a sojourn in the desert yesterday gave rise to reports that he is ready to go into production again on the California Studios lot. Also subject of speculation was the question if and when he is going to revive the "Hopalong Cassidy" series of Westerns with Bill Boyd. Sherman made no announcement, but it is understood his plans are in abeyance pending certainty as to his allotment of new film—a problem that is becoming more of a headache daily to indies and majors alike.

but hotels kept their dancing rooms and bars working.

In the smaller drinkeries, where it was up to the discretion of the individual bar owner to close, only about 10% of the saloons helped wash down V-E Day. Rest of the cocktaileries complied with the Tavern Owners Association request to clamp down.

All was quiet along the Strip. Business in some spots was reported above average Tuesday, while others said take was about normal. Outside Hollywood, one big night spot reported only about half normal night crowd. Managements frowned on any wild celebrations. None was reported. Hotel biz was up in most spots.

The studios followed President Truman's plea for work as usual. There was no organized celebration on any lots.

PRAYERS IN NY HOUSES

New York, May 8.—Most of the vaude-film houses here today injected patriotic or religious touch into their programs for V-E Day. Roxy and Strand played the National Anthem, the Music Hall staged a tableau with the audience joining in the singing of a hymn, and Paramount had a minute of silence at every show. The Loew houses, State and Capitol, showed a reel announcing V-E Day and containing a prayer.

Four stars are to head cast of "Home."

BROADCASTERS PREZ ASKS BILL THAT'LL HALT PETRILLO

Washington, May 8.—NAB President J. Harold Ryan called on Congress today to pass legislation by which the broadcasters can combat James C. Petrillo. Ryan appeared before the House Interstate Commerce Committee, which has again taken up the "anti-Petrillo" bill, to describe the headaches radio and the recording people have been given by Petrillo. He said the bill would not meet the problems.

The measure, which has passed the Senate, would prevent the American Federation of Musicians from barring cultural and educational programs from the air, as has been done in the case of the Interlochen music school and other high school bands.

10,000-WORD STATEMENT

Ryan delivered a 10,000-word statement in which he explained the Interlochen case, the AFM-NABET fight on platter turners, the recording ban, the cut-off of music for television broadcasts, the contracts requiring recording firms to pay royalties to the union, etc. He declared that at the present time radio has no remedy when confronted with unjust demands, stating that the union, whenever it pleased, has chosen to disregard WLB directives and even presidential requests.

"The National War Labor Board has issued final directives," Ryan commented, "which our industry wholeheartedly obeys and respects. When, however, these directives have not been welcome to the union, the union has disregarded them.

NLRB EDICTS IGNORED

"The National Labor Relations Board has issued decisions favoring the contentions of the broadcasters. When it has pleased the union to do so, these decisions have similarly been disregarded. Not only the armed forces but the government agencies which are involved in the war effort have issued requests to the union. These requests have not been followed."

LEGIT OPENING

HOLLYWOOD PINAFORE

Baltimore, May 8.—"Hollywood Pinafore" made a promising debut at Ford's tonight. George S. Kaufman's new book and lyrics to the original Sullivan score pokes some comic jibes at the film industry, but does not get vicious.

Victor Moore as the film company head, William Gaxton as a finagling agent, and Shirley Booth as columnist, get laughs. The hero is a writer wearing convict stripes who dares to love a star away above his lowly calling.

The conference in which a prestige film is planned is a funny highlight, handled in the old-fashioned style of the Gilbert and Sullivan original. The satire is pointed well. The lyrics stand out and vocal rendition throughout is tops. The same goes for general mounting and costuming. The interpolated ballet, headed by Viola Essen and staged by Anthony Tudor, needs considerable pruning and sharpening, particularly in the second act. Show has the makings of another Broadway run for Moore and Gaxton combo, but nothing new for films.

RADIO ALL OUT FOR V-E; MANY ADS GET THE AXE

In a last-minute switch of plans, radio went all out for V-E Day celebrating yesterday. Air skeins, which earlier had planned to adhere to their commercial schedules as much as possible, chucked most of their slated shows for special pickups, both domestic and overseas. Shows that did stay on were forced to trim their commercials down, and in some cases, were allowed to mention only the sponsor's name at the beginning and end of the program.

In the salute to the European victory, air programs still pointed up that only half the war was won and there was a long road ahead in the Pacific. "Stay on the job" was stressed at all times.

GEAR PROGRAMS TO DAY

Commercial broadcasts kept themselves geared to the day by substituting V-E Day messages for advertising and selling copy. Formats of these shows were changed around to fit the occasion. Many of the air spots which could not conceivably do a switcheroo in their style were dumped in favor of music.

CBS wiped out practically all of its commercial casting and had major emanations from San Francisco and New York over the system. Two special local programs were aired at 5 and 6 p.m. First show, an all-star roundup, presented Nelson Eddy, Jeanette MacDonald, Frank Sinatra, Charles Boyer, Shirley Ross, Pat O'Brien, the Mills Brothers and the orchestras of Robert Armbruster and Leith Stevens. Show was put together by Col. Charles Vanda. Second Coast CBS special was Norman Corwin's "Free Men Have Done It Again," written, produced and directed by Corwin.

CUT ROGERS ADS

Mutual's chain shows were switched in format but the times of the commercials weren't heavily distributed except for special shots. The Roy Rogers show, currently on wax while the cowboy is on tour, had the advertising eliminated neatly by segues into V-E Day spiels. Dramatic and musical shows slanted the victory angle, dropping their usual programs.

NBC canceled most of its commercials through the morning and early afternoon, but returned to regular programming after 6 o'clock. From 5:30 to 6:30 a special musical hour was presented, with Toscanini conducting the NBC symphony for the first half-hour in New York, followed by Lauritz Melchior and other top-flight operatic and concert names from the Coast.

Blue's schedule managed to hew to the line to a fair degree, with only one hour and 45 minutes actually lost to special pickups. Otherwise the formats of the shows were not heavily affected and the chain kept its channels on the routine logging.

Armed Forces Radio Service kept up repeats of President Truman's message on short-wave most of the day, so that all servicemen could hear the news direct from the Commander-In-Chief. All regular GI programs were canceled to make way first for the official announcements and then for all available foreign pickups and reactions supplied by domestic networks.

GI's also heard a special all-star V-E Day program with top film and radio names in a serious half-hour of comment on the situation and pointing up that the job was just half finished.

MILLS SEES BIG JOB AHEAD FOR FILMS

Washington, May 8.—Picture industry's job, instead of being lightened by V-E Day, is tougher from now on, Taylor Mills, head of the OWI film bureau, pointed out today. Films, he said, will play a leading part in reminding the public that it isn't all over yet and that there still is a war in the Pacific.

Government agencies acted today to release V-E Day pix held in exchanges throughout the country. AAF released five trailers to be clipped to newsreels over five-week period. Navy also let go a clip to be added to next edition of the newsreels.

All five newsreels will get the V-E Day story to exhibitors Wednesday. More than 16,000 film houses immediately began exhibiting newsreel footage which had been specially prepared for showing after the announcement.

Shorts and newsreels for V-E Day follow-ups begin showing throughout the country Wednesday. In addition there will be screened OWI-WAC-Army trailers, "For Us the Living" and "Don't Make Him Wait."

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(CBS News Analyst)

San Francisco, May 8.—Now its Japan. The temper of the people is shown here in San Francisco from which I'm wiring. There is no celebrating. Everyone goes on with his job as usual. Even among the delegates from the nations that have suffered in Europe there is no great exhuberance. This contrasts with scenes in New York, London and elsewhere, and it's difficult to explain—unless it means that out here on the Pacific Coast, where the Golden Gate looks out toward the rising sun, there's a different kind of feeling in the very air, a sober realization that the job is not done yet, that we have reached only one more important station along the road to total victory. You talk to people, too, and ask them about it, and almost everyone says: "I have a boy (or two or three) out there in the Pacific yet." The conference of the United Nations and its grave problems of trying to prevent this happenial again, despite the prejudices and suspicions of human nature, also affects the temper here. We know the job is not done—yet.

CURFEW, RACE BAN SKEDDED TO GO AS BROWNOUT ENDS

Washington, May 8.—Lifting of the midnight curfew and the horse-racing ban is expected to be announced tomorrow by Fred M. Vinson, director of War Mobilization and Reconversion. Press has been notified of a conference scheduled for tomorrow and with the cessation of hostilities in Europe, it is anticipated Vinson will name a date for the removal of so-called "morale" curbs on civilian activities.

The brown-out officially ended all over the nation last night as the War Production Board revoked its order banning unnecessary lighting following President Truman's announcement of V-E Day. Ban had been leveled against use of electric power for advertising, promotional, decorative, ornamental or sign lighting in order to conserve fuel.

NBC KICKS PRECEDENT IN THE SNOOT TWICE

By JACK HELLMAN

San Francisco, May 8.—Records and precedent are being bowled over at this conference of nations like duckpins at a kegling emporium, and one more or less doesn't cause any arching of the eyebrows or double takes among the men who know radio. It was NBC's turn yesterday to break into the precedent-setting league and they liked it so well they did it twice.

It has long been network policy not to play a record across the chain right-of-way, but now it will have to be modified to make waiver for such events as these. Neither NBC nor the others are to be blamed for shuttling off the highway, conditions being what they are and protocol rarely taking into account such a havoc-raising element as timing.

The chain gang likes to work on 12 hours' leeway in clearing the net for something special, so you imagine the confusion and flapping of butterflies around the ulcerous midsection when at 10:15 a.m. the special events heads were told they could have the big V-E Day event exactly two hours later. Night before the hint was dropped it might happen, but it hadn't become definite until late in the morning.

NBC had set up McKenzie King of Canada to follow King George and then came the monkey wrench. The pooled broadcast of Edward Stettinius, Anthony Eden, Wellington Koo and George Bidault was skedded immediately after the English monarch finished. NBC asked the other nets to set up the time so Canada's headman could be heard first on its hookup, pleading that the good neighbor policy must not be jeopardized. The overture was voted down so the king's speech had to be recorded and played back over the skein later in the evening.

MRS. ROOSEVELT SIDETRACKED

Earlier in the morning Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt took to the air at a time when other fish were frying, and had to take a siding until the track was clear. The transcription was put on the turntable later, and if that wasn't a blue letter day for NBC, it will have to do until something bigger comes along.

Transcriptions have been played before on the web, but never of domestic origin. Wire recordings of special overseas war stuff have been given the wax works, but such extenuation needs no apology. It just couldn't be done any other way with a war going on and spot events are never allowed to hold up an army on the march.

Fluffs have been common with the broadcasters, but H. V. Kaltenborn ran into one today that proved quite embarrassing. Slated for an early morning broadcast on NBC, he took over the time originally allotted to the correspondent in Chungking. He was seated in front of the mike awaiting his cue from the announcer, but the little man wasn't there to flip it, having been called away. Meanwhile, along the net the fidgets set in, so a standby was put on. Kaltenborn took it upon himself to start talking, but his voice didn't get through, and lo, to his discomfiture, a voice in the studio was heard to remark, "You're not on the air." A little later the line was in order and H. V. started all over again. Being an old hand at the game, he passed it off with a knowing smile, and everyone had a good laugh at his expense.

AP EVENS SCORE

The feeling around press and radio headquarters at the Palace hotel is that the Associated Press more than atoned for its gun-jumping surrender flash of last week by getting a clean break on the real thing. Wary of being put on the hook twice by the AP, the Chronicle practically apologized for putting out a few copies of Monday's surrender extra. In a front-page box this morning the paper stated:

"On the strength of an Associated Press dispatch announcing Germany's unconditional surrender, the Chronicle, in common with other newspapers, went to press Monday morning with an extra headlined, 'Surrender.' When confirmation was not forthcoming, the presses were stopped after 3,500 copies of the edition already had reached the street. These were confined to the downtown area. No additional copies were run off."

These have been trying days for the conservative old AP and dapper little Roy Howard is around to lick his chops. It was Howard's United Press that never quite lived down that premature armistice flash of the first world war.

The dull atmosphere of the musty old Palace lobby was infused with a fresh breath of glamor—the Hollywood brand—when Rita Hayworth strolled through in her unofficial capacity as emissary of the Free World Movement, in which Orson Welles has a keen interest. She just was helping out and looking around, she said, now that she doesn't start her next picture until late next month. She'll go dramatic in this vehicle, "Gilda," feeling that she should forego dancing for a year.

When the period of national mourning ends May 13 there should be a surge northward of the cinema belles to lend that gay touch to the festivities planned for the delegates and the people who sweat over typewriters and bark into microphones.

REELS GET BIG UN SHOT ON SOLEMN FRISCO V-E DAY

few days there has been very little newsreel footage shot, as it would virtually all be duplication. Boys now are making mostly historic and record shots of delegation of the various countries.

For next 10 days at least it looks like a tight story here, not photographic. The newsmen still find plenty of those press meets all around town to keep them on the hop 16 hours a day at least.

Darryl Zanuck, who arrived here Monday morning from Hollywood, returned south last night, but gets back again Friday. Zanuck, while here, conferred with various State Department officials on post-war slanting of films for the occupied countries. The talk was strictly off the record and will be continued when he returns. Zanuck also discussed the European situation with Ambassador of Reparations Ed Pauly who was in town overnight, and certainly will head for the European occupational zones.

Charles P. Skouras also is around. Tomorrow at a private dinner he will host the Greek delegation. Prior to his arrival his brother, George, was on hand to see that the delegates from Greece were taken care of in all respects.

Previews seem to be what are wanted at the United Nations theatre. Monday's showing of "Rhapsody In Blue" drew almost capacity audiences, with "Valley of Decision," tonight's special, doing likewise. Earl Carroll arrived in town today to linger around while his "Vanities" plays second week at the Golden Gate theatre.

WALSH AIDE DEFIES AFL ON CHARTER ORDER

Defying authority of the American Federation of Labor executive council to discipline the IATSE for issuing charters for carpenters and painters, Roy Brewer, international representative for Prexy Richard Walsh, issued a statement yesterday indicating the IA has no intention of complying with the AF of L order to revoke the charters. Brewer took a slap at William Hutcheson, international prexy of the carpenters, and declared the IATSE intends to "continue to keep the studios operating."

Brewer's statement follows:

"It has been called to my attention that Mr. Herbert Sorrell has released through the public press a telegram from Mr. L. P. Lindeloff, international president of the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, which purports to describe certain conditions taken yesterday in Washington by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor with respect to the charters issued by the IATSE in Hollywood.

WON'T CHANGE ACTIONS

"We have received no information as yet which would either confirm or deny the truth of this statement. However, even should that information be confirmed in its entirety, it would not materially alter the situation in Hollywood at this time. Any such decision would be subject to review by the convention of the AF of L next October, and that laws of the Federation specifically provide that no disciplinary action can be taken except by the convention. The right of the IATSE, in the event such action was taken by the executive council, was fully contemplated before the charters were issued.

"Those who know Mr. Hutcheson know that he does not usually seek to settle his grievances by complaint before the AF of L, unless he has failed to win his point through the aggressive use of his union's economic strength, which he has not hesitated to use without regard to the rights or interests of his opponent. The fact that he has had to call upon the American Federation of Labor for support proves that he has failed to win by economic force. We do not think that he will find much consolation in now asking the IATSE to settle the disputes in the American Federation of Labor, when two months ago he was refusing to do the same thing because he thought he had the economic power to win without it.

HISTORY CITED

"I sincerely hope that the men on the picket line will not be too greatly influenced to further jeopardize their own welfare by reliance on this move. They should remember that over 25 years ago the American Federation of Labor ordered the Typographical Union to give its machinists to the machinists union, but it never complied, and to this day the men are a part of the Typographical Union. It should also be remembered that as far back as 1914 the American Federation of Labor ordered the Carpenters Union to give the millwrights to the machinists union, but they have never done so and still retain them to this day. Scores of other examples could be cited which would point to the fact that such a formal action on the part of the executive council is not in any manner a controlling factor in this dispute.

WILL KEEP STUDIOS GOING

"The IATSE always has fought for the principles of the American Federation of Labor. It has contributed a host of prominent leaders to the various affiliates of the American Federation of Labor throughout the United States. However, the IATSE recognizes that its existence as a successful fighting labor union depends upon its economic strength in the theatrical field, and we do not contemplate weakening our organized power now or in the future. We intend to continue to keep the studios operating as we have, notwithstanding Mr. Hutcheson's efforts to keep them closed."

Local labor tops differed with the position taken by Brewer. They pointed out the AF of L executive council had forced the IATSE to revoke a charter it had issued for variety actors, and declared the same action could be taken in this situation. They insisted the executive council could suspend Walsh or the IATSE and leave it to them to take their fight for reinstatement, if they so desired, to the AF of L convention next October. Copies of Brewer's statement were being rushed to Prexy Hutcheson and other members of the executive council.

With the AF of L having issued instructions for Walsh to revoke the charters, strike interest now turned to the National Labor Relations Board, which is expected momentarily to hand down a decision ordering an election of studio Set Decorators to designate a collective bargaining agency. Current strike was ordered nine weeks ago when Producers refused to recognize the claim of Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421 to jurisdiction over Decorators. The IATSE had notified Prods if such recognition was given theatre operators would be jerked.

SORRELL SUES WALSH

Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, filed a $150,000 libel suit against Richard Walsh and his associates yesterday in Superior court. Named as defendants are Walsh, the IATSE and Roy Brewer, IA international representative. Sorrell charges group libeled him when they distributed a printed bulletin claiming that he followed the Communist line and that he was leading the strikers down the "Red road to oblivion."

Sorrell also issued the following statement in reference to the action by the AF of L executive council:

"The decision of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor ordering Walsh to immediately stop issuing charters to strike-breaking unions and to dissolve the so-called painters' and carpenters' charters he already has set up, means the end of Walsh's dream as a Hollywood labor leader."

BOTH IA, PAINTERS MAY BE TOLD NOT TO FORM LOCALS

Washington, May 8.—The American Federation of Labor Executive Council, which heard both sides of the case in the studio strike yesterday, may issue an order that neither the IATSE nor the painters can charter new locals until the strike is settled it was hinted today.

The AF of L Council listened to Richard F. Walsh, IATSE prexy, and L. P. Lindelof, of the Painters. Both are scheduled to receive letters shortly from George Meany, AF of L secretary, on the decision.

Freezing of the locals is about as far as the AF of L feels it can go at this point, and it is admitted that is not very satisfactory, since it would not prevent either of the unions from taking people into existing locals in Hollywood.

The usual procedure in a jurisdictional dispute is for the opposing sides to lay their cases before the Executive Council quickly. In this instance, much water has gone over the dam and Government agencies are in the picture, which complicates things, one AF of L spokesman said.

SPU OFFICERS QUIT; JEFFERS CALLED A DICTATOR

ship will have the right to accept or reject resignations of the officers. Business Representative Mike Jeffers declared plan was to name a secretary-treasurer at a salary of approximately $6,000 per year. Jeffers said new officer would have been placed in charge of union and that the business representative would have become a mere local contact or rubber-stamp.

Jeffers added the board vote against creation of the office was 11 to 4. He stated the board took the position that SPU was not in a financial position to take on another paid officer at this time. He said those sponsoring the move accused him of being a dictator, and that when he declared he would not become a rubber-stamp for the board, those urging new office declared they would not be a rubber stamp for the business agent.

Jeffers announced that SPU's bookkeeper, Della Bates, was in charge of headquarters office and handled the employment of all clerical help. He also stated that he had resigned as treasurer of SPU to devote his entire time to the post of business representative. These resignations leave all four top offices of SPU vacant.

Election of officers, adoption of a Constitution and By-Laws, proposed minimum wage scales and future policies of SPU are expected to be taken up at the Monday meeting.

Mayo declared last night that he and the other officers had quit because Jeffers had set himself up as a dictator. Mayo declared that Jeffers had not even communicated with members of a negotiating committee appointed by the board of directors and that he had ignored resolutions and other instructions adopted by the board. He stated Jeffers had advised the officers that he would not take orders from any board of directors.

Mayo insisted no salary had been mentioned for the office of secretary-treasurer, that split with Jeffers had not occurred over that proposal, but over move to define the duties of business representative and other officers.

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, May 8.—Louis de Rochemont is ready to produce a film on the Frisco conference for OWI-WAC release. He would be aided by John Cromwell, who produced "Watchtower Over Tomorrow." The project is awaiting only a green light from the State Department which would have to sponsor it. However, it is anybody's guess whether the State Department will ever okay it. Last week Senator Robert A. Taft (R., O.) cut loose in the Senate with an attack on government agencies which he accused of propaganda.

His wallop was aimed particularly at State and Assistant Secretary Archibald MacLeish who is in charge of information at Frisco. Taft referred to "Watchtower" and claimed that "I understand that it was prepared at government expense and is for practical purposes distributed by the government." He also charged heavy State Department propaganda to affect radio broadcasts in connection with international cooperation.

In view of all this and the State Department's sensitiveness to criticism, it is conceivable that the whole De Rochemont-Cromwell project could be quietly shelved.

Although WPB officials have been insisting that the industry's outlook for raw stock in the third quarter is favorable and the Army's increased demands for X-ray film would not hit Hollywood much, some new factors now are beginning to appear which affect the situation adversely. First of these is a plan of the Army to shift more and more from 16 to 35mm. film, which uses double the raw stock and which is manufactured on the same machines and by the same skilled labor that produces stock for Hollywood. Just how important the Army demands for 35mm. will be still is not certain but the warning is there.

Second is the plan to provide vacations for the workers during the summer and to shut down equipment for overhaul and repair.

Meanwhile, government requests aside from the armed forces are being heavily slashed. Treasury, for example, may not receive anything in the third quarter and may have its authorization carried over to the fourth quarter when it would be used for another war loan.

The face and personality of President Truman will soon be thoroughly familiar to Latin-Americans, thanks to motion pictures. The newsreel division of OIAA (ex-CIAA) is readying a documentary on the new President. Film, to be scored in English, Spanish and Portuguese, in color, will be released through all of the regular OIAA channels. Footage was filmed last October in Truman's home town of Independence, Mo., by Col. Albert Holland, motion picture liaison officer of the Signal Corps to OIAA. In addition to acquainting the Latins with the President, the pic will point out the simple and democratic way of living of a leading U. S. citizen. Holland, incidentally, now is in Frisco for OIAA, filming activities of delegates from the other Americas.

Dore Schary and Allen Rivkin left town last week with broad smiles and the blessings of Marine Corps General Vandegrift for their script of "They Dream of Home." Film, which is to be feature length, deals with the problems of Marine Corps rehabilitation. Scripted by Rivkin, the picture will be produced by Schary for Selznick. The two men also huddled with Navy officials on the general subject of rehabilitation, though they failed to see Capt. Gene Markey who was grounded in Pittsburgh by the weather on his way back from the Coast.

Confusing reports reach this country on the French film situation. Couple of weeks ago, Etienne LeRoche, director of film production for the Ministry of Information there, announced that in the year since the liberation 65 features had been turned out by 25 producers, comparing favorably with pre-war production volume as well as with production during the Nazi occupation. In general things were said to be booming with Danielle Darrieux, Raimu and others before the cameras.

Still more recently, an address was delivered in the French Chamber of Deputies which said that since January, 1944, the industry virtually has been at a standstill. This was blamed on lack of raw materials and the complications arising from the government's seizure of holdings acquired by Nazis.

In this speech it was pointed out, however, that the studios had suffered virtually no damage from the war and that the industry could easily produce 66 features in a year. It was claimed that the French market was not large enough to handle from 110 to 120 foreign films annually in addition to such French output.

Municipal theatre at Malmoe, Sweden, barred Goesta Richter from acting because of Nazi sympathies. He had been an announcer on a German radio. . . . Egyptian government has asked theatre operators in Cairo to show Arabic films for at least four weeks of every season. However, theatre owners can't find enough good product of that type for the better houses. . . . Box office receipts in Managua, Nicaragua, hit $202,074 for the first 10 months of 1944. This is about $6,500 better than for the entire year of 1943.

INDIE SWEARS HE SOLD TO GRIFFITH FOR LACK OF PIX

Oklahoma City, May 8.—Testimony that he sold out to the Griffith interests "because I couldn't get film to show" was given by Denis Scaling, former independent operator, of Plainview, Tex., today. Scaling was first witness in the trial here of the government's anti-trust suit against theatre circuits operated by L. C. Griffith, of Oklahoma City, and H. J. Griffith, of Dallas Tex.

Under direct examination by Special Assistant Attorney General Robert L. Wright, Scaling testified that he could not get a contract with Universal Films renewed.

Government seeks to show that the Griffith chain forced independent operators out of business and used illegal methods to monopolize available films. Defendants in the case are Griffith Amusement Co. and Consolidated Theatres, of Oklahoma City, and R. E. Griffith Amusement Co. and Westex Theatres, of Dallas.

WORLD DRAMA STAR QUITS THE STAGE

By ARTHUR UNGAR

San Francisco, May 9.—The star of the big show has pulled up stakes and gone home. Right up to the last minute he had the radio and news cameramen jittery. Like Garbo, he does things on the impulse. Tuesday night 45 minutes' notice was given the networks he would broadcast. Boys were spread all around town. No one had been notified in the War Memorial auditorium. The building was dark and "security" prevailed.

There was a mad rush to phones to get the radio ready and newsreel cameramen on hand. Military police, without orders, acted as barriers until a State Department official gave the nod. Setups and lights were put in working order and the Russian foreign minister got under way with his interpreter doing the American etherization.

FILM HOUSES SEE 7% BIZ GAIN IN CURFEW'S END

Theatre business nationally will increase approximately 7% following lifting of the emergency midnight closing curfew. All over the country film houses with former all-night policies returned to the 24-hour day, while others operating after midnight on Saturdays were preparing programs to celebrate the return of late shows.

Along with the curfew lifting, theatres received good news that restrictions on the manufacture of 35mm. motion picture projection equipment and accessories also are being removed. This will mean that houses with worn equipment will have a chance to replace it with new in the near future.

Exhibitors are looking forward to easier programming of shows now that theatres are not tied down to the midnight deadline. Since the ban was inaugurated in February, theatres have often had to slice sequences from newsreels and other short subjects to properly time programs in keeping with the government bureau edict.

Approximately 25 theatres locally will benefit by death knell of the curfew and others will find general increase in grosses due to schedul-

MILLION DOLLAR THEATRE JOINS METROPOLITAN RING

Final papers are ready for inking in a deal whereby Metropolitan Theatres takes over the Million Dollar theatre at Third and Broadway under a long-term lease. The Harry Popkin theatre will come into the downtown circuit as a replacement for the Tower at Eighth and Broadway, which Joe Blumenfeld of San Francisco acquires on lease July 1.

Acquisition of the Million Dollar by Metropolitan will more than make up for loss of the Tower, as former house seats 2,145 against the Tower's 900. While no final policy has been set for operation of the Million Dollar pending final signaturing of the deal, it is expected house will assume the Tower's second run and continue present stage policy for the time being. Lease would start July 1.

Million Dollar will be completely renovated and redecorated by Metropolitan, a partnership consisting of

THE job of creating a chunk of Louisiana swamp country out in Arcadia near the Santa Anita race track started yesterday. Lloyd Bacon, directing "Enchanted Voyage" for 20th Century-Fox, and now on location in New Orleans, put a dozen negro laborers to work collecting Spanish moss. The moss—100 bales of it—will be shipped here to drape the special bayou set being constructed at Arcadia. Collection of moss is only one of the problems, however. There's a California quarantine against this swamp parasite plant because it is hibernation quarters for the cotton boll weevil. The studio first had to get authorization from A. A. Brock, California Director of Agriculture, and now has to fumigate all the moss under the direction of W. E. Anderson, Louisiana State Entomologist.

CHI RELEASE PLAN ATTACKED AS PRICE FIXING SCHEME

Chicago, May 9.—Appeal of the Jackson Park Theatre case in which indie plaintiffs were awarded a $360,000 judgment in Federal court last year was up for argument in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today. There is possibility of a decision in about 30 days.

Defendants in the case, who will be hooked for the $360,000 grant if the Federal jury grant is upheld, are RKO, Loew's, 20th-Fox, Paramount and Warner Bros. Pictures, Balaban and Katz and Warner Bros. Theatres.

Attorney Thomas C. McConnell, for the indies, charged that the Chicago release system is part and parcel of a price-fixing scheme and therefore illegal under the Sherman Act.

JUDGE HAS HIS SAY

This statement was challenged by Miles G. Seeley, Vincent O'Brien and Edward R. Johnston, attorneys for the defendants. They argued the release system is necessary for distributors to get the most for their money by renting to the largest theatres possible.

They insisted it wouldn't be possible for producers to make the kind of pictures they do without this method.

Judge Earl Major, one of the three presiding jurists, countered this one with the remark: "This doesn't excuse the fact that smaller exhibitors are prevented from getting the product."

Seeley disputed the indie counsel's claim that the Chicago system was created in 1931 to protect theatres operated by the distributing defendants. He declared that all the evidence shows that the system had existed since 1927, when Warner Brothers had theatres here and when Balaban and Katz, affiliated with Paramount only two years previously had only a few. It really developed, he said, since 1918, being brought on by the construction of newer and better theatres.

PRICE FIXING CHARGED

McConnell's main argument was devoted to trying to show that conspiracy was based on price fixing "which motivated and controlled the playing position, not only of the plaintiff's theatre but of every house in Chicago."

He asserted that the defendants were tied together so that nobody could negotiate with them until their own theatres had milked everything they could out of the product.

'Salty' Sets 19-Yr. Opening Day Record

New York, May 9.—Salty O'Rourke, Milton Holmes' race track yarn produced by Paramount, has hung up a 19-year Paramount theatre record for opening day biz other than a holiday. First week of the Alan Ladd, Gail Russell film did a socko $100,000 with the Charlie Spivah ork and a stage show.

STRIP FILLS BEAKERS UNTIL 2 a.m.; TWO SHOWS RESUMED

With the lifting of the midnight curfew, most niteries in Los Angeles and Hollywood last night went back to the old split custom of keeping the customers bottled in bond until 12 and then cutting out the joy juice in favor of dancing or shows until 1 or even 2 a.m. However, the bonifaces along the Strip chose to keep the tankards foaming until the 2 a.m. deadline.

Ambassador, Biltmore and Town House hotels took advantage of the curfew hoist to stay open until 1 a.m., with drinks off the tables at midnight. Earl Carroll's and Slapsy Maxie's kept the doors unshuttered until 1, with exception that Carroll's maintained its old pre-midnight show schedule, while Maxie's put the entertainment on right at the witching hour. Carroll's switch in time comes tonight, inasmuch as there wasn't time to reroute the show sked for the first night.

Ciro's, Trocadero and the Mocambo kept the Strip well lighted until 2 a.m., when they stopped serving drinks and doused the lights. Strip spots which prior to the curfew had won the court fight to remain open until 2 in the liquor peddling end, reverted not only to this practice, but to the two shows nightly, at 9 and 12. Ironically enough, Elmer's, the nitery that won the court decision, is closed for another week for alterations.
for alterations. The Clover Club closed at midnight and announced it would continue to do so, as long as servicemen were barred from post-midnight drinks.

Palladium remained open until 1, with 2 a.m. closing on Fridays and Saturdays. However, the terpalace bars are locked at the cinderella hour.

Uniformed men and women still are under the military law, which forbids them to be on the premises after midnight of any establishment serving liquor after midnight.

EDDIE CANTOR is mighty glad the filming schedule of his forthcoming western musical at RKO doesn't require him to start until June 4. Producer Cantor has a contract with Actor Cantor to let the latter off every Wednesday to prepare his radio show. Ditto for Co-Star Joan Davis, except that her day is Thursday. Harry Von Zell, who also will be in cast, has his radio duties to perform every Monday. Result is the best schedule Director Felix Feist could devise carries on under these difficult conditions through June. By July the radio programs change for the summer, and he will have this month and August unhampered by contractual absenteeism on the part of his players.

SKOURAS HUNTING THEATRES AND CANDY PLANTS

San Francisco, May 9.—Charles P. Skouras, who has been here for past three days accompanied by John Betrero and Sam Shain, heads for Los Angeles tomorrow. Skouras, while here, discussed the acquisition of some future theatre properties. He also looked into the possibilities of National Theatre acquiring a candy factory or two. An interest has already been bought in the Cardinet Candy Company and efforts were made to negotiate a deal whereby interest could be acquired in the Blum Candy Company, which turns out the finest sweets in this part of the country. No deal had been consummated up to late tonight.

Reason National wants to get into the manufacturing end of the candy business is that in California alone it's theatres merchandize around $30,000 worth of candy and popcorn a week. When sugar is released from rationing it's figured that the take in the Fox West Coast houses in this area would jump another $5,000 a week, which would bring that take to over the $2,000,000 a year mark.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

San Francisco, May 9.—There's a network operating out of this Pacific port that is doing as fine a job in its sphere of influence as any of the major skeins. You probably haven't heard it or of it but to the 21,000,000 dialers in the 20 Latin American Republics it is their first line of entertainment and enlightenment. In a compact little studio in the Fairmont hotel is poured out this tremendous volume of good neighbor programs.

It's called the united network and is but one of the radio projects of Office of Inter-American Affairs. Similar to the operation of armed forces radio service commercial programs are taken off the line, the plugs denatured and then shortwaved to the Latin populace of the other Americas. All our top Hooperated programs are taken off the beam by 600 stations and there, mister, you have a network that will have the promoters drooling after the war. The Latins have been conditioned to the American brand of radio and they'll settle for hardly less after the war. A great, big sprawling market has been opened up for U. S. manufacture and its radio that will do the selling job. International hookups will be as common as the linked-up Don Lee chain and signal strength to reach the southern tip of South America an engineering sinecure. Short wave has donned long pants and can do a man's job with all the new advancements born of military expediency. John W. G. Ogilvie, radio chief of OIAA, forsees a potential for this network far beyond its present good neighbor value. That's for the future but what's being done today both by the United network, and the OIAA's other radio agencies make the foundation secure. Ogilvie's crew is keeping the Latin Americas better posted on United Nations Conference activities than any of our own chains. No sooner do the delegates come out of meeting than they're put on the shortwave beam to report back to their countrymen. They get it first and they get it fast and they're thankful to the Americano for making it possible.

When the network auditors get the telephone bill next month they'll probably go into a tailspin and call for a moratorium. It's one of the biggest items of the Conference setup and any guess at this time as to how it totals up would be hazardous and pure speculation. Special lines have been installed by all chains and that runs into blue chips. The local phone picture is a little clearer. Special exchange in the Veteran's building, with a special number, International 3300, handles from 12,000 to 15,000 calls a day on its 12 switchboards. That gives a faint idea of the part Alexander Bell, posthumously, is playing in this conclave of nations.

STATION BREAKS. . . . The Blue boys all hold their breath when Baukage is scheduled for a special broadcast. His watch has the bad habit of going off Greenwich at crucial times. Once he showed up for his program seven minutes late. . . . Columbia's Fox Case puts in the longest day of anyone at the meet and spends most of it on the phone and pouring over the three teletypes in his office. . . . Bob Collier is up here for Ford and doing a great public relations job. He's one of the pioneers of television and still marking its progress. . . . John B. Hughes, a striking figure in his war correspondent's uniform, prefers mufti. . . . They're saying that the hecklers at Helen Gahagan's press conference were planted by a certain newspaper publisher. . . . Earl Wilson, the New York columnist, can't get out of the night prowling habit and can be seen around the Palace lobby when the charwomen make the rounds. . . . Jack Runyon around for a few days to look in on the Office of Inter-American Affairs operation. . . . It may be just one of those things but when KFI's Bill Ryan saw Peter De Lima in the hotel elevator he changed his mind about riding up. Pete is one of the commentators purged by KFI . . . Fred Runyon, co-publisher of Pasadena Independent, who writes radio scripts in his spare time, signed up United Press and International News for his sheet.

You've probably wanted to know, and so have we, where the com-mentators came from. Unknown and unheard of before the war, many of them have made names for themselves that ring through every household. If you've already guessed they're former newspapermen you can pick up the marbles. As most of them write their own copy it is only natural to assume that they're backgrounded in journalism. Let's look into the past of a few of the names and check their credentials. Bill Shirer was one time sports editor in Cedar Rapids, Harry Flannery was a newspaperman in St. Louis. Ned Calmer was for years in Europe for New York Herald Tribune, Bob Trout was a roving worker and script writer in Alexandria, La., Eric Sevareid went to Paris for United Press after his Minneapolis newspaper training. Baukhage was Washington and foreign correspondent, Edward Tomlinson was reporter on the London Spectator, Ray Henle has a long record of covering political conventions, Raymond Swing started as a reporter in Cleveland and at 23 became managing editor of Indianapolis Sun, Drew Pearson can look back on the days when he was successively a teacher, seaman, foreign correspondent, globe trotter and head of a "Quaker" relief mission in the Balkans, Fleetwood Lawton, an Oxford man, was managing editor of Buenos Aire Standard, Larry Smith held down INS bureau in Tokyo, Elmer Peterson was AP bureau manager in many European capitals, Robert St. John has known the smell of printer's ink for 20 years, Roy Porter began his newspaper career as reporter on the Los Angeles Herald, H. V. Kaltenborn has had varied career as world traveler, newspaperman and dates his radio debut back to 1921, Richard Harkness is a Kansas product and first hustled news for United Press, Hill is Colorado born and naturally worked on the Denver Post, Josef Washington Hall has a background of lecturing, investigator, and a vast knowledge of the Orient, Alex Dreier is a Stanford grad and was all over Europe for United Press.

UA HAS 9 FILMS READY TO FILL RELEASE DATES

Despite the current work layoffs in studios releasing through United Artists, execs of the firm yesterday declared they have plenty of pictures for the market and are not worried about shortage of product.

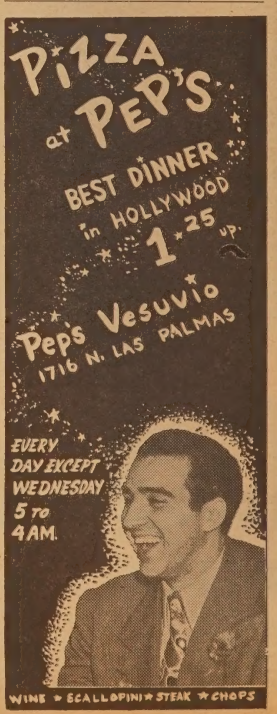
It was pointed out that ready for release or already screening are Jack Skirball's "Guest Wife," Les Cowan's "GI Joe," Ben Bogeaus' "Captain Kidd," Andy Stone's "Bedside Manner." There also is the James Cagney picture, "Blood On the Sun," now showing in San Francisco; "The Great John L.," "Spellbound" and "The Southerner." In production is Hunt Stromberg's "The Young Widow."

Most of these have been produced at the General Service studios where the indies have signed with the painters and set decorators and consequently are unaffected by the strike. Situation at the California studio, accommodating Skirball productions, is the same.

Output for United Artists release, however, has been curtailed with the David O. Selznick, Sol Lesser and Edward Small companies currently inactive.

Constance Bennett Starting Air Show

Constance Bennett starts her own network show over the Blue May 21 on a five-times-a-week basis. Program will feature comments about Hollywood, Broadway and fashions and will air locally via transcription from 12:45 to 1:00 p. m. Monday through Friday.



MOLOTOV, STAR OF WORLD DRAMA QUITS STAGE

Rockne interference around. Molotov chatted with the radio boys and newsreel men, and also accepted a military police helmet from Lieut. Col. Al Holland as a souvenir. He was ready to don it when he saw the cameramen ready to click, but changed his mind and posed with the group of radio and newsreel men for a picture with the helmet proudly held in front of him.

Then this morning there was another one of those fast ones for which the Russians are famous. Just 45 minutes before plane time word came through he was pulling out for home from Hamilton Field at 10 a.m. That called for hurry and bustle by the American newsreel men. It was 24 miles to the field. The boys got there on the dot of 10 and found the Russian newsreel boys grinding away at their chief. But for some reason known only to the American newsreel men, a little stalling took place, and they got in their licks with the cameras to bid the star of the United Nations Conference For International Organization bon voyage.

MAY COME BACK

Whether Molotov will be back or not depends on progress of the committees and commissions. He left the Russian Ambassador to the United States, A. A. Gromyko, as his stand-in and proxy. Latter will make his reports via phone to the homeland, and should the stolid-faced prima donna be required, it will be a short hop for him to get back. There are stories about that he wanted to get away before the Argentina delegates, against whose admission he protested, arrived here. He did, for the advance guard of that mission arrives tomorrow.

Though many of the commentators, columnists and newsreel men have left town, there still is plenty of news going the rounds, also cocktail parties. News still comes from the various delegations, all of whom are serving out background on why they want so and so from the meet. Today the boys were told that the Pan-American agreement, which was framed at Chapultepec, would be worked into the security act, and the reps of the smaller countries, especially the Latin-Americans, feel that something really secure will eventuate at the conference.

STANDING ROOM AT PREVIEWS

Previews at the United Nations theatre have been worked out, and the film industry now is getting them in. For past three nights it has been virtual standing room. But someone is not satisfied with this policy, so next week they're going to run continuously from 7 in the evening on.

Whoever had that idea loses sight of the fact that conferences, meetings and cocktail parties go on until around eight, then it's feeding time, so it looks as if the UN theatre is likely to have a headache with this policy and may have to make another switch. But that's done here all the time.

Those open broadcasts from here for the past three weeks by Walter Winchell will be out Sunday. Winchell so advised Johnny Johnstone, special events chief of the Blue Network. The sun was too bright in Hollywood, so from there he'll emerize on Sunday. Johnstone and Ben Grauer, the Jergens announcer, head south for the program. Sidelight here is that Winchell was getting tired of the Time magazine boys here checking his every move.

STATE DEPT. WATCH ON RADIO ANTAGONISTICS

By JACK HELLMAN

San Francisco, May 9.—Radio's antagonistics, so called by the State Department, are being hovered over with hawklike vigilance. These are the bad boys of the commentary crowd who have a way of sharpening the dull edge of a meeting such as this with their own means and methods, which generally stray from the path of factual righteousness. It's the words they pour into the microphones that have altered the Staters to a watchfulness as tense as any security detail guarding the secret sessions of the commission chambers.

There are three or four of the personalized reporting corps who have given the others a bad name, or less cruelly put, on the sensational side. They are the lads who reach for conclusions beyond the confines of what actually transpires and make it as spectacular as possible. Their names have not been divulged, but if you've heard the run of them you can single out at least two.

No one can gainsay that the conference to date has been unproductive of pyrotechnics aside from a few sparklers, but only the most optimistic could anticipate such a display. When statesmen meet to carve out a new world dedicated to peace, the dignity of such proceedings perforce must be kept aloof from any showmanly appeal to appease the whims of the few.

NO CRACKDOWNS

There have been no crackdowns by the State Department or any overt acts of reporting, or if there have been, the secret has been well guarded. That's not saying, however, that some commentator, far out of line, won't have his knuckles cracked and told to sin no more.

It's not entirely such a sordid picture with the master minds of the kilocycles. While every broadcast is minutely scanned and put on paper for all to read, there's a constructive facet to their commentary. Somewhere in their script may be found a sound suggestion for parliamentary procedure and these get the same scrutiny as the off-side views.

Commentators have come to be looked upon as public opinion moulders in their own right and the vast audience they command cannot be minimized in importance and emotional impact. There are a half-dozen or more held in high esteem in official circles and their opinions are highly valued. As in every craft there are the good and bad, and radio reporting in the editorial manner can claim no exemption from extremist tendencies of those with a flair for the sensational.

TALK TURNS TO KENNEDY

Wherever commentators congregate the discussion invariably turns to the breach of confidence committed by Edward Kennedy of the Associated Press who broke the first official news of the surrender. Not one of those we chatted with condoned the ethical transgression of the correspondent who scooped his confreres.

The radio crowd is thankful it was not one of theirs who broke the faith. They can point to a clean record of never having violated a confidence, and with them ethics is a sacred obligation not to be loosely regarded, whatever the cost or reward.

There was some talk that Kennedy may be excoriated by the Press Club here in a resolution defending the craft against any general opinions as to mistrust of confidence.

The exodus of commentators to their home grounds will be greatly accelerated over the weekend, and remainder of the meet will be covered mostly by straight newscasters. Few have masked their disappointment at the lack of privileged news, but now that they have the picture in their minds they can make their own deductions miles from Civic Center and fill themselves in on what they've missed on other political fronts.

Valentino Pic Made Modern With Sound

"The Eagle," Rudolph Valentino starrer, opens a run at the Studio and Grand theatres tomorrow. Picture has been modernized with new musical score and sound effects for reissue.

METROPOLITAN GETS MILLION DOLLAR

Charles P. Skouras, Mike Rosenberg of Principal Theatres, and Sherrill Corwin. Metropolitan also operates the Orpheum, Rialto, Newsreel and News Palace theatres downtown. It also had the Tower in its string for many years until Blumenfeld, several months ago, entered into a new lease for the property upon expiration of Metropolitan's deal July 1.

Harry Popkin, who owns both the Million Dollar building and real estate as well as other local theatre properties, is understood to be planning to devote more of his time to production of pictures and less to exhibition.

Levy Gets Reynolds

Marjorie Reynolds, of Paramount, will be featured in "Trail Town," Jules Levy production for United Artists release, on a loan-out deal.

SEVEN PCT. LEAP IN BO SEEN WITH CURFEW'S END

ing programs that will run past the former midnight deadline. Patronage that has been lost by people who figured they wouldn't see a complete program, including shorts and newsreels, if attending a theatre after 8:30 p.m., will be regained and account for added weekly receipts.

$14,000 PICKUP

Biggest boost will go to Loew's State and the Los Angeles. These houses lost up to $14,000 a week when curfew was started. Both started around-the-clock operation last night, but whether after-midnight receipts will measure up to pre-February days will not be known until new bills open.

National Theatres circuit lost approximately $75,000 weekly during the time the midnight curfew was in effect, according to Charles P. Skouras, president.

Fox West Coast is the largest operator of swing-shift show houses, having 16 in the metropolitan Los Angeles area. Four of these, United Artists, Egyptian, Chinese and Guild, are open all night only on Saturdays. Warners resumes Saturday night late swing-shift shows at its Hollywood theatre this weekend, and midnight shows will be reinstalled at the Downtown and Wiltern on same night.

BROADWAY REVISES SKEDS

New York, May 9.—With the lifting of the curfew tonight, Broadway film theatres revised schedules as far as possible. Some had shows running well past midnight, while others ran not much later than 12:30 a.m. or so. The Paramount and the Roxy did not add an extra show, but pushed up their schedules so that the break did not come until after midnight. The Capitol put on a complete late show at 11 p.m.

Strand's schedule was revised to get in an extra screening of the feature film and did not close until 1:30 a.m.

First night of the curfew repeal provided plenty of trouble for bonifaces. Nitery operators were faced with the prospect of barring Naval personnel at midnight while allowing Army men on the premises.

Navy Department so far has failed to rescind orders barring gobs after midnight. A Navy spokesman said that while an order may come through momentarily, the ukase forbidding Navy men in niteries after 12 o'clock still applies. S.P.'s were on duty in front of the late spots.

The Army rescinded the midnight ban shortly after Washington announced lifting of the curfew.

FRISCO SEES ADDED 10G

San Francisco, May 9.—San Francisco and Bay area theatres are looking forward to recouping a portion of the box office coin lost during the curfew. Box offices here remained open tonight anywhere from midnight until 2 a.m. in a hasty readjustment of schedules. Exhibitors, both independent and major, in this area state that lifting of the edict will mean an additional $10,000 or thereabouts weekly in grosses.

NLRB ORDERS ELECTION OF DECORATORS IN 30 DAYS

can not determine whether board is ordering an industry-wide election or individual balloting at the nine major studios.

Meacham said that wire received yesterday indicated that separate bargaining units were to be established for each lot, but that this might be clarified to call for one industry-wide unit. He said when the text is received he will confer with Conference of Studio Unions tops and IATSE representatives to fix a date for the balloting, etc. Order specifies election shall be held within 30 days and fixed eligibility of current workers as on payrolls immediately preceding May 7. All striking decorators also are eligible.

HOW MANY CAN VOTE

There has been considerable difference of opinion as to the number of workers employed to replace the strikers. One producer representative said the number would not exceed 30 because of slowed production, but others indicated the IATSE would seek to qualify a larger number. Both sides are expected to challenge, with the Conference contending current employes are not qualified decorators and hence ineligible to vote. The IATSE is expected to challenge votes of striking decorators on the ground their employment has been terminated by the major companies.

QUESTION OF ELIGIBILITY

In ordering the election, NLRB made the following statement:

"We are of the opinion that the questions of representation which have arisen can be most expeditiously resolved by directing an immediate election. However, a serious issue regarding eligibility has been raised. On March 12, 1945, during the hearing, a strike of set decorators was called by the painters, which was still current at the close of the hearing.

"At the oral argument contentions were made that since the hearing some, if not all, of the strikers either have been properly discharged or validly replaced by other workers. The question arises, therefore, whether we can now definitely rule upon the eligibility of the persons who went on strike or of their replacements. We shall direct immediate elections in which both the set decorators who struck on March 12 and replacement workers will be presumptively eligible to vote, subject to the right of challenge."

Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, indicated petition for review might be filed if current workers are permitted to ballot. Producers and the IATSE immediately announced their willingness to abide by the NLRB decision.

PRODUCERS PLEASED

Statement of major producers follows:

"We are gratified that the National Labor Relations Board has rendered its decision in the controversy involving the set decorators. From the beginning we have recognized the NLRB as the final determining agency that can settle that dispute, and repeatedly have gone on record that we would abide by its decision, whatever that decision might be.

"Before the strike took place we requested all the unions involved to await the NLRB decision. Had the unions taken this attitude no strike would have been called, our employes would not have lost $2,000,000 in wages, and the motion picture industry would not be in the throes of a current bitter jurisdictional dispute."

BREWER SPEAKS FOR IA

Roy Brewer, international representative, issued the following statement for the IATSE:

"On the basis of information which has been received by telegram from Washington, I have been informed that a decision has been made by the National Labor Relations Board involving the set dressers.

"In answer to the question of what the position of the IATSE will be with respect to this decision, it is impossible to give a definite answer until we have had an opportunity to read the text of the decision. However, the IA reiterates its position that the National Labor Relations Board is the proper agency to decide such an issue, and that it is our intention to abide by its decision in the matter. We wonder if Mr. Sorrell will."

Sorrell, before strike was called, announced he would abide by the decision of the NLRB, War Labor Board or any other duly constituted government agency. He ordered the strike of decorators when producers refused to abide by a decision of a WLB arbiter directing that Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421 be recognized as the bargaining agency for decorators.

The NLRB election will give the decorators an opportunity to vote whether they desire to be represented by Local 1421, by Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 of the IATSE or by no union.

Board ordered set controllers and set estimators eliminated from decorator bargaining unit, holding they properly belonged with clerical group. They were associated with Screen Office Employes Guild, but collarites had agreed to surrender jurisdiction to Local 1421.

CARPENTERS CALL MEET

Studio Carpenters Local 946 voted last night for a special called meeting for 10 a.m. Sunday at Hollywood Legion Stadium. At that time they will vote on a proposal to picket six days a week instead of three, as currently, with a $5 fine for failure to picket.

Old Fashioned

You've heard it many a time —"If I got a break like that I'd faint dead away." Well, it actually happened yesterday to Olga San Juan at Paramount. When the 18-year-old Puerto Rican song and dance lovely was told by Producer Joe Sistrom that she had been assigned a feature role in "Blue Skies" and Irving Berlin added that it offered a chance for stardom she fainted.

FOUR IATSE LOCALS CONDEMN WALSH SEIZURE OF 44

Four IATSE locals representing approximately 4,000 film workers have adopted a joint resolution condemning action of Prexy Richard Walsh in seizing control of Local 44 and calling for immediate return of union to membership. Resolution was approved by general membership of Film Technicians Local 683 last Sunday and was presented to membership of Costumers Local 705 and boards of International Photographers Local 659 and International Sound Technicians Local 695 last night.

Resolution states:

"We believe that the international president should not have invoked the emergency clause in the case of Local 44. The taking over of a local of the IATSE without sufficient reason endangers the autonomy of every local in the Alliance.

"We further believe the best interests of the International Alliance will be served by an immediate return of Local 44 to the control of its membership. We further believe that any members charged with the infraction of international or local laws should be tried before a tribunal established within the structure of local autonomy."

It was reported last night that leaders of the four big IA locals would appear for the defense tonight when four members of Local 44 are scheduled to face trial before Roy Brewer, Alliance international representative. Those cited for trial are Irwin P. Hentschel, Gene Mailes, Jess Sapp and Robert Ames. Charges were preferred after membership of Local 44 forced a meeting and voted not to take over jobs of studio strikers.

RECENTLY incorporated as a non-profits organization, The Musicians Congress Company has set up offices to begin an idealistic chore. Purpose of the group is to popularize music by disseminating various types of cleffings among the musical groups representing both jazz and classics. To the jive crowd, MCC will try to disperse interest in everything from symphonies to chamber music. At the same time, the longhairs will be hypoed to pay attention to the boogie rhythms and hot licks. Ultimately it is the goal of the organization to hold concerts with both types of music and their backers represented. Their belief is that once the musicians themselves are interested then the music lovers will take up the swing, creating appreciation of all types of music among the factions that now appear to be at each others' throats—figuratively and tunefully speaking.

METRO'S "Without Love" is being cited now as an evidence that a play can miss on Broadway and still score as a picture. "Without Love" was a fair success as a stage show, but nothing to write home about. MGM picked it up (for much less, incidentally, than they would have had to pay for a season's hit) as a good, screenable story vehicle for Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn. Now the film is piling up gratifying grosses wherever shown. Producer Larry Weingarten insists that not every hit show makes a good picture and that just because the limited legit audiences don't go all out for a play doesn't rule it out as a film possibility.

V-E DAY apparently is having strong effect upon thinking of producers. Number of them in various studios report that in the few days since German surrender to Allies, stories which before sounded very good and some which were deemed excellent picture properties now either no longer interest them or at best are regarded with luke-warm enthusiasm. Because of this new feeling, producers are becoming more cagey in dealing with story properties handed them by studios as prospective productions, and new cycles entirely may accrue from peace in Europe.

B'WAY RESUMES MIDNIGHT SHOWS TO RECOUP 100G A WK.

New York, May 10.—Broadway is out to get back the $100,000 weekly the first-runs lost during the curfew. All theatres, including the Music Hall, are resuming their midnight shows over the weekend. Music Hall and Roxy each lost $15,000 last weekend because they eliminated owl shows.

Plaint of the niteries is that people are having to be re-educated to later hours all over again and it will be the end of this week before any beneficial upbeat will be noted in the night spots.

First night of operation after lifting of curfew resulted in no terrific upswing, just good Wednesday night business.

Talent agencies report contract readjustments to higher salaries, most pacts having included an automatic raise effective with lifting of curfew.

Acts not under such arrangement are demanding more dough because of added shows. Some higher priced acts are displeased at the ending of the midnight shuttering. They would rather forego the extra money and enjoy the comparative ease of only two shows.

Flame of the West

MONOGRAM RELEASE. Producer, Scott R. Dunlap. Director, Lambert Hillyer. Screenplay, Adele Buffington, Based on a magazine story by Bennett Foster. Photography, Harry Neumann. Production manager, Bobby Ray. Assistant director, Eddie Davis. Recording engineer, Glen Glenn. Film editor, Dan Milner. Art director, E. R. Hickson. Musical director, Frank Sanucci. Wardrobe, Harry Bourne. Set dressing, Vin Taylor.

PREVIEWED at the studio, May 10, 1945. Running time: 70 MINS.

Monogram has extended itself on "Flame of the West" to rate it as acceptable western fare for smaller situations usually booking so-called feature pictures. Scott R. Dunlap has given "Flame" better production values than usually found in western yarns and more script care has been used to earn it its classification as an outdoor feature.

The Adele Buffington screenplay, based on a magazine story by Bennett Foster, deals with a doctor, newly arrived in a lawless western town, and how he prefers to heel rather than kill. The doctor has laid aside his guns in favor of a pill bottle after killing the wrong man somewhere in his past. This refusal to wear guns brands him as a coward until the finale when they are strapped on again to finish the cleaning-up job started by the town marshal.

Plot revolves around the doctor, a saloon hostess, a fighting man imported by honest citizens to establish law and order, and the evil element that preys on fun-starved cowboys seeking relaxation after bringing their herds to town for market shipment. Lambert Hillyer's direction occasionally allows the pace to lag, but overall results are considerably better than slam-bang action motivation found in usual western release.

Johnny Mack Brown does a forthright job of the medico. Joan Woodbury is excellent as the dancehall gal. Raymond Hatton, town character; Douglass Dumbrille, the two-gun marshal; Harry Woods, chief heavy, contribute good work. Lynne Carver doesn't add much to the heroine role.

Technical credits are all expert, including Harry Neumann's photography, etc. Pee Wee King and his Golden West Cowboys are spotted in for typical western ballads, and Miss Woodbury sings one solo for added production values.

Whiteman Will Do Gershwin Salute

New York, May 10.—In a chore similar to the one in which he spearheaded Universal's "Can't Help Singing," Paul Whiteman is repeating his ballyhoo for Warners "Rhapsody In Blue." In the Universal film, maestro paid tribute to Jerome Kern. For "Blue" he will salute George Gershwin at a teeoff luncheon Tuesday at the Astor hotel. Whiteman will be backed by an impressive music committee which includes Walter Damrosch, Leonard Bernstein, Richard Rodgers, Alexander Smallens, Gladys Swartout, Morton Gould and others.

Springtime In Texas

MONOGRAM RELEASE. Associate producer, William Strohbach. Director, Oliver Drake. Original screenplay, Frances Kavanaugh. Photography, William A. Sickner. Musical director, Frank Sanucci. Film editor, William Austin. Recorded by Glen Glenn. Assistant director, Bobby Ray.

CAST—Jimmy Wakely, Dennis Moore, Lee "Lasses" White, Marie Harmon, Rex Lease, Pearl Early, Horace Murphy, I. Stanford Jolley, Hal Taliaferro, Budd Buster, Lloyd Ingraham, Callahan Brothers and their Blue Ridge Mountain Folks, Johnny Bond, Frankie Marvin.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, May 10, 1945. Running time: 56 MINS.

"Springtime In Texas" also is election time, according to the plot of this oater. Jimmy Wakely, Dennis Moore and Lee "Lasses" White become involved in a mayorality election in a small western town, and before the shooting's over effect a cleanup of the bad element and seat an honest mayor. Plentiful prairie ballads are sprinkled throughout, and Wakely warbles effectively. He's also improved slightly in the acting department. Moore enacts the more vigorous role of the trio, and White takes care of the comedy.

Involved in the heroics are Budd Buster, honest candidate running against Horace Murphy, incumbent and tool of the town's crooks. Latter are headed by Rex Lease, who has such henchmen as Bob Barron, Hal Taliaferro and I. Stanford Jolley to aid in the dirty work.

The Callahan Brothers and their Blue Ridge Mountain Folks support Wakely on the musical side, and Johnny Bond and Frankie Marvin are in for a spot of singing comedy. JUDGE SPLITS UP ROYALTIES ON 'PAPER DOLL'

New York, May 10.—Judge Edward Conger in Federal court today ruled that Harry S. Woonnell, as administrator of the estate of the late Johnny S. Black, composer of "Paper Doll," and Mattie Shanks are entitled to share equally in royalties under the original copyrights. Sally Black Waldo and Mrs. Shanks are entitled to share equally in renewal copyright royalties. E. B. Marks was ruled to be the renewal copyright owner and publisher of song.

The suit originally was brought by Marks against three claimants to determine who owns the royalties which Marks deposited with the court. Sum amounted to $20,000, of which $15,000 was shared by Woonnell and Mrs. Shanks.

Mrs. Shanks, Black's first wife, contended she wrote the song originally and that Black made an agreement with her that in event of either's death, the survivor would take all. The court refused to recognize this agreement.

(CBS News Analyst)

San Francisco, May 10.—Japan, read, weep and ponder. The U. S. has never sent against you so far any more than 650,000 to 1,000,000 men at a time and yet we are 325 miles from the home islands. We fought you with our left hand. The Allies had 10 to 13 million men against Germany in the final drive. Of these four million were Americans. U. S. alone is planning to send against you six million plus all the others. You can muster five million, maybe somewhat more, against us. The answer is plain. It will take time but "hoo nana wahui" in Hawaiian—"time will take care of that."

RADIO COMEDY IN BIG DIVE DURING V-E PERIOD

Latest advance Hooperatings for Tuesday, May 1, indicate that comedy took a beating in favor of news interest, with the hypoing of the then imminent V-E Day. Bob Hope's dropoff was 4.6, bringing him down to 26.9. Gabriel Heatter, however, racked up a score of 21.5, showing a gain of 5.6.

Ginny Simms hit 11.2, with a rise of 1.4, and "One Man's Family" netted an 0.5 hike to hit 7.2. Fibber McGee and Molly dipped to 26.9, losing 2.3, and Roy Rogers' airshow lost 1.0 to register 5.2.

First 15 programs in listening power on the Pacific coast for March-April period were headed up by Bob Hope, Fibber McGee and Molly, and Gildersleeve, in that order, according to Hooper reports. Others in order were as follows: Screen Guild Players, Fannie Brice, Charlie McCarthy, Abbott and Costello, Hildegarde, Walter Winchell, Mr. District Attorney, Radio Theatre, Aldrich Family, Eddie Bracken show, Duffy's Tavern and Jack Benny (4-4:30 p.m.).

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

"Too Hot For Maneuvers" opened at the Broadhurst. . . . And it was too bad for Broadway AND Richard Arlen who chose for his legit debut this tasteless, unfunny comedy by Les White and Bud Pearson, two radio writers, who have done better in the past by Eddie Cantor, Al Jolson and Orson Welles. The mystery of why Dick allowed himself to be seen in such an unmistakably bad play was explained to me by the embarrassed actor himself. According to him, the play that we first nighters saw on the stage of the Broadhurst was NOT the play he had agreed to do when he read the original script. To quote Dick: "During rehearsals the authors were constantly experimenting with the script, making it more over the border with each re-write job. But according to the rigid rulings of the Authors' Guild, and by the terms of my contract with Equity, I had to see it through." Dick also added that he isn't discouraged by this first fiasco, but will do another play, if and when a good script turns up. I'd advise 21 year old producer, Jimmy Elliott, to return to acting for George Kaufman until he can do the same!"

"MASSEY'S IN THE COLD, COLD CASH": Michael Powell and Eric Pressburger, enroute back to England, are hoping to close a deal with Raymond Massey to play second lead to Roger Livesey in the original they wrote with Massey in mind for the 100% American (despite his Canadian birth) in "A Matter of Life and Death." There are two big IFs, however, before the contract can be signed. (a) Massey has to get an okay from Warner Bros. to whom he is under commitment for a picture this summer —an (b) Powell and Pressburger have to promise him three months for an overseas USO tour in either one of two plays, "Abe Lincoln In Illinois" or "Our Town." Both Jed Harris and Bob Sherwood are anxious to present these plays in the West End, and Massey has agreed to consider both of them for commercial production after his own volunteer tour, providing that all proceeds go to the Red Cross or some specified charity. If all negotiations on this end go through, Massey will Clipper to London for an Aug. 15th starting date, and return after the first of the year to direct and act opposite Ingrid Bergman in Maxwell Anderson's "Girl of Lorraine" for the Playwrights. His Missus, Dorothy, will remain here to spend the summer holidays with her two offspring and the two English children, now sharing their home.

EXCLUSIVELY YOURS: Wendy Barrie will become Mrs. David Myers in three weeks, with Hizzoner tieing the knot in a civil ceremony at City Hall. . . . Edward Stevenson is at the Plaza. . . . Bert Wheeler gets another chance at a radio spot of his own when he replaces Buddy Grant on the "Seven Up" show via Mutual in two weeks. . . . The F.B.I. has asked the 20th-Fox publicity department to soft pedal any inside info on "Now It Can Be Told," currently shooting here. . . . Enid Markey will soon be Hollywood-bound again to recreate her original role in "Snafu," while her groom, Major Ty Cobb continues a patient at the Pawling General Hospital. . . . If Gilbert Miller could drop as much weight as he does options, he'd be a happy man! The latest play he's cancelled off his schedule is Clifford Goldsmith's "Mr. Cooper's Left Hand." And now no one on his staff knows what Mr. Miller's Right Hand is doing next! . . . When John Lund quits the cast of "Hasty Heart," June 1, to check in at Paramount, there's a good chance his first assignment will be to hero opposite Dorothy Lamour, which should make Dotty the most envied gal on the lot!

DISSA AND DATA: Glenn Anders, Lily Darvas and Freda Inescort will only stick with "Soldier's Wife" for its Boston engagement, but Martha Scott, against her doctor's advice (she has a blood count of 98) will continue in the fall for a road tour of one night stands. . . . Ruby Schinasi may beat her daughter "Bubbles" to the altar, if Dr. Lionel Auster, eldest brother of Islin, has his way. . . . Now that Tony Stanford has completed his chore of setting up the television department in the J. Walter Thompson offices here, he "Chiefs" back to his "pretty Peggy" on Linden Drive, leaving Norman Rosen, former commercial cameraman, just out of the army, in charge here. . . . Tony's co-worker, Joe Bigelow, follows soon when the RCA etherizer switches to the coast for a summer airing. . . . With their separate careers dividing them by a continent, Peggy Knudsen and Adrian Samish have finally concluded that their three year marriage can't survive, and Mrs. S. will file suit for "incompatability" in the Cal. courts. . . . Helmut Dantine is the reason for that sidewalk bulge outside of the Hotel Gotham. . . . As soon as Henry Morgan (who was on his way to becoming one of the funniest guys in radio, when he heard that "Melody in 1A") gets his medical discharge from Bed 8, Ward 18, Mitchell Field Hospital, he'll be heading for the coast to make a series of shorts called, "Things I've Stolen from Robert Benchley"—with the permission of Robert Benchley.

SCENE NIGHT AND DAY: Francis Lederer, Herb Fields, Judith Evelyn, Belle Baker, Ginny Simms, Martha Hodge, Kathleen Winsor, Harry Sosnik, Edith Van Cleve, Jacqueline Susann and Manny Sachs (who is even beginning to LOOK like Sinatra!) welcoming Hildegarde back to the Persian Room. . . . Bill Pine and Bill Thomas hurrying to the Plaza to condole with Dick Arlen on the brutal notices of "Too Hot for Maneuvers." . . . Arlean Whelan and Hugh Owen, still at the hand holding stage in the Cotillion Room of the Pierre. . . . Memo to Bianca and Jimmy Stroock: that lovely eye-full lunching with Ray Milland at the Waldorf was your eldest chic, Gloria.

LARRY WILLIAMS IS NAMED SPU PREZ, SUBBING MAYO

Larry Williams has been named acting president of Screen Players Union to fill post vacated by resignation of Prexy Harry Mayo. Eddie Nunn has been elected acting veepee, replacing Roy Brent, also resigned, and Don Wayson as secretary in place of Lee Powell, who resigned with other officers. Jack Paul was named treasurer, succeeding Mike Jeffers, who quit office to devote entire time to duties of business representative.

Resignation of former officers, as well as election of new ones by SPU board of directors, will come up for ratification at general mass meeting scheduled for Woman's Club of Hollywood Monday night. Resignations followed difference with Jeffers and other board members over phraseology of proposed constitution and by-laws.

Board adopted an amendment to the proposed constitution reading, "The business representative shall have charge of the business affairs of the union." It was adopted by a vote of 11 to 6. After vote was tallied Brent handed in his resignation, followed by Mayo and Powell. They claimed Jeffers was being set up as a dictator and that board would become merely a rubber stamp.

BEEFS OF HUNGRY PUT BEEF ON THE FRISCO MENUS

San Francisco, May 10. — The State Department, after hearing growls and beefs about inability of UNCIO's officially accredited visitors to get food of nutritious quality in their hotels, took the OPA to task. After meeting of 15 official hotel heads with representatives of the government bodies, the inns were allowed five extra red points for each guest.

This is twice the allowance permitted in the past to hotel guests. It will be continued with official hotel registrations being checked by OPA for continuation of these points during the conference. The average increase for these hotels is about 125%, with increases ranging from 69% to 179% of normal allowance.

Though beef is scarce and pork is short, hotel men feel they now can serve menus that will please their guests, and even put a slab of butter on the table, which has not been done to date.

FRISCO TURNING TO UNDERCOVER GAIETY

By JACK HELLMAN

San Francisco, May 10.—This dateline capital of the world turns on its best smile Monday with the same dutiful devotion that muffled its emotions in reverence to the passing of President Roosevelt. On Monday morning, which marks end of the 30-day period of national mourning, flags will be hauled to full staff and the town, which is zealously proud of its hospitality, swings into gay and festive spirit for remainder of the United Nations Security Conference, now slated for washup around June 1.

The carnival spirit will pervade the bright spots, but there will be no outward manifestation of such light-heartedness. Even before the President's death the State Department had decreed a solemnity in keeping with the seriousness of the world problems being resolved by UNCIO. There will be no bunting or flags draped across wires or light standards, and to all outward appearances the town will look much the same as it has for the past three weeks. There had been some talk of pageants, festivals, military spectacles and the like, but the Staters ruled otherwise, and they're the ones running this show.

Only decorations okayed were those in the area of the conference, and these were kept to a dignified minimum. The proposal of pageantry with all nations participating was trumbed under fast. Private home parties will be more numerous, and if all the invitations received by Anthony Eden could be passed around there would be enough to take care of all the visiting firemen. It was suggested by a gal connected with the mayor's committee that delegates in search of an esthetic thrill might attend the art exhibits and she would be glad to arrange it. The town is full of information booths but try and get the info you want. We made no less than 15 calls to find out about the entertainment agenda for the ensuing weeks, but couldn't get past the secretaries. Everybody seems to be out big-shotting it away from their offices. For organized confusion this is topside. There must be no less than a couple of hundred guys stéering the local end of the confab for the city and Chamber of Commerce, but it takes more than a telephone or a pair of legs to reach them.

Today's big event with the Palace hotel crowd, press and radio, was the press conference with Anthony Eden. More than 800 crowded into a room that ordinarily holds half that number, and most of the reporters took their notes standing up. He's quite a likeable chap and when he turns on that smile it has a withering effect on his critics. He parried questions about India and Poland with finesse, and dodged some of the tougher ones with, "I thought everybody got that," or "Didn't I make that clear?" Eden had a secretary standing by to run interference and to give him more time to phrase his answers. He has a showmanly instinct that has helped make him such a popular figure here and at home and is the answer to the femme's cry for glamor with their statesmanship.

JUDGE SEZ PIX NOT UTILITY

evidence a letter from Paramount to Jake Jones, Shawnee indie theatre operator, written in 1934. Judge Vaught declared that "if it's come to a point in this country where a company can't write a simple letter to a customer . . . I can't see where the letter is competent. Griffith Amusement Co. is not a public utility. It isn't selling gas or electricity. The letter simply shows that Paramount found it best to do business with Griffith. It is not binding on the defendants."

COMPETITION CALLED VITAL

To which Wright replied: "If the Sherman Anti-Trust Act applies to motion pictures, and the Supreme Court has ruled it does, it means that moving pictures must be distributed competitively if there is going to be any opportunity for independent operators to survive or compete with chain theatres." Wright declared that "in view of the position that has been taken" he may discontinue offering testimony of independent theatre operators and start offering documentary evidence.

DISTRIBS NOT ON TRIAL

Judge Vaught from the bench today said: "The distributors are not on trial." At the time Judge Vaught made his statement Wright was introducing contracts between Griffith chains and motion picture distributing companies. He was attempting to show that wording of contracts was in violation of Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Wright said that due to certain of these contracts, the independent theatre operators of Plainview, Tex., were left without pictures.

"That was due," Judge Vaught said, "to a combination of circumstances, as I see it. All such cases are due to a combination of circumstances."

"The government never intends to say the illegal restrictions it intends to cite here, alone, caused any exhibitor to go out of business," Wright countered, "but," he continued, "the government does maintain that the contracts are restrictive because the distributors gave Griffith such favorable terms."

Suit, which was filed more than five years ago, seeks to dissolve Griffith Amusement Co., and Consolidated Theatres, Inc., of Oklahoma City, and R. E. Griffith Theatres, Inc., and Westex Theatres, Inc., of Dallas, Tex., because of alleged violation of the anti-trust act.

script to be written by Robert Sherwood. He talked to Secretary of State Stettinius while here last, and would like official commentaries, historical clips, etc., incorporated in the film.

Zanuck's thought is to make it an international picture, and he will endeavor to enlist various foreign government chiefs to cooperate in the filming project. Story, it is said, would carry through the life of Roosevelt as his film, "Wilson," did with Woodrow Wilson, and bring it to a climax with FDR's plan of world security being achieved.

With Molotov gone, the highlight of the day was the purchase of a $500 Eisenhower bond by Secretary of State Stettinius from an American Woman's Volunteer Service gal in front of cameras and newsreels in the Veterans Memorial building this morning.

Stettinius told the press he looks for another four weeks of toil before the United Nations Conference on International Organization completes its chores. Others think it might be concluded by the end of this month.

Then there is speculation that, with Anthony Eden going home shortly, President Truman, Winston Churchill and Josef Stalin may come into the picture and unloosen a lot of knotty problems that have been too difficult for the boys here. That might slow up matters a bit as to the final draft of a security pact.

With the Argentina delegation not arriving as figured today, the newsmen, reelers and radio boys had a routine day of conferences and a cocktail session, wherever they were of a mind to stop in at one hotel or another. These parties are welcomed after the boys trudge up and down the hills all day.

FOUR IA DEFENDANTS CHALLENGING WALSH TRIAL

Right of Prexy Richard Walsh, Roy Brewer or any other IATSE international officer to try four members of Local 44 was challenged last night when Irwin Hentschel, Jesse Sapp, Gene Mailes and Robert Ames were cited for hearing on charges of "acting against the best interests of the Alliance." On eve of trial, Russell McKnight, prexy of Film Technicians Local 683, declared the trial and fate of Local 44 was a "test case for all IATSE studio workers and locals."

In a statement distributed to the 1,500 members of Local 683, McKnight stated in part:

"Considerable tension in the ranks of IATSE studio locals centers about the coming trial of four members of IA Property Local 44. Since this local has been taken over by orders of International President Richard Walsh and is hence deprived of any autonomous rights, the trial will be conducted before the international president or his personal representative, Roy Brewer. These four men are officially charged with acting against the best interests of the Alliance, disregard of IA Local 44 orders, etc., and unofficially charged with having 'subversive purposes.' Upon close examination, however, their crimes can be boiled down to one; namely, a flat refusal to perform the work of striking unionists.

WARRED ON SCABBING

"Why these men were singled out is plain; they formed a committee to rally better than 300 or 400 IA workers who had refused, when requested, the demand to aid in breaking the strike by filling strikers' jobs. They organized a mass meeting against the wishes of the IA in order to gain support for their opposition to strikebreaking tactics, and currently are campaigning against the executive board of Local 44 and its business agent, Cappy DuVal, which ordered the men to 'scab' and then, when the rank and file rebelled, asked the IATSE to exercise 'emergency control.'

'TEST CASE'

"Their trial and the fate of Local 44 thus becomes a test case for all IATSE studio workers and locals. This is doubly true because, according to the very best efforts to ascertain the feelings of studio IA rank and file opinion, from 90% to 95% of the membership object to doing work other than their own. Nearly as large a percentage have publicly expressed their opposition to 'invasion' of the jobs of unionists on the picket lines."

Representatives from several of these locals were scheduled to appear in defense of the four IA members. Scores of witnesses have been called by the defense, which will show that charges were preferred by the international and that the rank and file of Local 44 was not consulted. Brewer was scheduled to head the trial, Walsh being absent in the east.

MEACHAM WILL CALL MEET TO SKED DECORATORS VOTE

Date for election of studio set decorators will be fixed at a conference of film labor tops to be called the first of next week, probably Monday or Tuesday, by Stewart Meacham, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board. Producer representatives also will sit in, since they will have to certify as to the eligibility of strike replacements who will ballot, as well as decorators on the picket lines.

Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions; Ed Mussa, business representative of Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421, and Attorney Frank Pestana will appear for the striking decorators. Roy Brewer, Cappy DuVal and Attorney Michael Luddy are expected to represent the IATSE, with Fred Pelton appearing for the producers.

Principal discussion is expected to be over proper bargaining unit, with both sides reserving the right to challenge votes of the other. This will be particularly true of strike replacements, with Sorrell demanding proof of their qualifications as set decorators. Separate election will be conducted at each of the nine major studios.

GREEN CRITICIZES WALSH

William Green, prexy of the American Federation of Labor, here as guest at a dinner of southern California teamsters at the Beverly-Wilshire hotel, was drawn into the studio strike yesterday when he criticized Richard Walsh, IATSE prexy, for issuance of charters in other union jurisdictions. Green confirmed reports that the AF of L executive council had directed that Walsh revoke charters issued for painters and carpenters, adding, "I sincerely hope our recommendations will be favorably acted upon." Green previously had declared:

"Mr. Walsh's action in giving charters to carpenters, machinists and painters in the Hollywood film strike situation was outside the jurisdiction of the IATSE. The issuance of the charters was a violation of our laws and rules, and I firmly believe those charters will be revoked and that no others will be issued."

Action of AF of L places Walsh and the IATSE international in an awkward spot, since to refuse would place them in the position of fighting the federation. If charters are pulled, Walsh then will be handicapped in his efforts to recruit men to replace those on the picket lines. In addition, he is facing a rebellion in his own ranks, 90% of his membership turning thumbs down on his orders that they take over jobs of strikers. In addition to refusing to act as strikebreakers, rank and file, together with many top IA studio leaders, have launched a campaign to oust Walsh and his executive board because of their strikebreaking tactics. Even many of those who were opposed to the strike are joining the anti-Walsh group.

ASKS STRONGER PICKETS

Calls to enlarge the picket lines were being sent out yesterday, with Studio Carpenters Local 946 calling a special meeting at the Hollywood Legion Stadium Sunday morning to vote on a proposal to picket six days weekly. In the meantime, undercover moves aimed at settling the walkout were being started again, several urging that William Green, AF of L head, contact opposing labor leaders while on the Coast.

Joseph Padway, attorney for the AF of L, and Dave Beck, Coast head of the teamsters, also were here for the southern California meeting of transportation drivers.

Otherwise there was little strike action yesterday, leaders awaiting the meeting with the NLRB and possible action by Walsh on demand of the AF of L that he revoke carpenters' and painters' charters.

A mass meeting of studio unions has been called for Sunday night at the Hollywood Legion Stadium.

GUILDS CONDEMN IA EMPLOYMENT OF STRIKEBREAKERS

Joint resolution criticizing producers and the IATSE for dismissal of studio workers who refuse to take strikers' jobs and for causing others who refuse to lose their union cards, has been adopted by five big film guilds; headed by the Screen Writers Guild and representing nearly 5,000 artists and workers. Other crafts participating in the resolution are the Screen Office Employes Guild, the Screen Cartoonists Guild, Screen Publicists Guild and Screen Analysts Guild.

At the same time it was disclosed that a special committee is being appointed throughout the industry to fight the action, with possibility that others of the big talent guilds will join in. It was indicated that perhaps 20 or more unions and guilds are expected to join in the campaign.

During discussion of resolution it was made plain that crafts had no intention to meddle in the affairs of a local or international, but that dismissal of men for refusing to take strikers' jobs and jerking of their cards were outside the internal affairs of the international.

1,200 PRINTS OF 'ALL STAR RALLY' BLANKETING U.S.

New York, May 10.—With an all-time industry record of 1,200 prints in work, "All-Star Bond Rally," 19-minute "Showmen's Seventh" War Loan subject, is being enthusiastically acclaimed by theatre audiences and, in advance of the official start of the drive next Monday, it is making itself felt as a potent bond salesman.

Those findings are based on a survey made by the national committee on Thursday of a cross-section of theatres around the country and voluntary expressions received from exhibitors.

'On To Tokyo'

"On to Tokyo" has been adopted by the Southern California theatre war bond committee as the slogan to be used June 6 in 650 Southland theatres staging Free Movie Day.

BEST YET

The subject is scheduled to be shown in more than 16,000 theatres throughout the country during the seven-week period of the Seventh War Loan, which extends to June 30. Tom J. Connors, national distributor chairman for the drive, stated that the film is in great demand following state and local meetings of the drive committees, at which it was screened. Exhibitors have hailed it as the best subject made to date for selling bonds.

Typical of the fast booking of the subject, Burgess Waltmon, exhibitor co-chairman from Mississippi, reports that virtually all theatres in the state served out of Memphis already have booked the film. Some 300 theatres served out of New Orleans have placed bookings.

GOES FAR AS ALASKA

Maurice Saffle, Seattle area distribution chairman, reports the most complete coverage ever obtained for a film in that territory, with bookings worked out for every situation, including a print for Alaska, for the Lathrop and Gross circuits.

He gave a great deal of credit to Gordon Wallinger, Paramount head booker in Seattle, who spent many hours working out bicycling and shipment schedules.

The national committee is asking all theatres to play this subject at every performance. In some instances exhibitors will be asked to re-ship prints to another theatre, to save time.

"All-Star Bond Rally" is being handled for the War Activities Committee through 20th-Fox exchanges nationally, with the distributors' division of the "Showmen's Seventh" and exhibitor chairmen cooperating in lining up dates.

CASHING IN ON NEWS

New York, May 10.—Fast-thinking Byron McElliott, "Showmen's Seventh" War Loan Exhibitor Chairman for South Dakota, put over a good stunt on V-E Day that resulted in selling $24,000 in bonds. Aberdeen, South Dakota, residents were urged to buy bonds commemorating Germany's surrender. All bonds purchased that day to bear the inscription, "Official V-E Day Bond." Bond purchasers received an admission to the Capitol, Orpheum or Lyric theatres. Local front-page newspaper spread resulted, and the Associated Press sent the story over the wire.

Errol, McGuire Leads In RKO Showboat

Leon Errol and Marcy McGuire have the top roles in "Riverboat Rythm," RKO musical scheduled to go before the cameras June 4. Story, with a showboat background, is being produced by Nat Holt under the executive supervision of Jack Gross.

Peer Music For Danes

With liberation of Denmark from Nazi control, Ralph S. Peer, president of Southern Music Company, plans to open office there for presentation of American and Latin-American songs and as outlet for Danish composers. King Christian, now reinstated, is known to be profoundly interested in popular music and young composers are encouraged in the Danish capital, Copenhagen, and other key cities of the Scandinavian country.

RANK INVASION; FILM BARON NOW IN CANADA

dian, Chicago and Minneapolis milling interests until May 30. He then is expected in New York for two weeks and will proceed to Hollywood the latter part of June for conferences with film industry toppers there.

One important job of the scheduled Rank conference may be the consideration of blowing down the beefs of United States film industry representatives over the Rank supply of raw film.

With the raw film situation the major production headache of the moment, distributors are yelling loudly about the British board of trade prohibition of the export of processed United States prints from England to the European continent, thus are beefing on proposal to give Rank 20 to 25 million feet of raw film for his American releases. According to U. S. industry heads, this "circumvents the orderly process of the WPB in the United States."

George J. Schaefer, film industry liaison man, after a conference with WPB execs, said "the United States film industry is ready to take any raw film cut necessary for military requirements, but not for the benefit of any private enterprise.

"I am certain that the British board of trade doesn't understand the situation over here and hasn't all the facts before it," Schaefer said.

Raw Stock Relief Is In Sight

ONLY STARS CAN SAVE UN SHOW

By ARTHUR UNGAR

San Francisco, May 13.—The script of the United Nations Conference for International Organization has become ragged. Star parts have been eliminated. Petty and serious quibbling is on between the delegates. The stars have to play more important roles in the show, so now they want the Big Five leaders to come here at once and bolster up the doings. Talk is around that Josef Stalin, Winston Churchill, President Harry Truman and General Charles De Gaulle should be here and wind up this shindig in glory.

Secretary of State Edward Stettinius was in Washington over the weekend to inform President Truman of the situation, while Anthony Eden is headed for London to sell Churchill the idea he had better cross the pond. Georges Bidault heads back to Paris this week to induce De Gaulle to personally enter the conference. According to inside sources, the Big Five, which includes Dr. T. V. Soong of China, should be gathered here by June 1.

Though the Argentina delegates have just arrived, they have gotten busy and are reported to have let it be known they're going to wield the big stick in Latin-America. That put

Houseman Leaves Par For OWI European Job

John Housman requested and received a release from his producer ticket at Paramount over weekend to accept OWI post in Europe. Government agency, with which he was associated before coming to Hollywood, has asked him to do special job in Germany for next few months. He leaves here in about a month. During his two years at Paramount, Houseman chalked up "Miss Susie Slagle's" and "The Dahlia" to his producer credit.

Lapinere To Paris

New York, May 13.—Elias Lapinere, Paramount's advertising-publicity chief in Continental Europe, North Africa and Near East Division, left for Paris over weekend. He followed departure of Robert Schless, division head, and Henri Michaud, assistant general manager of Division.

FILM BIZ GUNS 7TH WAR LOAN AS RECORD TOPPER

Sixteen thousand exhibitors, teamed with distributors and allied branches, today launch the film industry's largest War Bond campaign—the Showmen's Seventh. The industry, through its 250,000 workers, has marshalled its full strength to spearhead the overall effort to put over and exceed the Treasury Department's goal of $4,000,000,000 in "E" bonds, as a part of the $7,000,000,000 in sales to individuals and the total objective of $14,000,000,000.

Industry has been fully mobilized through state and local meetings throughout the country and the closely knit organizations effected by all state chairmen. Every indication points to a new high in showmanship under the national chairmanship of Sam Pinanski and his

Le Baron Preps 'Tessie' For First Indie Prod

"Miss Tessie Talks," sensational novel of the nineties by William Spencer Dell, is being prepped by William Le Baron for his first production under a new independent set-up. Jack Shea has been assigned to do research and check newspaper stories of the book which was the subject of controversy towards the end of the last century.

WB Upps Bernard Kopel

New York, May 13.—Joseph S. Hummel, Warners International veepee in Europe and North Africa, has named Bernard Kopel as supervisor of North Africa. Kopel has been Warners manager in Algiers for years but will now headquarter in Paris. Serge Goutmann succeeds Kopel in charge of Algiers office.

Touching Scene

San Francisco, May 13.—The newsreels were all set up to pictorially record the buying of the first United Nations Conference war bond (Eisenhower series) by Edward Stettinius, secretary of state. He fumbled through his pockets for the necessary $375 but had to call on friends to make up the deficit. Frank Fouce, theatre operator in Los Angeles, and Peter Mole, who had charge of the lighting for the conference chambers, unpeeled enough bills to start the cameras grinding. Taking inventory of his remaining cash, Fouce bought the next four of the $500 denominations.

ZANUCK SOUNDS OUT EDEN ON BRIT. PROD

San Francisco, May 13.—Darryl Zanuck was here last Friday on second trip during the week. On first trip he talked with Secretary of State Stettinius with reference to the making of a film based on Franklin D. Roosevelt. The Friday junket was to see Anthony Eden. Zanuck stuck around all day and finally met up with Eden at 6:30, spending half hour with him. After the meeting Zanuck said his talk with Eden was pleasant but nothing could be mentioned.

SMPE OPENS 57TH MEET; TO COVER TECHNICAL ADVANCES

Wanger, as guest speaker, will extend welcome to visiting and local delegates on behalf of the Academy and the film industry. BALANCE MAY BE STRUCK BY '46

Slight easing of the raw film stock situation is expected to start with the allotment of fourth quarter requirements in August, but it probably will be the first of the year before film requirements and production balance. RESOLUTION complimenting the picture industry for the entertainment provided at the legislative dinner in Sacramento May 8 was unanimously adopted by the senate and assembly. Proceeds were given to the Red Cross and the event drew the greatest turnout of legislators and civic leaders in recent years. In the Hollywood contingent of entertainers were Dorothy Lamour, Leo Carrillo, Jess Barker, Marion Bell, Bob Alda, Don McGuire, Vivian Blaine, Rene De Marco, Kirby Grant, Dariel Jean Johnson, Lina Romay, Ernie Barron, Carlos Ramirez, Herriet Lee, Earl Brent and Walter Ruick. Director of the entertainment was Ida Koverman. Resolution introduced by Sen. James McBride of Ventura also directed that copies of the resolution be forwarded to each of the participants. Entertainment was called "of the highest order" and accolade noted that Hollywood had made a real contribution to the Red Cross.

THERE'S enough headachey detail connected with getting a film company on location and keeping it there, even in ordinary times. Under present conditions, of rationing, manpower shortage, transportation priorities, and such the problem is intensified. But Director Clarence Brown thought he had taken care of everything when he took the company shooting MGM's "The Yearling" to Ocala, Fla. Now comes a frenzied telegram to the studio: "Please send one and if possible two laundry workers immediately —by plane if possible." Ocala is hot and humid, laundries in Ocala are way behind on their work and won't guarantee return of laundry under a month's time. Heat and humidity make rapid casualties of the troupe's laundered shirts and underwear and the only answer is to set up a tent laundry for the company—when and if the studio finds the trained laundry workers.

FOR about the third time in the past 10 days studio press agents are putting out copy telling of the trials and tribulations producers are going through in search of a "child actress." One would gather that this producer or that is about to fold up unless he can find what the p.a.'s always refer to as "a suitable moppet." Latest plaint is from Universal where they just can't seem to find a girl between 9 and 12 to play Merle Oberon's daughter in "As It Was Before." All this in a town where there is a determined mother, with a precocious bra—er—moppet by the hand, lurking in virtually every shadow ready to pounce on an unsuspecting agent or producer. One good way to bring the moppet hunt to a successful conclusion would be to have a talent scout stick his head out of the office door and make a noise like a screen test.

NAME familiar to early Hollywood film production will be back on the screens again with the announcement of organization of Sebastian Productions for the filming of a series of three psychological mystery dramas. Head of the outfit is Dave Sebastian, son of the late A. H. Sebastian, who turned out pictures for Producers Distributing Corp, predecessor to RKO. Young Sebastian grew up with the business and acquired a working knowledge of picture production in various departments of major studios. Announcement states that Sebastian Productions is fully financed and plans are being worked out for release of the three pictures. First of the group will be based on the adventures of a fictional character universally known and writers have been assigned to the screenplay.

IN the old rep show days they used to call it "doubling in brass," with the band leader, mebbe, playing "Little Eva" at night and leading the afternoon parade before the performance. Now, George Jessel sees the same thing coming up in sort of reverse in film, following the build-up of Harry James as an actor in 20th-Fox's "Kitten On the Keys." Jessel had a light comedy role written into the script for James and has him playing a character, "Barry Clayton," instead of just being himself as in previous pix. Jessel predicts more and more pictures in the future with band leaders "doubling in bits."

WITH war in Europe finished, it's very likely that number of former Hollywood producers, directors, et al, will soon be released from the services. Headed for discharge, it is understood, is Col. Frank Capra, who will enter upon indie production with Sam Briskin, following recent releases of such men as William Keighley, Sam Briskin, and Frank Lloyd, all of whom had several years in armed forced. Lt. Col. Robert Lord, Major Robert Carson, Major John Huston, and number of others may be in line for discharge, with Army program of training shorts reported on the wane.

THE research department at MGM was getting a hand yesterday following approval expressed by English racing experts of the Aintree scenes in "National Velvet." The Britishers declared the racing shots a perfect reproduction of the Grand National course and added that the picture has captured the atmosphere of the famous steeplechase classic exactly. Andy Ferguson, former ace of American steeplechase riders, was technical advisor on the racing scenes.

THE gals make the movie grade one way and another, but right at the moment it looks as if modelling is the current quick route to a cinema career. Out of 12 girls appearing in 20th Century-Fox's "Diamond Horseshoe" nine were former models. And all nine have been signed to term contracts. Of five girls who had feature roles in "The Dolly Sisters," George Jessel production, three came from the model ranks. These three—Kathy, Downs, Elaine Langan and Savona King—have also been pacted by 20th Century-Fox.

Guests Wild Bill Elliott, Allan Lane, Donald Barry, Robert Livingston, Sunset Carson.

PREVIEWED in Hollywood, May 11, 1945. Running time: 68 MINS.

"Bells of Rosarita" is not only a Roy Rogers starrer, but tosses in Republic's five other western stars, past and present, to make it a cinch for the western market. Wild Bill Elliott, Allan Lane, Donald Barry, Robert Livingston and Sunset Carson take their places as guest stars and are in for a speedy action finish, with Rogers catching up to as many heavies and softening them up for the sheriff. Film is a natural for exploitation purposes, and while formula western, shows classy production values and is fast-paced throughout.

Somewhat different background for a Rogers saddler showcases action here, Roy playing himself—Roy Rogers, Republic western star—and helping the gal save the ranch. It starts on location, where he and company are winding up picture. When some kids ask him to stay and save Dale Evans' ranch and circus from Grant Withers taking over, Rogers gives idea the nod. Other cowboy headliners arrive to appear in Dale's circus, so she can raise sufficient money to pay off a note against ranch.

Rogers warbles usual number of songs, as does Miss Evans, and Robert Mitchell Boychoir and Sons of the Pioneers are in for additional singing interludes. Star's best song is "Gonna Build a Fence Around Texas," and Miss Evans gives out pleasingly with" Under a Blanket of Blue."

George "Gabby" Hayes plays comedy relief with his customary gusto, and Adele Mara and Addison Richards top capable supporting cast. Jack Townley original screenplay is sure-fire for Rogers' fans, and Frank McDonald's direction keeps action moving. Armand Schaefer as executive producer and Eddy White as associate producer have done acceptable job, other departments matching up.

Santell's Hot Tamale

"Mexicana" goes before cameras at Republic tomorrow, with Alfred Santell functioning both as producer and director, his first stint under Republic contract. Constance Moore and Tito Guizar are co-starred, with Leo Carrillo and Jean Stevens topping supporting cast. Leonard Zurit is dialog director on below-the-border musical.

LOEW'S, PAR BURY HATCHET IN NY; BOOKING RESUMES

New York, May 13.—Loew's theatres in the greater New York area start picking up long-beached Paramount pictures on May 31, following settlement of one of the bitterest product deals in the history of the industry. On that date Loew's houses will begin playing two Paramount films on a double bill, "Here Come the Waves" and "Dark Mountain," giving them the long half of the week.

Paramount has been blocked in metropolitan New York and surrounding territory since last October due to inability to get together with Loew's. Latter is reported planning to play off the accumulated product immediately, thus making the pictures available at an early date to many subsequent-run houses screening films behind Loew's.

Paramount, which from the start was insisting on terms which Loew's regarded as too stiff, at one time recently was reported toying with the idea of taking a licking by selling away from Loew's rather than give in to the latter. This nearly occurred three seasons ago when Neil Agnew, then Paramount distribution vice-president, recommended that Loew's be by-passed even if it would cost the company considerable money. At that time, when Par had gone so far as to figure out what its approximate loss would be, Loew's finally capitulated.

Reported that in the deal made last week Paramount obtained terms that were regarded as wholly satisfactory. Company has always been tough with respect to terms.

Total of 23 pictures are involved in the Par deal for exhibition in 62 Loew's houses. Paramount has had no trouble with out-of-town Loew's theatres, which right along have been playing its pictures.

Final negotiations covering greater New York Loew's circuit were concluded by Charles Reagan, Par distribution vice-prexy, and Hugh Owen, company's eastern division manager. Representing Loew's were Charles Moskowitz, vice-prexy in charge of New York operations, and Eugene Picker, head of the buying-booking department.

AIRING OF STATION RECORDS OPPOSED BY BROADCASTERS

Washington, May 13.—National Association of Broadcasters filed with Federal Communications Commission a brief opposing the Commission's projected rule requiring full publicity to all station ownership records. The proposal does not appear to "serve any useful purpose," NAB Counsel John Margan Davis wrote in a brief preparatory to oral argument next Monday (21).

The Commission has failed to show the benefit of such a rule, Davis maintained. Extension of the public inspection rule, now applying to common carriers, into the broadcast field is unjustified, he insisted, "so long as the Commission has full knowledge of such matters," he added, "it is inconceivable to us how any useful purpose will be served by making this material available for public inspection."

Davis pointed out that the Treasury adheres to a rule of secrecy in regard to income tax returns, and suggested that if the FCC were to adopt its proposed rules broadcasters as a class would be denied the protection afforded by the Treasury rules.

"In addition," he wrote, "it would enable competitors to obtain information which might be used to the great disadvantage of the licensee. It would seem highly advantageous to the Commission to have the information it needs supplied freely, without fear on the part of the licensee that such information may be used against it by its competitors."

By RADIE HARRIS

Geraldine Fitzgerald, who has enough play scripts on the desk of her Santa Monica Beach house to help support the paper salvage, is tres interested in a melodrama under the working title, "What of the Night?" co-authored by Ben Roberts and Ivan Goff, even though she's only seen the first two acts. If she puts the final okay on it, look for Gilbert Miller to produce it in the fall. . . . Warner Bros. are trying to tag pretty ingenue Anne Lincoln, currently on the road with "Foxhole In the Parlor," before Broadway discovers her. . . . Now that the brownout is lifted, Bubbles Schinasi has returned to New York to continue those gab sessions until yawning with George Jean Nathan in the Cub Room. . . . That mass migration of all the agents and talent scouts flocking for another gander of "Soldier's Wife," was to o.o. the understudy who went on for Martha Scott during her three days illness. Her name is Louise Horton, and she's been a protege of author, Rose Franken, ever since she first auditioned for "Claudia." . . . Autograph "maroons" who can devise every trick way of getting through to celebs via phone, are pulling a new one on Helmut Dantine at the Gotham. Hep to the fact that he and his ex-bride are still friends, they are using the name of Gwen Anderson!

TRUE OR FALSE? When Patsy Ruth Miller's agent, Dr. Edmond Pauker, brought her an "angel," Alex Cohen, who was all set to finance her play, "The Windy Hill," she sent him over to Ruth Chatterton, whom Pauker, at Pat's insistence, had also sold as producer and star. At the first meeting, Ruthie immediately proceeded to unsell Mr. Cohen on Patsy's play and sewed him up for another play she has under consideration, Aben Kandel's "You Only Twinkle Once." Now Pat is going around humming the lyrics to that tune, "I Had a Friend!"

"AD GLORIA" M: Lt. Jules Epstein, furloughing from Washington at the Barberry Room, confided that he and his brother, Phil, got the idea for the script they have just completed for WB's "Happiness," from a pertinent conversation they overheard by Gloria Vanderbilt, when she was still Mrs. Pat de Cicco. Said Gloria, "First marriages are wonderful!"

ANTI-CLIMAX DEPT.: Gob Gene Kelly, up from Washington to shoot some scenes on a government film at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, made an appearance in the Canteen. After getting writer's cramp from signing autographs for all the swooning hostesses, a young colored girl timedly approached him and exclaimed, "Oh, Mr. Kelly, I am suffering with pleasure to meet you!"

EXCLUSIVELY YOURS: Bette Davis' mother, Ruthie, enroute to Bette's New Hampshire retreat, "Butternut," in Sugar Hill, is tarrying at the Gotham for a few days to try and peddle an outline of a biog on the life of her famous daughter. Says Ruthie, "It isn't a biography in the true literary style—it has no chronological order of events, but rather kaleidoscopic fragments of experiences and ancedotes." Mrs. D., who once helped to support her child by getting a job as a photographer, will illustrate the book with many of her own candid cameras—and knowing that Bette has inherited her complete honesty from her mother, I'll wager the contents will be as CANDID as the likenesses. . . . The last Actors Equity meeting was almost broken up when a life member who hasn't been on the stage for the past 10 years, used the open forum to publicly denounce F.D.R. A "G. I." thespian, who had just returned from overseas, rose to his feet and cried out, "The victory we won is lost!" and rushed out of the room. . . . Add ironies: Kitty Carlisle, who has never been married, will be the Symbol of Motherhood in a short now being made by the Signal Corps! Incidentally, Kitty has definitely thumbed down Jack Wildberg's $2,000 a week offer to succeed Mary Martin in "One Tough Of Venus," to continue her successful night club career. Concluding an eight weeks engagement at the Versailles, she heads next for the Park Plaza in Cleveland. . . . If Claudia Morgan can get Wendy Barrie or Betty Furness to pinch hit for her on the "Thin Man" series, she'll take a summer breather to have a coast reunion with Papa Ralph and Mama Daisy. . . . Ethel Barrymore will be another Hollywood arrival, when she checks in at RKO (31) to discuss her starring role in "Miss Hargraves." She'll air "Miss Hattie" for two shots before discontinuing for a summer layoff. . . . Harriet Parsons, her producer, will report back from her Mad-hattan holiday (18) to finish story preparation and dust off welcome mat. . . . When "Rhapsody In Blue" follows "Corn Is Green" into the Hollywood, wonder whether Charlie Einfeld will hail it as an Irving "Rapper'sody?"

VANGUARD OF H'WD STARS POISED FOR TREK TO EUROPE

Names of seven top personalities were added to the list of volunteers over the weekend, with Philip Dorn, Ann Dvorak, Sonja Henie, Walter Huston, Fibber McGee and Molly and Garry Moore signing up. A list of 24 stars who have responded to the Victory Committee's appeal for recruits to take part in the program in the next six months has been forwarded to the War Department.

Edgar Kennedy, with his wife and daughter, are scheduled to leave today on a four-week GI hospital tour set by HVC. Their USO-Camp Shows route will cover hospitals in Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana and Texas.

A troupe of six Goldwyn Girls will leave tomorrow on a month's tour of the southwest. Members of the group are Karen Gaylor, Marguerite Campbell, Mary Meade, Gloria Delfon, Deannie Best and Beverly Haney. They will appear at 10 Army and Navy hospitals in Texas and three in Arkansas.

Claire Trevor and George Murphy checked in yesterday from a Canadian bond tour, while Anne Baxter is en route to Hollywood after appearing in Canadian bond rallies and a ship launching at Duluth, Minn.

the burn on plenty in the executive committee session on Saturday. Then the Russian boys changed their minds with respect to the matter of trusteeship for territories of the defeated nations. That rankled the boys from Australia, who threw a boomerang into the proceedings, with New Zealand and Canada chiming in. Then the American delegation also had its differences, with John Foster Dulles and his isolationistic precepts clashing with the more modern thoughts of Commander Harold Stassen. The U. S. army men are not in accord with future developments of the security pact, as General Hap Arnold of the Air Force has definite views on bases while the Army ground forces have other thoughts. Felt here that the melee can only be straightened out by the Big Five being on the ground and making authoritative decisions instead of parleying on matters that come up via their delegates.

With the conference going into its fourth week and the mourning period for President Roosevelt over, the city will be bedecked with flags and bunting. Celebrations started today when Standard Oil of California paid the freight for 2,000 news and radio folks for a five-hour trip about the Bay area on the newly christened ferryboat Ernie Pyle, which formerly was the Yerba Buena, loaned by the government for the trip. It was most festive occasion, with food, drinks, dancing, etc. Standard Oil, which has been doing a lot of propagandizing around, had allotted $20,000 for the party, but surprising to all, it cost only $7,500.

First of the formal parties was a reception tonight in the Palace ballroom honoring all of the Arabic delegates. It was by invitation at $15 a head, and about 500 greeted the Pan-Arabic group. Many more of these functions will be held this week, with possibility the State Department will put on a grand banquet for all delegates prior to the windup.

Though meat points had been promised the hotels for conference delegates and guests, none appeared up until today, and the menus still read, "fish and chicken."

The United Nations theatre, which ran successfully all last week to a preview of Hollywood pictures policy, switches to a continuous one tomorrow night. Looks as though a struggle to get trade for this policy will ensue, as the boys handling the theatre have not realized that the workers at this meeting know nothing about early dinners and shows. Trade in general at theatres, restaurants and night spots still is from 25 to 50% off. Seems as though the delegates who are here haven't wads of coin to spend and find too many free shindigs for them where coin outlay is not necessary.

Though talk was around last week the conference might wind up end of this week, report has it that the newspaper, radio reporters and others who departed, will be trekking back again and that when the Big Five take over the stage they and plenty of others will return, clogging up the town again.

EXTRAS BALLOT ON RESIGNATION OF SPU OFFICERS

Future of Screen Players Union as representative of film extras is expected to be determined tonight at general mass meeting of SPU members scheduled for the Woman's Club of Hollywood. All officers of the organization resigned last week because of differences with Business Representative Mike Jeffers over defining the duties of Jeffers and other officers.

Resignations are effective tonight, subject to acceptance by the general membership. Those quitting posts were Prexy Harry Mayo, Veepee Roy Brent, Secretary Lee Powell, and Jeffers, who resigned as treasurer. Retiring officers claimed that Jeffers refused to accept instructions from the board of directors, with both Jeffers and the officers declaring they would not act as rubber stamps.

Adoption of a constitution and by-laws and discussion of proposed minimum wages also are scheduled to come before the gathering. If the resignations of the officers are refused, it was indicated they will then insist that the duties of the business representative be so defined that he will be responsible to the board.

The SPU has been designated by the National Labor Relations Board as bargaining representative for extra work, but there has been considerable division among players as to how they should be represented, with Screen Extras Guild, a rival organization, applying to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America for a charter.

THEATRE EQUIPMENT TO BE AVAILABLE IN WPB MOVE

Washington, May 13.—Although no immediate flood of 35mm. booth equipment will result from it, industry sources were pleased to see that the War Production Board announced that order L-325, governing production and distribution of such equipment, has been revoked. Various materials controls which affect this production were not dropped, however, and there is no likelihood that large-scale production for the civilian market will get under way for some time to come.

This is, however, the first of the orders directly affecting the pix industry to be dropped, and the announcement was greeted here as evidence that the federal government intends to give every possible "break" to the industry.

aides. A definite increase in War Bond premieres, children's matinees and Free Movie Days already has been noted, according to advance reports.

Pinanski declared that as the drive opens the enthusiasm among campaign workers assures success provided "that spirit is aggressively carried into action and the work of selling and promoting bond sales is tirelessly carried on."

Military parades, rallies in theatres with governors, mayors, high officials and war heroes on the stage are scheduled for today in numerous cities. Campaign stress will be on theatres as issuing agencies and networks will frequently use the slogan, "Buy War Bonds At Your Favorite Motion Picture Theatre—Always Open For Bond Sales, Including Sundays, Evenings and Holidays."

Hollywood's motion picture industry sounded its guns today in the opening of the Seventh War Loan, with more than 400 volunteer bond salesmen going into action in all branches of the local film business. Minimum goal is the selling of one extra bond to each wage earner in studios, allied industries, offices of agents, business managers and independent publicists.

Hollywood Motion Picture War Finance Committee starts the Seventh with a record of having sold $93,000,000 worth of bonds to film workers and companies in the three years of constant, all-out effort. Chairman Henry Ginsberg announced that the group's first goal is to reach the hundred million dollar mark by end of the month, leaving the entire month of June to attain a record figure beyond that. Drive officially ends June 30.

Genuine autographs of hundreds of the screen's performers during the past 25 years will be given to bond buyers throughout the nation as a result of plan set up for the Seventh War Loan by Paramount studio. Any person who sends a bond order to the studio between May 14 and June 30 will receive an autograph. Signatures will be available because studio has kept canceled studio paychecks for more than 25 years and they will be cut from the backs of checks and mounted for bond buyers.

Seventh War Loan officially got under way in New York Friday with dedication of a 50-foot statue commemorating the historic flag-raising on Iwo Jima. Some 20,000 persons jammed Times Square and Broadway for the event, which was broadcast over the Blue Network. The three survivors of the flag-raising on Iwo Jima were featured on the broadcast, as was the father of the late Sgt. John A. Basilone, Congressional Medal winner, who was killed on the island. Actual flag raised on Mt. Suribachi was used in the unveiling.

Pidgeon Spurs Rally For Ohio Bondmen

Hollywood's participation in the Seventh War Loan gets under way today when Walter Pidgeon kicks off the Ohio state campaign in a huge rally at Akron. After completing his Ohio appearance, Pidgeon will feature rallies at Milwaukee and Chicago. Five other routes covering principal cities have been scheduled by the Treasury Department for later in the seven-week, $14,000,000,000 drive. Danny Kaye will appear at Buffalo today, and Bill Elliott is set for Delano, Calif., where citizens will try to repeat their Sixth War Loan record by being the first town in the nation to go over its campaign quota.

Par Budapest Branch Back In Biz Again

Communique from Hungary disclosed exchange had been destroyed and several former employes missing. Certain assets have been salvaged, however, so that business can now continue.

Virginia Sale will do a repeat performance of her "Americana," one woman show, at the Wilshire Ebell theatre tomorrow night.

TOKYO AIR BOMBING TO BE SCREENED AT S.F. MEET

San Francisco, May 13.—"Target Tokyo," made by 18th Army Air Forces Base Unit (MPU) of Culver City, will be shown Tuesday at Sir Francis Drake hotel for United Nations delegates and members of the press. Picture, which runs about 20 minutes, shows initial bombing by B-29s of Tokyo.

Major General James E. Parker, commanding general of Fourth Army Air Forces, will appear as personal representative of General Arnold. Among those to be honored on the occasion will be L. S. St. Laurent, MP, Minister of Justice and Attorney General of Canada; Jan Masaryk, Minister of Foreign Affairs of Czechoslovakia, and Henri Bonnet, French Ambassador to U. S.

Event is to be sponsored by United Nations Information Organization. Simultaneous showings will be held in New York, Washington and Los Angeles. RKO will release picture May 24, with 600 theatres throughout country thus far set.

U. S. Puts Microscope On Griffith Pacts

Oklahoma City, May 13.—Government's anti-trust suit in Federal court against the Griffith chain of theatres Friday was devoted to minute and detailed examination of motion picture contracts between Griffith theatre chains and Hollywood producing companies. Testimony before Judge Edgar S. Vaught will resume tomorrow. Government charges in suit, filed nearly six years ago, that Griffith chains acted monopolistically in restraint of free trade. It is claimed bookings were sewed up in such a manner that indie theatre owners had no chance to compete.

ROSS, LE ROY WILL MAKE SINATRA'S TOLERANCE PIC

Frank Ross will produce and Mervyn LeRoy will direct a special featurette, tentatively tagged "The House I Live In," which will star Frank Sinatra and be released by RKO. Filming will start within a week, in time for swooner to make his overseas trek.

Picture is designed to promote religious and racial tolerance, and is outgrowth of Sinatra's recent experiences in addressing youth groups in east on these subjects. In discussion of matter it was suggested that largeer audience could be reached by screening his talks, presented in such a way as to make full use of Sinatra's songs and personality.

Group including Albert Maltz, who scripted, are donating their services and RKO will turn over all proceeds to a charity active in juvenile work.

KGFJ H'wood Move Held Up By Fire

Plans of KGFJ to move into its new Hollywood studio were being held up temporarily today as the result of fire which swept through the frame building near Sunset and Vine. The fire late Friday night caused considerable damage, according to Walter Muller, owner. Occupation of the building by KGFJ will be delayed pending repair of the damage, expected to get under way soon.

Radio Network Plugs

Top plug tunes of the week, as logged over the major networks, NBC, CBS, Blue and Mutual, are being LISTED ALPHABETICALLY, not numerically, under a new accord between the music publishers and song pluggers union, as a means to curb the payola evil. Thus, it is figured, the normal competitive methods, sans artificial stimulation to get on top will tend to eliminate some of the petty bribery, etc.

IA STUDIO HEADS REPRESENT FOUR DEFENDANTS

Trial of four members of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 accused of "acting against the best interests of the IATSE" will be resumed Wednesday, with business heads from four big IA studio locals appearing as their counsel. Group defending IA workers includes Herbert Aller, business representative of International Photographers Local 644; Ted Ellsworth, business representative of Motion Picture Costumers Local 705; John Martin, business head of Film Technicians Local 683, and Zeal Fairbanks, assistant business representative of International Sound Technicians Local 695.

Roy Brewer, IA international representative, appointed three members of Local 44 who reportedly were unfriendly to the defendants, to act as a trial board, with C. B. (Cappy) DuVall, Local 44 business representative, acting as prosecutor. Michael Luddy, Local 44 counsel, and Attorney Ben Margolis were present, but it was explained they were witnesses.

Trial started Thursday night and was adjourned until Wednesday night after a session Friday. Four accused of "acting against the best interests of the IA" after they went on record as refusing to take over jobs of studio strikers are Jesse Sapp, Irwin Hentschel, Gene Mailes and Robert Ames. Defendants claimed last night that not one shred of evidence had been introduced to substantiate the charges.

EASING OF RAW FILM FOR 4TH QUARTER IS IN SIGHT

Goods Division of the War Production Board.

In his communication to Flinn, Adams declared:

"Based upon statements accredited to me appearing in the trade press the impression seems to be that there is no shortage of film. The facts are these.

"Based upon current statements of all claimants the film requirements for all types, while still in excess of productive capacity of the industry, are lower than any time during the past year. If this condition prevails for the balance of this year and the first part of 1946 there is every reason to believe that requirements and production could be in balance by the first of the year, 1946.

"Please understand no definite predictions can be made until the receipt of the fourth quarter film requirements in August. For the present we can only hope.

"The total requirements for the third quarter are still in excess of productive capacity. I can see no possibility of building up any surpluses of 35 mm film during the next few months. All facilities for the production of 35 mm film are being used to the fullest extent possible, and we still cannot meet the needs of the military and civilian claimants. There may be some additional 35 mm. film available for civilian use during the third quarter but it is not expected that it would be enough to bring all sections of the industry back to the fourth quarter 1944 level."

There had been some talk that restriction might be removed for the fourth quarter in August, but Adams' explanation indicates that no substantial relief can be expected before the first of the year. He indicated some additional film might be available, but not sufficient to meet all demands.

PRODUCTION INCREASES AS STRIKE CONTINUES TO DRAG

A long drawn out fight for union control of some 15,000 film technicians was seen by labor tops last night, as the National Labor Relations Board prepared to call a conference on an election of set decorators and IATSE leaders indicated they would defy orders of the AF of L executive council that the IA revoke studio charters issued for carpenters, painters and machinists. At the same time producers announced a new increase in production, with 29 features.

Richard Walsh, prexy of the IATSE, is due to return here the first of this week from New York to direct his fight against the strike of Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421, and refusal of other crafts to cross the picket lines. Roy Brewer, IA international representative, already has stated, however, that the AF of L executive council order will be appealed to the AF of L convention in October.

WILLIAM GREEN HERE

William Green, prexy of the AF of L, and Joseph Padway, general counsel for the international organization, were here over the weekend, as was Dave Beck, Coast head of the teamsters. Green stated it was hoped the IATSE would obey instructions of the executive council, and indicated the order would be enforced. He failed to state, though, whether the council had authority to enforce the order or whether it would have to await decision by the general convention in October.

Padway spent some time in conference with Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions and leader of the current strike. Conversation, however, was devoted largely to legal angles of proposed national boycott of pictures being asked by the Conference. Sorrell declared, however, that Padway was critical of the IATSE for its issuance of charters in other union jurisdictions, pointing out this was a violation of the AF of L constitution.

Stewart Meacham, regional director of the NLRB has called for a conference Tuesday of producer reps, IATSE and Conference of Studio Unions on election of set decorators ordered from Washington by the NLRB. There was considerable doubt, though, as to how soon an election could be held. There also was some criticism of Board action in ordering elections at individual major studios instead of an industry-wide ballot.

PRODUCTION ON UPGRADE

Producers' statement on production follows:

"Production continued to increase during the past week, with three new pictures being started and others completed according to schedule. A total of 29 features were before the cameras Saturday, a gain of three over the previous week. Three new pictures are slated to get under way Monday, two others Tuesday and a sixth on the following day. Technicolor photography and print processing have remained at top efficiency."

Ability of Technicolor to continue operations without the services of 87 machinists is said to have been a surprise to strike tops. Predictions had been made that company could not continue operations for two weeks. It is understood that temporary repairs are being handled by plant superintendents who do not belong to a union, with studio heads of photography giving the once-over to cameras. Several machinists are reported to have returned to jobs in studios, particularly part of a group from Mitchell Camera Co., who were forced off their jobs for failure to pay $5 strike assessments.

Approximately 1,500 carpenters, meeting at Hollywood Legion Stadium yesterday morning, nixed a proposal to picket six days weekly, with a proposed fine of $5 for failure to report on the picket lines. Members of Studio Carpenters Local 946 voted in favor of current system of picketing three days each week, with a fine of $1.71 for failure to report.

MUSSA FOR HONEST ELECTION

Speaking before 2,000 unionists at American Legion Stadium last night, Ed Mussa, business representative of Local 1421, indicated plainly that striking set decorators would not participate in the NLRB election if "strikebreakers" now employed in the studios are permitted to ballot. Mussa declared:

"If the producers and IATSE want an honest election we will go along and I believe the strike will be over very shortly. If they have any phony ideas in mind, and believe they can vote a large number of scabs, I do not think any election will be held."

Prexy Herbert Sorrell told the audience that Joseph Padway, general counsel of the AF of L, had advised him that the AF of L executive council had full authority to force Prexy Richard Walsh of the IATSE to revoke charters he has issued in other studio union jurisdictions, or to suspend his own charter. Sorrell declared Padway indicated some definite action would be taken after Walsh had been given a reasonable time in which to comply with the order, perhaps two weeks.

Jack Williams, business representative of studio janitors, reported to the meeting that the janitors had voted today to continue to respect the picket lines regardless of how long the strike lasts. James Skelton, business representative of Carpenters Local 946, made the same report for the carpenters, as did the business heads of other unions. Earl Thomas, secretary of the Los Angeles District Council of Carpenters, told the audience the Council would back them 100% whether the strike lasted one month or one year. Other speakers were D. T. Wayne, business representatives of Studio Machinists Local 1185; Roy Tindall, assistant business representative of IBEW Local 40; George Stoicca, of the IATSE; Carl Head, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, and Joseph Whitman, of the Engineers and Architects.

7TH AWAY TO SPEEDY START, CURB OPTIMISM

Seventh War Loan campaign got away to a fast start today as the film industry's workers turned to to put their portion of the drive over the top. Preliminary reports coming in throughout the day to national headquarters in New York indicate the quota of $4,000,000,000 in "E" bonds set by the Treasury Department will be fulfilled if there is no letup in showmanship and enthusiasm between now and campaign's closing date on June 30.

GI morale in the China-Burma-India theatre of war is being considerably bolstered by Major Melvyn Douglas' Entertainment Production Unit. EPU is the Army's only organization which regularly supplies American servicemen with live shows, vaudeville, sketches, music and other entertainment staged exclusively by its own soldier personnel. Douglas established his EPU in September, 1944, when he traveled throughout the CBI area to find Army talent. He auditioned, talked with hundreds of men until he had a large number of show biz veterans who could whip up shows and other forms of entertainment for the delectation of troops in those parts of the world which needed divertissement the most. EPU now has 10 shows on the road, touring throughout the CBI sector, and several more are in rehearsal. It's tough going, because the men in these units must travel very often by most primitive forms of transportation, and very often, too, they are staging their shows under the very noses of the enemy. Assisting Douglas, who sees to it that typical Broadway and Hollywood stuff keeps moving, are number of Hollywood men, as well as others from stage and radio. Sgt. Hal Belfor, former dance director at Warners, functions in same capacity for EPU, and Sgt. Joseph Barron, former studio prop man, repeats in that far-off theatre of war. Cpl. Larry Carr and Sgt. Selus Allbritton, both former Hollywood nitery musicians, are assistant musical directors. S/Sgt. Marion Grimes, in vaudeville and stock companies for 18 years prior to enlistment, acts as director.

REPUBLIC Studio Club's presentation of "Out of the Frying Pan" at Hampshire Playhouse last week was so successful that at least one of the players, and possibly one or two others, are in line for screen tests. William N. Howard already has announced his intention of giving such a test to John Ruth, in studio's transportation department, who scored with his performance. Ruth recently was mustered out of U. S. Marine Corps, and he saw service at Guadalcanal and other battle areas, with number of decorations and citations to his credit. Herbert J. Yates, company head who has shown lively interest in project, attended Sunday evening performance, last of the engagement, only an hour or so after he returned from New York and commended entire cast.

COLLEGES, universities and Little Theatre groups are to be given a careful scanning by Stacy Keach, Universal test director and executive in charge of new talent, on two-week swing through Texas. Keach planed out yesterday for Lone Star State, and in addition to search for acting talent he will also seek dancers and singers. Aspirants for studio contracts will be judged on their photogenic qualifications, acting ability and personality. Exec will pay particular attention to campus beauties at Texas State Teachers College, whence came Ann Sheridan, and Texas State College for Women, which sent Brenda Marshall, both campuses located at Denton. Other institutions he will cover are University of Texas and Southern Methodist.

PRODUCTION of "These Two Hands" by 20th-Fox will see a priest acting as screen playwright and technical advisor. Father E. J. Father Edwards, a Catholic missionary, was formerly stationed in the Philippines and for several years taught at Colegio San Carlo on the island of Cebu. He was invalided home to New York a few weeks before the Japs took the island and bombed the college out of existence. "These Two Hands," is a story of life in the Philippines.

And then a reassuring voice breaks out
And calmly says: "And now a word about Jones Liniment."

Wherever robbers rob or killers kill,
You know beyond the slightest shade of doubt
A reassuring voice will tell about Jones Liniment.

Some night, amid this world of constant crime,
You hope, will come a moment all sublime
When you can turn the dial round about
And revel in a mystery without Jones Liniment.

TRADESHOWN at Los Angeles, May 14, 1945. Running time: 94 MINS.

"Pillow To Post" is a moderately amusing comedy that builds its antics around the shopworn theme of housing shortages. The familiar events that transpire do not justify the running time of 94 minutes. Cast and director do as well as can be expected with the material, which bases its chuckles on the frantic efforts of Ida Lupino to obtain a comfortable bed for one night. There are several good laughs but the slow spots in between dull the proceedings. Picture will find its best level in smaller double bill situations.

Miss Lupino is seen as a femme traveling salesman, working for her father when his oil well equipment company is hit by the manpower shortage. Unable to obtain a room for the night unless she is married, Miss Lupino drafts a young Army lieutenant for the reluctant role of bridegroom—just until she can move in. It doesn't work out that way. The soldier's commanding officer resides at the same auto camp, believes the soldier has just gotten married and complicates things by taking an interest in the couple. Of course, it's a cinch the pair will really fall in love and eventually get together as man and wife. They do.

William Prince is the confused lieutenant. Sydney Greenstreet is the gruff commanding officer. To add a slight triangle to the love situation, plot has John Mitchell on the make for Miss Lupino. Barbara Brown, Ruth Donnelly, Willie Best, Stuart Erwin, an expectant father; Frank Orth, Paul Harvey, Regina Wallace and others work hard for chuckles. The Rose Simon Kohn stage play was screenplayed by Charles Hoffman.

Vincent Sherman directed the Alex Gottlieb production. Technical contributions, including Wesley Anderson's photography, are expert.

Metro's 'Early To Wed' Held On Wynn's Return

Glen Cook has been appointed to Monogram's studio operations committee. Cook recently took over production manager chores at the lot.

FIRST RUNS COASTING FOR 265G DESPITE HOLDOVERS

Los Angeles first-run film theatres are heading for an average $265,000 total take for the week. Figure is good considering number of holdovers in town, and not too hefty take of new bills. Lifting of the curfew is beginning to be reflected in weekly grosses, although houses featuring late or swing-shift shows have not yet returned to the high average set in pre-curfew days.

"Guest In the House," doubling with "The Bullfighters" at the Carthay Circle, Grauman's Chinese, Loew's State and Fox Uptown, has possible $51,000 in sight for the week. "Counter-Attack," teamed at the RKO Hillstreet and Pantages theatres with "Song of the Sarong," should pull $36,000 or thereabouts. "This Man's Navy" and "Gentle Annie" at the Guild, United Artists and Wilshire, is heading for estimated $27,500. Bill is only fair at the Guild and Wilshire, but is playing strong at the downtown UA.

Hawaii theatre, day-dating with the Elite in Beverly Hills with horror bill of "The Body Snatchers" and "The Brighton Strangler," is racking up excellent $8,500 on the first week of a long run. Allan Jones and Connie Haines closed week at the Orpheum last night with estimated $22,000.

Among the holdovers, "God Is My Co-Pilot" continues strong, aiming for $54,000 on its second week at Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern after hitting sock $67,000 on the first week. "Salty O'Rourke" at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramounts is heading for $35,000 on a second week. "Without Love" closed four-week run at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz theatres last night with estimated $28,500, making way for "The Clock," opening today.

LEGIT OPENING

ROUND TRIP

Wilmington, Del., May 14.—"Round Trip" is fast and funny, with witty dialog, spicy situations and top-drawer performances on the credit side. A fragile and obvious plot keeps this comedy in the lightweight class, but with some whitewashing it should be a natural for films.

Plot deals with wealthy middle-aged couple whose marriage goes on the rocks through mutual boredom. Wife falls for an actor who goes through the wolf routine, hoping she'll angel a play. Husband and wife quarrel and latter flees their middle west home to join the actor in New York. Husband follows and gets involved with the actor's girl friend. All return to the middle west finally, where the couple's 'teen-age daughter brings about a happy ending.

June Walker and Sidney Blackmer are excellent as the couple, and Patricia Kirkland is appealing as the modern daughter. Phyllis Brooks gives a smooth interpretation of the modern-minded New York girl, while Martin Lamont stands out as the wolfish thesp. Edith Mesier and Morton L. Stevens are good in minor roles.

Mary Orr and Reginald Denham are experts in writing crisp dialog, and this is one of their best efforts. Sam Leve's two settings are outstanding.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(CBS News Analyst)

San Francisco, May 14.—No one can condone the coddling of Herman Goering. It's a dangerous symptom and so is Marshal Montgomery's putting German Field Marshal Busch in charge of Northwestern Germany. We are fortunate there has been a public and now official reaction against this kind of thing before we began to bring Prussian generals to the United States, make them guests of honor at cocktail parties, and give them triumphal tours of the country. Some of this reaction by some elements in the army is due to the kind of bunk that so many war correspondents have written in the magazines and in books about the Prussian generals. They've pictured them as easily recognizable fiends—this one so ruthless that he would sacrifice any number of his men without blinking an eye, and that one so lacking in honor that he would use any method of overcoming an enemy. Many war correspondents have made the Prussian generals into what's called the Hollywood villain type. They're over-simplified—principally because that's what the public likes, and sometimes perhaps because they have not known how pleasant a cocktail companion these men are. These men, the nobility of Germany, are disarming—just as our army has found them to be. But that does not alter the basic fact that has not been stressed, and that is that the Prussians, the Junkers, are an even greater menace to a world that wants peace than the Nazis. Owning large estates in Eastern Germany, possessed of money and influence, these men have been the power in Germany since the time of Frederick the Great. They've been able to manipulate the tariffs, and, although they personally disdained politics, they have pulled the strings, and used men like Hitler. The Prussians and the Nazis are linked as the responsible parties, and not the German people. Roosevelt knew this and so does Churchill. Those who handle our war criminal cases might better study the Yalta statement on this point, follow its reasoning more, and listen less to those who pander to public emotion.

PAR PRODUCING 27 PIX FOR $33,500,000

New York, May 14.—Cost of 16 pictures scheduled for production by Paramount Studios by the end of this year will total approximately $26,000,000 according to Henry Ginsberg. Two to be turned out for Paramount by B. G. De Sylva, three to come from Hal Wallis and six Pine-Thomas low-budgeters will probably run another $7,500,000. This will bring Paramount's producing schedule from Jan. 1 to Dec. 31 to a total of 27 pictures for a cost of around $33,500,000.

Ginsberg doubts that the releasing schedule will be stepped up, pointing out that additional pictures are not needed. The company plans ending the current 1944-45 season September 1 with only 29 pictures, including reissues of the "Sign of the Cross."

By JACK HELLMAN

That's a neat package Hal Hackett of MCA sold the Walgreen drug people with just the right amount of patriotic flavor to take the curse off the commercial. We're referring to the War Bond rally at the Wiltern theatre tomorrow night, which Ed Cashman directs for the transcription to be played in 100 cities around the country sometime next month to coincide with the drug chain's 44th anni. As we get it the Walgreen people are paying all out-of-pocket expense and that adds up to a writeoff of around $150,000. That figure is easy to comprehend when one runs an eye over such talent as Bing Crosby, Paulette Goddard, Abbott and Costello, Rise Stevens, Rochester, Don Wilson, Ken Niles and Carl Hoff's orchestra. They're all being paid their full broadcast rate with a few extra sheckels being tossed in for the writers. . . . Naturally the Walgreen angle is being underplayed to give full play to the War Bond drive but it's a smart tieup nonetheless for the drug people. No one in the trade can recall a similar project ever having been attempted, that of a full hour of star performers on wax for spot broadcast. Rarely have such canned programs exceeded a half hour in length and in most cases the running time has been 15 minutes or less. It's a smart investment for both Walgreen and the Treasury Department and sets a new format for tieups of this nature. The big idea is to sell bonds but underlying the patriotic pitch is the sponsor identification, which is important in an institutional project for which the fat sheaf of lettuce is being earmarked.

John U. Reber's six-year quest of Fred Allen has finally been crowned with success and the J. Walter Thompson agency has landed a new piece of Standard Brands business and with it one of radio's top comics. Long nursing a yen for Allen to come under the Standard banner, Jim Adams, prexy of the food packers, made a standing offer to Reber, JWT's radio chief, that a deal would be inked the minute he delivered Allen. Reber finally cornered his quarry and Allen moves over to NBC in the Fall for the first time, ensconced in the Sunday spot now tenanted by Eddie Bracken. What the future holds for Bracken will be decided within the next fortnight. If the Army doesn't get him some other client will for he has definitely proven he's big time radio material.

STATION BREAKS . . . Joe Rines, who started Harry Einstein (Parkyakarkus) in radio 15 years ago, has him back in the running again with a half hour show, "Meet Me At Parky's." Old Gold has the record and may buy it as replacement for Comedy Theatre. . . . A big time director from the east is quoted as saying he would rather do his shows here because the AFRA casting is so much better. . . . Judy Canova picked up 2.7 in the advance Hooper and now roosts snugly at 12.7. Carlton Alsop due out later in the month to settle the show's summer status. . . . Don Reid, the radio canary, has a film test coming up. . . . Radio chiefs Bill Lewis and Hay McClinton in town. . . . Mabel Englund, formerly one of radio's top Underwood athletes, is back at the grind again and turning out the Andrews Sisters scripts with Cottonseed Clark. . . . Danny Kaye drops off for the summer after two more broadcasts. He'll be definitely back in the fall, we're assured by Producer Dick Mack. . . . Art Jones, recently out of the Army, got a new writing ticket with Hoagy Carmichael. . . . Amos 'n' Andy will close out their season June 1 instead of June 29 so they can get away earlier on their overseas tour. . . . Chet Lauck and Norris Goff (Lum and Abner) have whipped up a tune, "There's Someone Waiting Just For Me," and the band boys are asking for copies after the first airing. . . . Lester Gottlieb, publicity director for Young & Rubicam, due in May 28. . . . Walter Craig, radio head of Benton & Bowles, gets in Thursday to addition a show built around Cass Daley. . . . Abe Burrows now pounding a mill at Paramount. . . . Turhan Bey will be starred in True Boardman's "Prince and the Pauper" for C. P. MacGregor's Hollywood Theatre before donning khaki.

Norman Corwin has done it again. It may be old stuff by now that the CBS ace writer-director has had another whizzer on the net but his latest effort, "On a Note of Triumph," has transcended any previous opus and elicited paeans of praise from within the trade, which is praise indeed. Charles Vanda, one of the top production men in the business, was even moved to writing Corwin a fan letter extolling his hour-long V-E Day program as the best dramatic-narration ever aired on any network. For more than a year Corwin worked on the script and to those who heard it originally and repeated live last Sunday the effort was praise-worthy and rewarding enough. Columbia Records may put in on wax and CBS will issue it in pamphlet form. The chain might well paraphrase the old Paramount slogan, "If it's a Corwin production it's the best show on the air."

Someone in authority ought to do something about commercial copy on the record stations. Flipping on the car radio we heard this pitch by an outfit on KGFJ which trains real estate brokers: "After the war there may be millions of men walking the streets looking for jobs." Pleasant thought for some of our returned and hospitalized war heroes. In disgust we turned to another advertising medium—billboards—and caught this teaser: "Everybody's Nuts." Perhaps we are for putting up with such folderol. Southern California Broadcasters should stamp out these wolf howls before they get out of hand. There'll be a flood of them by fly-by-nights when the war is won and the smaller stations had better watch their step lest the American Legion or some other patriotic organization puts in with a complaint to the Federal Communications Commission. They can't say they weren't warned.

RAW FILM MACHINE, LABOR PROBLEMS TO BE EASED

Washington, May 14.—Following up a story in last week's Daily Variety (Washington Hullabaloo Column) that the chief headache in the raw stock situation for the third quarter would be the problem of vacations and repair of machines in the film factories, WPB and WMC are taking steps to improve the situation.

Stanley B. Adams, chief of the WPB consumer durable goods division, disclosed today that WMC has pledged full cooperation to see that the labor situation does not stall the film manufacturers. This help is being provided in deferments and in new skilled labor. In addition, plans are being made to overcome the seasonal slump in production due to vacations. These are being staggered and will start very early this year to help the plants run without stopping if the machines hold up.

Adams also confirmed a "Variety" story of a couple of weeks back which revealed that yarns in some trade papers predicting a heavy drop in film quotas for the 3rd quarter were on the phony side.

Adams said that the situation now looks so good that if the manpower and machinery problems at the film factories are licked, there actually may be more raw stock during the third quarter than during the current second quarter. Just how much more is still uncertain and depends entirely upon the military situation. There is a slacking off in military operations due to V-E Day which will not be taken up until activities step up in the Pacific. The raw film situation depends largely on how soon the military situation begins pressure again.

HOLLYWOOD TO VOTE ON ONE ANNUAL CHARITY DRIVE

Adoption of a single, all-inclusive, annual charity campaign will be submitted to an industry-wide vote, it was announced yesterday by the Permanent Charities Committee. Mail ballots will go out this week to more than 25,000 individual workers, artists, executives, technicians, etc.

The plan, recommended by representatives of nearly all film unions and guilds and most independent groups, calls for a drive to be staged next autumn. Percentage allocations would be made in advance, and the money raised would be distributed to the War Chest, Red Cross, Infantile Paralysis Foundation and a few smaller organizations which in the past have been aided by the industry.

"We are convinced that the single campaign would be an improvement from every standpoint," declared Edward Arnold, executive veepee of the Charities Committee. "To the individual donor it would mean one pledge, no overlapping payroll deductions, and no accumulating debt while he is not working.

"We believe that, if this plan is fully understood by everyone, more money can be raised in one campaign than has been collected in the tiring succession of separate drives. If each donor realized that his entire charity obligation for a year would be met by one pledge, he would be better able to budget his giving. He would be given a card receipt and a window sticker for his home, both showing he had contributed to all the agencies represented, so that any further requests made by a charitable organization justly and rightfully should be refused and referred to the Permanent Charities Committee."

The Motion Picture Relief Fund, already set up on a payroll deduction basis, is not included in the new charities proposal. Neither are the strictly sectarian appeals, such as church funds. Arnold explained that in order to share in the industry collection, each organization would have to make application prior to the campaign. If approved by the Charities Committee, organization would be awarded a percentage of the proceeds.

Three optional methods for payment of pledges have been proposed. First, cash in full when subscription is made. Second, quarterly or semi-annual payments direct to the PCC. Third, a voluntary payroll deduction of a definite amount over perhaps a 50-week period. Payments would be canceled during any week the donor was idle, and there would be no doubling up of payments, nor any deficit to be carried into the following year.

OIAA IRKED AT EDGE GIVEN CANADIAN FILMS IN FRISCO

bit peeved at the partiality being shown to Canadian documentary films over those of other nations.

Mary Losey of the Canadian Film Board, who was loaned to the State Department to be secretariat for documentaries, is operating the theatre from a program standpoint. For the first three weeks she has scheduled nine Canadian documentaries, with one of them, "And Now the Peace," being shown twice here and once in the United Nations theatre, while only six of the OIAA subjects, mostly Latin-American in text, and seven OWI have been shown.

OIAA has many important films, especially on health and illiteracy, it wants the United Nations conference people to see, but feels its chance of screening them is slim, with the way programs are being shaped. Russia got five on the screen, France nine and a combined Belgium-Netherlands showing had five. Other nations want a chance, too, and OIAA boys say they are helpless to get an opportunity to see that everyone is taken care of. Then they burn all the more because Canada pays no share of the operations.

There still is plenty of quibbling going on at the various meetings, with the Australian boomerang on regional apportionment having hit the conferees pretty hard, which resulted in many secret meetings of various delegates being held tonight.

NO H'WOOD SPLURGE

Motion pictures will get no chance to splurge for the conference guests. Plan was under way to have a large group of Hollywood stars and personalities from all companies here end of week to greet the visiting firemen. It was to have been a shindig under auspices of San Francisco Press Club. It was okay with Hollywood, which wanted to do its bit after the end of the mourning period, but Will Hays in New York said "no," that he had an agreement with the State Department to keep the industry out. Other large industries from all over the country, including Standard Oil, various airlines, steel, Henry Ford, etc., are entertaining lavishly with cocktail parties and dinners, and tossing out plenty of propaganda.

Quite a stir in town when Jim Farley and Bob Hannegan arrived yesterday. Talk was that Farley was back in the Democratic fold and likely would do a little mixing for future use with the international visitors. Jack Benny is due in town tomorrow to lay out program for the "I Am An American Day" broadcast he will do from here on Sunday.

The foreign delegates, who do not have as much walking to do as the members of the fourth estate, are on the free list for shoe coupons from the OPA, but as yet the hotels, where the visitors eat and sleep, have not gotten those extra red points promised for nutritional purposes.

Adult Educators Get To See OWI Shorts

Leading members of the California Association for Adult Education will be guests at two special screenings of short subjects produced by the Overseas Branch of OWI, it was announced last night by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. First of the screenings will be held tomorrow at the California Studios, and the second on the night of May 23.

cording, etc., following an open morning which will be given over to individual meetings.

Yesterday's opening of the SMPE confab also was given over to technical papers and demonstrations in the afternoon and evening. This followed a special luncheon at which Walter Wanger, president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences, greeted those attending the conference in the name of the industry and the Academy.

In addition to papers highlighting tonight's sessions, another top day during the conference will be Thursday, when advances in technical equipment and processing of color will be given. Kodachrome's printing of 16mm. duplicates and the new machine processing of Ansco color film will be the features of Thursday evening huddles.

EXHIB DEMAND FOR SHORTER FEATURES SEEN BY MORGAN

Exhibitor demand for shorter features, running 35 to 45 minutes, is foreseen as a result of war-developed popularity of short subjects and newsreels. Oscar Morgan, general sales manager for Paramount shorts, admits he's carrying the torch for shorts by reason of his job, but says the facts speak for themselves aside from any personal slant.

"War shorts have increased business for other shorts," he said. "Exhibitors have become more short subject-conscious than ever before. The excellent Army and Navy shorts and documentaries put out have created a public demand. Added to this is the fine job the newsreels have done in reporting the war.

"Result is that exhibitors are trying to find ways to fit more shorts and newsreels into their programs, sandwiching them in with the double bill. And they're going to be looking for shorter features for part of the double-bill program. There's going to be a big market for features of 45 or even only 35 minutes' running time."

Morgan said that Paramount contracted to supply exhibitors with the greatest number of shorts last year of any year in its history. He looks to the short film to play an important part in education, both in the schools and in the theatres, as visual history of the war and peace. The educational job of the films is one that must be carried principally by means of the shorts, he believes, holding that the main purpose of the full-length feature is still entertainment.

The newsreel, Morgan holds, is one of the greatest contributions of the motion picture business to the war. Army, Navy and civilian newsreel cameramen have risked their lives—and hundreds of them have lost their lives—in making film records of actual combat.

Speaking of the Nazi atrocities films, he said Paramount was deluged with letters, telegrams and phone calls advising against showing them. It, nevertheless, put them out, with the result the company received an even greater number of congratulations after the screening.

Morgan is here from New York for sales conferences with local distribution and studio execs.

Ruddy In WB Flackery

J. M. Ruddy, Hollywood correspondent for group of British newspapers before he enlisted three years ago in American army, has received his honorable discharge and checked into Warners publicity department yesterday. Ruddy was information and education officer to a fighter group in Ninth Air Force, saw service in France and Germany and was mustered out as a first lieutenant.

SHOW NAZI HORRORS TO AXIS VIA PIX, SAYS H. WARNER

Washington, May 14.—The value of American motion pictures as a medium of educating Axis nations was impressively brought home to a group of Senators last week by Harry Warner.

Warner was the guest of Senator Millard E. Tydings of Maryland at a private luncheon at the capitol, attended by 15 other Senators, Joseph E. "Mission to Moscow" Davies and Leslie Biddle, secretary of the Senate.

Warner suggested an educational program which would pull no punches. It would show the Germans the full story of their atrocities. It also would emphasize the benefits of democracy. Warner told his audience he had originally taken up the idea with the late President Roosevelt and that Roosevelt had approved and asked Warner to investigate the matter.

The Senators also liked the idea, asked many questions, and came away with a greatly improved understanding of the power and usefulness of films.

Safier Back At PRC

Morris Safier, western division sales manager for PRC, returned here yesterday after touring exchanges under his control. He also was at New York office for huddles with Harry Thomas, newly appointed veepee and general sales manager.

CALIFORNIA SOLONS DEMAND EARLY VOTE TO END STRIKE

election of set decorators to designate a collective bargaining agency.

Proposal to allow replacements to ballot will be taken up at 10 a.m. today at an informal conference called by Michael Komoroff, chief field examiner for the NLRB here. Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, has announced he will oppose any but bona fide decorators casting ballots. The IATSE will be represented by Roy Brewer, international representative; Attorney Michael Luddy, B. C. (Cappy) DuVal, business agent of Local 44, and Prexy Richard Walsh if latter returns from New York in time for the hearing. Attorney Frank Pestana and Ed Mussa, business representative of Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421, will represent the strikers.

In a letter to Dr. Harry A. Millis, chairman of the NLRB, Congressmen Gordon L. McDonough, Jerry Voorhis, Cecil R. King, Chet Holifield, Ellis E. Patterson, Clyde Doyle, Helen Gahagan Douglas and Ned R. Healy, declared:

"The undersigned members of the Congress of the United States urge that immediate action be taken in regard to the current strike in the motion picture industry. The strike has gotten out of control, and is causing disruption and disunity in its spread throughout the industry.

"Elections should be held as soon as possible, as an orderly and legal means of settling the strike. When such an election is held, care must be taken to see that only those who were involved in the original dispute, bona fide workers in the craft, are the ones who cast their ballots."

MAYOR TO ACT

A letter also was sent by the delegation to Dr. George W. Taylor, chairman of the War Labor Board, urging that he call in the opposing parties and see if a settlement could be worked out. A similar request went to Mayor Fletcher Bowron, who announced yesterday he would attempt to arrange a conference within the next few days.

In their letter to Dr. Taylor, the delegation declared:

"We wish to advise that a feeling of cynicism is prevailing, due to the fact that the wartime labor agencies have not taken firm steps and seem unable to handle the situation. The distrust that is being engendered against the government labor agencies is very serious. It is a definite reflection on the boards."

There was considerable talk among strike leaders last night of asking the delegation to sponsor a Congressional investigation of the NLRB, especially since that board ignored the recommendation of the Congressmen by ordering that strike replacements, most of whom were furnished by the IATSE from other union crafts, be permitted to ballot along with the bona fide decorators who have been on strike for nine weeks.

PICKETS SLUG IT OUT

There was a brief flareup of violence yesterday when a studio worker and two pickets engaged in a fist fight at Metro. William J. Linahan, identified as a working electrician, swore out battery complaints against Ed D. Purkey and Harold P. Foss. They were released on $50 bonds for a hearing Saturday.

Reports were current last night that the IATSE international, which has been directed by the AF of L executive council to withdraw charters it issued to carpenters, machinists and painters, was planning a new move to try and offset this defeat. Reports began to circulate immediately after appearance of Felix Snow, IA veepee, who is said to have been in on international takeover moves in St. Louis and Chicago. Tops said they understood other IA national officers were already here or en route.

There was some talk that the international might attempt to merge all of its studio locals into one organization in the belief it would then be easier to control crafts which have refused to surrender their autonomy. Such a move, however, would meet with strong opposition from the top unions, including cameramen, soundmen, laboratory technicians, costumers, etc. When the international faced a similar autonomy campaign several years ago, it scuttled Local 37 and created four new studio locals.

Prexy Sorrell declared last night that Walsh would be given a reasonable time to comply with the order of the AF of L executive council, and that if he refused, the International Alliance charter would be suspended and that Walsh would have to go to the AF of L Convention in October to seek reinstatement. He said this information had been given to him by Joseph Padway, general counsel of the AF of L.

supply fighting equipment to the men in the Pacific.

Treasury Department has released the Seventh War Loan message prepared by President Roosevelt before his death in order to stimulate War Bond sales. President Roosevelt's statement was as follows:

"I don't need to tell you that we are still locked in a deadly struggle with our enemies—the enemies of our way of life—and the war is still the chief job of each one of us.

"The greatest production of which we are capable, faithful adherence to regulations that make it possible to supply our boys in battle with everything they need, and buying and holding War Bonds—these are things we at home must do to speed victory.

"In the past three years more than 85,000,000 Americans have invested billions of dollars in bonds. Never before have so many people held such a direct share in a great national effort. To save—to buy and to hold all we can of War Bonds—this is a small service to ask of us who do not fight, yet it is one of the biggest things we can do for our fighting men."

Charles M. Thall, "Showmen's Seventh" War Loan coordinator for the 11 western states, has returned to New York following a month's stay in his territory effecting complete organization for the drive in the area under his helm.

Drive Pulls $325,000 In H'wood Bond Preem

Hollywood's first bond premiere, staged last night at Hollywood Paramount theatre in conjunction with opening of Seventh War Loan Drive, grossed around $325,000. House was a complete sellout before performance began, with public buying Bonds for seats during past six days at Boulevard stores, theatres and banks. Theatre reported no admission was gained by buying bonds at the box office.

"Affairs of Susan" on screen was supplemented by "Adventures of Sherlock Holmes," over KHJ, from stage, with Basil Rathbone and Nigel Bruce essaying their respective radio characters. Preem was first of seven to be held during next seven weeks of drive.

SPU WANTS $16.50 TO $300 DAY, GUARANTEE 3 DAY WK.

Screen Players Union last night approved a proposed contract for submission to producers calling for a minimum of $16.50 per day for ordinary extra work, abolition of the 300-mile zone, and a guarantee of three days' work per week for all members. Union also asks right to have a supervisor in Central Casting Corp. and all other casting agencies, with establishment of western and racial divisions at Central to be operated by persons approved by SPU.

It was stated SPU would seek retroactive pay to at least June 1, 1942, with the possibility of going back to 1939. Proposed minimum for dress extras would be $19, that for dancers, swimmers and skaters $20, with rate for specialties running up to $90 and higher. Minimum for cowboys would start at $25, for plain saddle riding, ranging up to $75 per day for racing, trotting, etc. Rate for Indians would start at $18.50, ranging up to $300 and over.

Proposed agreement specifies that waivers must be paid only $10.50 per day, and that none may be hired until all available SPU members are employed.

Cancellation of calls and issuance of weather permitting calls would be abolished. It is proposed that all call-backs must be posted not later than 3 p.m., with proviso that if not posted all players on call will report back. Proposed minimum for non-recording singers doing rehearsal or mouthing to playback would start at $25, ranging upward to $75 for soloists.

Weekly conversions would call for six times the daily rate instead of five times, as currently. Overtime would start after eight hours, with minimum calling for time and one-half for players whose call started at 3 p. m. or later. Workday would end at 12 midnight, with rate after that calling for double time. Players would receive $8 additional for special makeup, or $2 additional for sideburns, mustache, etc. Dress extras would receive $8 additional for each additional change requested and ordinary extras $6 for the same request.

Baseball players, hodcarriers, pallbearers, etc., would receive a minimum of $20; fencers, jockeys, etc., $25; bareback riders, motorcycle riders, etc., $35; hazardous doubling, $50 up.

SPU CONSTITUTION ADOPTED

Shortly before midnight group voted to adopt the proposed constitution and by-laws and balloted in favor of accepting the resignations of Prexy Harry Mayo and other officers. It was agreed that acting officers would serve until the next election and that after that period any vacancies would have to be filled by the membership instead of the board of directors.

Less than 500 members showed up for the big meeting and question of a quorum was raised. Larry Williams, acting president, ruled a quorum was the number present until a constitution and by-laws was adopted. This was confirmed by Alex H. Schullman, attorney for the union. Expected fight over the resignations of Prexy Mayo, Veepee Roy Brent, Secretary Lee Powell failed to develop when Williams ruled meeting had been called to pass on proposed wage scales, adoption of a constitution and to discuss proposed affiliation. Several efforts to halt meeting were made and motion was then put to accept resignations of officers. Motion was adopted unanimously, but Williams then ruled this would be taken up later.

A gold membership card was presented to Major Gordon E. Maloney, who spent 34 months in a Japanese prison camp after making the Death March on Bataan. Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, addressed the meeting and urged the members to stick together and to go along with the crafts now outside the studios and that extras eventually "will earn a decent living."

Small attendance was declared by retiring officers to clearly show division among extras over SPU policies, but Harry Mayo, who resigned as prexy, said, "I wish them the best of luck if they can put over a program like that."

ARMY TO DISPOSE OF 13,000,000 SQ. FT. OF OVER-AGE FILM

Washington, May 14.—Retail ceilings from 22 to 87 cents a roll have been established on over-age aerial panchromatic film declared surplus by the Army Air Forces and turned over for disposal through civilian channels, OPA announced today.

The prices depend on the size of the film and the number of exposures per roll. Approximately 13,000,000 square feet of this film is available for sale by regional offices of the Department of Commerce's office of surplus property.

It is expected that the film will be sold by the government to large-scale film manufacturers and other buyers having equipment to test, slit and spool the film and perform other steps necessary to prepare it for satisfactory amateur and commercial use.

The Army has informed OPA that the greater part of the film is a borderline product that is below the high standard Army requirements. Much of it, however, is suitable for civilian use, and it is expected to help fill the urgent civilian demand for film. The Department of Commerce sales will be "as is" at negotiated prices not in excess of acquisition cost to the armed forces.

AUTONOMY GROUP BLAMES WALSH FOR STRIKE

Autonomy Alliance, chartered recently at Sacramento, distributed an analysis of the current studio strike yesterday in which blame for the walkout was placed directly in the laps of Prexy Richard Walsh of the IATSE, Roy Brewer, his international representative, and B. C. (Cappy) DuVal, business representative of IA Local 44. Alliance accused DuVal of taking over duties of IA veepee, although William Barret was elected to the office at the last convention.

Complete review was given of all details of efforts of set decorators to gain recognition while Walsh and his associates were charged with delaying a settlement at every opportunity. Statement concluded with the following charge that many IATSE workers have been thrown out of work because of strike and Walsh delays:

"Thus we have a dispute dragged along over a period of better than three years over 78 set decorators. This dispute has brought many other issues out into the open, but we will discuss them later. There has been great expense to workers and to the IA. Many IA workers are out of work either because of the slowdown caused by the strike or by choice. The treasury of the IA has no doubt been badly depleted.

"Special Representative Roy Brewer, Steve Newman, President Walsh, Vice-Presidents Cooper, Barret and Billingsley, high-priced attorneys Michael Luddy and Judge Levy have run up a bill in salaries and fees. Could not these funds, totaling many thousands of dollars, have been put to a better use?

"In the meantime, all organizational work in the fields of television and visual education and 16mm. films has been neglected, and this, the real source of future employment, is being forgotten because of the selfish jurisdictional grabs of one man, Cappy DuVal, who is apparently the real IATSE vice-president instead of William Barret, who was elected to the position."

NEW SETUP DRAFTED FOR SETTLEMENT OF LESTER, CIRO TIFF

New York, May 14.—Arbitration of the controversy between Jerry Lester and Ciro's, concerning the comedian's alleged defaulting on his contract, has been held in abeyance pending a new setup for the settlement. Lester was supposed to have gone into arbitration with the nitery by April 30, but the comedian would not agree on certain points.

New papers reportedly are being drawn up on the Coast now, with the arbitration date to be set some time this week. American Guild of Variety Artists, meanwhile, is holding $7,600 of Ciro's coin, which is to be returned to the Coast AGVA office pending arbitration.

Herman Hover, Ciro's boniface, stated yesterday that arbitration terms in the new deal would be just the same as those drawn up in previous papers. Arbitration, Hover went on, will be held here with Lester's representatives acting for him at the AGVA hearing.

ARMY CREDITS FILMS WITH MAJOR ROLE IN JAP BOMBING

Washington, May 15.—The War Department disclosed today that the Army Air Forces used 350,000,000 feet of 35mm. and 16mm. film in 1944, principally in photographing bombing targets. Other uses were for training films and operations and combat news photography.

Army gives aerial films a major assist in the success of the B-29 bombing of Japan. It points to the successful raid on the aircraft plant at Ota, outside Tokyo, last Feb. 10, as "due to a great extent to the movies which are a part of the crews' briefing."

"The increasing destruction being wrought on strategic Jap targets by the 21st Bomber Command can be traced in several other ways to the

Fight Ban On Export Of Prints To Europe

New York, May 15.—Prohibition of the export of processed prints by U. S. distributors from England to European countries, through curtailment of raw stock supplies in England, is being strongly opposed by U. S. film representatives.

George J. Schaefer, liaison for the film industry to the War Production Board, last week discussed the problem with WPB officials. He stated the British action in curtailing allocations for U. PARIS Canteen is developing a wealth of story material—what with the libellules, and all. The Sol Lesser scripters are getting even more dramatic episode and color to work with out of the Champs Elysees spot than they did out of the Hollywood Canteen and the Stage Door Canteen. Oh yes—the libellules. You'll hear the G. I.'s back from Paris talking about them before long. Literally, "libellules" is French for "dragonflies" but is the G. I.'s nickname for the junior hostesses at the Canteen. Nobody seems to know why the gals should be called "dragonflies" unless it's because of the way they flit from table to table and dance partner to dance partner. First "libellule" romance was reported from the Canteen this week when Libellule Marguerite Riberolle, pretty, blonde telephone operator, became engaged to Sergeant Air Gunner Francois Baillol.

ANTICIPATED seasonal slump in the Hooper list has not only failed to set in but increased ratings are the general rule in the advance release. Hardest jolt was felt by Eddie Cantor, who gave up 4.1 while Frank Sinatra, in the opposite slot, picked up 4.5 and moved within a fraction of Cantor's 13.2. Only other losses were registered by Niles and Prindle (.2), Amos 'n' Andy (1.7), Billie Burke (1.2), Al Pearce (1.9), "Truth Or Consequences" 2.7). All others moved onto the plus column with the following ratings: Jack Carson, 8.2; Kay Kyser, 17.3; Lum and Abner, 6.4; "Which Is Which?," 10.9; Abbott and Costello, 17.5; Bing Crosby, 22.4; Bob Burns, 16.6; Dinah Shore, 14.6; Frank Morgan, 12.9; Joan Davis, 23.2; "Suspense," 13.4; Rudy Vallee, 12.5; "Duffy's Tavern," 13; Durante-Moore, 12.2; "People Are Funny," 14.9.

And make them sign the dotted

"Beyond the Alps lies Italy," they students used to spout,
But now they hike to Hollywood

CAST—Co-stars Jack Oakie and Peggy Ryan. Supporting players: June Vincent, Arthur Treacher, Gene Lockhart, Johnny Coy, Andy Devine, Buster Keaton, Irene Ryan, Victoria Horne, Edith Barrett.

PREVIEWED at Hollywood Pantages theatre, May 15, 1945. Running time: 91 MINS.

Universal delves amusingly into the realm of fantasy to bring forth "That's the Spirit," a lackadaisical comedy-drama which should intrigue the popular palate. Picture abounds in the sly touches of humor which heretofore have marked Michael Fessier-Ernest Pagano productions; musical and dancing numbers have been interpolated with view to showmanship values. Producers, who also wrote original screenplay, keyed tone of picture to Jack Oakie returning to earth as a spirit, and all departments were directed to maintenance of this imaginative mood.

Oakie, hoofing magician and half-owner with Andy Devine of a cheap vaude house at turn of century in New York, marries June Vincent, daughter of a pompous, humorless banker, Gene Lockhart, after knowing her only a few hours, and dies the night her baby is born. Looking down from heaven, Oakie years later gets seven-day pass to descend to earth for purpose of straightening out the affairs of his daughter, Peggy Ryan, who has in her blood his dancing and entertaining personality but isn't allowed to do anything with this talent in her grandfather's household. Whereupon, Oakie immediately starts his campaign to remedy situation for his daughter, only one who can see him because she is of his own flesh and blood, and finishes job neatly before his widow joins him in the spirit world.

Camera combines with the script in building up fantasy motif, Oakie walking through doors as easily as automobiles run right through him. Plenty of hilarious scenes accrue from this trick photography by John P. Fulton, and fantasy is sustained throughout due to the effortless manner in which it is played by cast and handled by Charles Lamont in his direction.

Oakie, who co-stars with Peggy Ryan, does yeoman duty with his role and makes a ghost holiday out of part, Miss Ryan turning in an equally notable performance with her comedy and dancing. Miss Vincent, beautifully photographed by Charles Van Enger, is lovely as the wife and mother; Lockhart and Devine turn in their customary top portrayals. Arthur Treacher and Irene Ryan are standouts in roles of butler and maid, respectively, and particularly outstanding is dancing of Johnny Coy, as Devine's son. Buster Keaton is in briefly as head of complaint department in heaven, and Edith Barrett and Victoria Horne capably round out supporting cast. Dance ensembles staged by Carlos Romero rate high praise, and other technical credits are on a par.

Film Review

Youth On Trial

(Melodrama)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Ted Richmond. Director, Oscar Boetticher, Jr. Original screenplay, Michel Jacoby. Photography, George Meehan. Film editor, Gene Havlick. Art direction, Jerome Pycha, Jr. Set decorations, Louis Diage. Assistant director, Ivan Volkman. Sound engineer, Lambert Day.

CAST—Features Cora Sue Collins, David Reed, Eric Sinclair, Georgia Bayes, Robert Williams, Mary Currier, John Calvert, with Boyd Bennett, William Forrest, Muni Seroff, Florence Auer, Boyd Davis, Joseph Crehan, Edwin Stanley.

REVIEWED at the Orpheum, Los Angeles, May 15, 1945. Running time: 59 MINS.

"Youth On Trial" is a topical feature that manages considerable interest and suspense despite a familiar theme. Production values are better than might be expected from a secondary programmer budget. The playing by the younger members of the cast is able and direction keeps things moving. While "Youth" might have had a better run for its subject had its release been some months back, it still adds up as okay dual bill material.

Plot poses the juvenile delinquency problem and places the blame on parents and civic governments that do not do their share in supervised activities. Cora Sue Collins, daughter of a respected femme judge who's campaigning for aid to youngsters, becomes involved with the town's bad boy in a raid on an unsavory night spot patronized by 'teen-agers, a subsequent murder and flight from the police. Youth escapades finally convince diehard city fathers that solution is up to the adults. Script also brings in efforts of student bodies to achieve high moral standards for students.

Miss Collins does well by her assignment, as does David Reed, the bad boy who causes most of the trouble. Eric Sinclair and Georgia Bayes are among the other younger players who are okay. Outside of Mary Currier, the judge, cast grown-ups do not appear to much advantage.

Oscar Boetticher, Jr., directed the Ted Richmond production from the original screenplay by Michel Jacoby. George Meehan's camera work, the film editing by Gene Havlick and other technical credits are expert.

AIR FORCES SHORT OF TOKYO RAID THRILL-PACKED

"Target Tokyo," the Army Air Forces filming of the bombing of Tokyo by the B-29's of the 21st Bomber Command, was press viewed yesterday and given premiere showing in the Conference theatre in San Francisco last night.

The picture, a 20-minute short, is a documentary record of the B-29's from the time they left the training field at Grand Island, Neb., through the completion of their first mission—the bombing of the Nagashima aircraft plant in Tokyo. Careful selection and editing of the shots made by the Army camera crews, together with excellent narration by Capt. Ronald Reagan, lifts the document out of the straight newsreel class into the thrills of drama.

A brief insert shows the capture of Saipan and the building of the airfields on that island from which the B-29's took off for the Tokyo raid.

The unloading of bombs over Tokyo and the brushes of the huge Superfortresses with defending Jap fighters were shot by eight cameramen of the 11th Combat Camera Unit who flew over the target with the huge bombers. They included Capt. Charles S. Peden, Lt. Frederick L. Mollwitz, Lt. Woods W. Dieffenbach, Lt. Aldo A. Carano, Top Sgt. Marcus Goosey, Staff Sgt. Herbert B. Bauer, Staff Sgt. William C. Wilson and Sgt. Robert F. Williams.

The picture was made by the Army Air Forces Motion Picture Unit in Culver City. Sequences photographed in the United States were directed by Master Sgt. William Heath. Production was by Capt. Richard Goldstone, formerly of Metro, and script by Lt. Stanley Rubin. Lt. Rubin, formerly with Columbia, also was associate producer. He flew to Saipan to supervise overseas photography. Editing was by Staff Sgt. Arthur Nadel and Staff Sgt. Bert Kramer.

Film is scheduled for general release by the War Activities Committee and the OWI, through RKO, on May 24.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(CBS News Analyst)

San Francisco, May 15.—We must not underestimate the task before us in finishing Japan. It's estimated, for one thing, that it will take six months to complete the deployment of men from Europe and to amass the strength necessary for the big push. In getting ready for the Pacific D-Day, we have to move men and troops across distances three times as great as in the Atlantic, so that the carrying capacity, because of time, is reduced two-thirds. It was 84 miles from Dover to Cherbourg, and it's 856 from Okinawa to Tokyo, 1362 from Gaum, 1720 from Manila, 3397 from Pearl Harbor, and none of these bases compares with England as a staging base. The only modern installations able to properly handle the huge loads speedily is Pearl Harbor. It will take at least a few months to restore Manila, where the harbor is clogged with the wrecks of 150 ships, and dock installations have been destroyed. When we landed in Normandy and went through France, the Netherlands and Belgium, we had friendly aid. But when we land in Japan, we'll have no help from those on the shores and inland. And although the Japanese is not as modern a fighter as the German, he fights more fanatically. We've got a big job yet to do.

N.Y. POST BUY OF KMTR, KYA FOR MILLION NEARS CLOSE

Post, have set up a separate corporation to operate the radio properties. The Thackreys have Kuhn-Loeb backing, there being a kinship between Mrs. Thackrey and the Loeb family.

Sale price of KMTR is said to be $450,000, with the Frisco station to bring $550,000. If deal for Hollywood station is consummated, the FCC would be petitioned to change the call letters to KLA (Los Angeles).

Don Fedderson, general manager of KYA, who is expected to be named head of the two stations, declined to comment in Frisco. It was Fedderson who took the station two years ago with assets of $13,000 and deep in the red and turned it into a profitable operation. During the Hearst ownership the station's best year was an $89,000 loss. It was bought by a syndicate for $50,000.

KMTR reportedly has been on the market for some time since the stock ownership was straightened out. Ken Tinkham, manage of the station, and others have bid for the site, but the price factor has been the stumbling block. The Thackreys are said to have met the terms of the owners.

Bartley Crum, Frisco attorney, is reported handling the two deals for the Thackreys. The Post owners some time ago sought to buy the S.F. Chronicle as the Coast wedge, but the deal fell through. Another proposal has been made to the sheet's owners and is said to be under consideration.

UN CONCLAVE SLOWS DOWN TO TROT, COVERAGE THINS

there will not be enough news or picture fodder to keep the large delegation of men from all parts of the country here. By the end of the week it can be safely said more than one-half of the people who came on representing press, radio, photo and newsreels, will have left town and that by the middle of next week, unless something of importance should arise, there will virtually be a corporal's guard on hand to listen to and record what is going on.

The networks are starting to get their top commentators away from here already, and will leave the affair in the hands of their local staffs, but ready, if overnight notice of circumstances warrant their return.

FLANNERY GLOBETROTTING

Harry Flannery of CBS leaves Friday for Hollywood, and after a week there will head for New York to make a trip around the world for the network, under military guidance. He will, besides doing his Coast broadcasts, air a commentary for the entire network. William Shirer heads for New York on Monday. Eric Sevareid and George Moorad go to Los Angeles next Monday starting on one-month vacation and two-month leave of absence. Both are to write novels and magazine articles during that time as well as lecture around southern California. Should they be required here they will be subject to call by Fox Case, who, starting end of the week, will commute between here and Los Angeles.

Only CBS commentators to stay on will be Dr. Wallace Sterling and Dan Lundberg, who will be augmented by the local staff. Harry Maizlish has his KFWB crew commuting between here and Los Angeles, but for weekend purposes has them virtually intact here. NBC and Blue networks also are at low ebb on visiting commentators.

All of the wire services have sent more than 50% of their personnel back to their own operating bases, with the Time and Life crew also cut down a bit.

Plans are on for a plenary session and also commission meetings in the Opera House late this week, but the call is subject to 24-hour notification. Still lots of squabbling going on in committee meetings, with belief still prevalent unless the "Big Three" or someone of potent strength steps in to bolster matters, the meet will slow down to a snail's pace, and get very little page one space until something is accomplished, which might be around June 1, or after.

PLENTY ELBOW BENDING

Plenty of cocktail parties were going on today. The Army gave one prior to showing "Target Tokyo" at the Conference theatre. Lockheed also entertained at the St. Francis, with the press having Nelson Rockefeller and Mexico's Minister of Foreign Affairs, Ezequiel Padilla, as their main speakers at a special gang dinner tonight. State Bar of California and National Lawyers Club tendered dinner and reception in Palace hotel tonight for the UNCIO judges and lawyers of all nations.

Business at the United Nations theatre, due to early starting policy, is off again this week, so likely next week they will change it again to previews with one show a night, starting at 9 o'clock, as was done last week.

HALPERIN MEMORIAL SHOW GETS 55G FOR SANITARIUM

Chicago, May 15.—Hal Halperin memorial show, staged by Variety Club at Opera House here May 6, was described today by Richard J. Finnegan, publisher of the Chicago Daily Times, as the "greatest private charity show ever held in Chicago, and one that received more radio and newspaper publicity than any such affair ever put on in my 30 years in the business here."

For the record, also, actual take to date, with nearly all returns from club members in, reported in Variety of May 9 as "slightly over $50,000," is $55,283.40, which represents a sizeable down-payment on a new wing for La Ribida Sanitarium, to be built in postwar period.

GALLOPING HOOFS AGAIN BEAT OUT SWEET MUSIC

Race-hungry Hollywood forgot all about strikes and film shortages yesterday and flocked to Santa Anita, where the rhythm of galloping hoofs was heard for the first time in more than four years. Execs in motion picture and radio studios suddenly discovered urgent business appointments in the great outdoors and revived the long-forgotten problem, "Who d'ya like in the sixth?"

All the old Hollywood hoss players were there to risk a few bucks on the improvement of the breed, but this time there was an added touch of color in the crowd. There was a heavy sprinkling of soldiers and sailors, practically all of whom wore civilian clothes back in 1941 when the hayburners last galloped at Santa Anita.

Scenically the opening was different from those of other days when the park operated exclusively in winter and the track often was slow and the May flowers were still hanging around the seed store. Yesterday the sun was hot, the track fast and the infield ablaze with calendulas and other summer blooms, in addition to the summer finery that bloomed on the film femmes.

Opening program was a quickie production, produced on four days' notice with a hurry-up script. There was plenty of talent in the stables but none of the equine thesps had been sufficiently typed to permit accurate picking by the masterminds on the film lots. If there is a lull in picture production during the next 40 racing days, it will mean that the boys in the studios are studying form sheets instead of screenplays.

FILMS PLAY IMPORTANT ROLE IN JAP BOMBING

use of motion pictures," said a War Department announcement.

"The first Superfortresses operated at 30,000 feet to avoid Jap fighter action and anti-aircraft fire. But motion pictures made during the early Tokyo raids revealed that fighter activity was not the major threat it was first considered. Consequently bomber runs now are being made at altitudes as low as 8,000 feet, with a resulting effectiveness overshadowing all previous records."

Films also are credited with stepping up the tempo of fire bombing operations against Japan. Because of heavy smoke in the daylight raids, it was thought at first that fire bombs were not very effective, it was explained. Then films were taken on night raids and clearly showed leaping flames and large areas ablaze.

A railroad's roadbed has a lot to do with travel comfort. A well-built roadbed does away with annoying, sleep-disturbing bumps . . . like a boat breasting a choppy sea. It gives you "smooth sailing."

The kind of gravel used for roadbed ballast is an important factor. Union Pacific uses a special sturdy type of crushed granite which stands up particularly well under wartime's heavily loaded freight and passenger trains. Then, too, it acts as a "cushion," resulting in more comfortable riding and less wear on locomotives and cars.

Thus, even the ballast used on the railroad's roadbed plays its part in the efficient, 'round-the-clock transportation of troops and essential battle-line freight over Union Pacific's Strategic Middle Route uniting the East with the Pacific Coast.

★ Future "smooth sailing over life's highway can be assured by holding tight to the war bonds we now have . . . and, as an extra measure of economic protection, buying as many more as we can possibly afford.

SPU CONSTITUTION TO KEEP MEMBERS FROM RIVAL UNION

Constitution adopted by Screen Players Union provides for suspension or expulsion for members who join a dual or rival organization. It was explained this does not apply to members who do bits, parts and stunts holding A-J memberships in the Screen Actors Guild.

Section seven of the SPU constitution states:

"Any member of the Screen Players Union who becomes or remains a member of a dual or rival organization whose interests are contrary to the best interests of the SPU shall be subject to suspension or expulsion from the SPU."

While no organization was named, general belief was that section might be aimed at the Screen Extras Guild, which is competing with SPU for control of film extras. SPU has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board, but reports are that a charter will be granted to SEG by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent organization of the SAG and other entertainment locals.

Members attending general mass meeting of SPU gave a blanket endorsement to Mike Jeffers as business representative by voting almost unanimously to accept resignation of Prexy Harry Mayo, veepee Roy Brent and Secretary Lee Powell. Three in quitting had charged that Jeffers was setting up a dictatorship.

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, May 15.—V-E Day will have its effect in many different ways on Hollywood and its relations with Washington. Just sample checking with a few Federal officials around town produces these reactions: Nathan Golden, chief of the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce: Commerce is already preparing for the reopening of the foreign markets. Those still under control of OWI and the Army Psychological Warfare Branch will gradually be turned back to the industry which should be operating normally in the near future. Golden hopes for a free competitive market and feels optimistic about this due to America's position in the world.

Among the restrictive measures which Commerce hopes to see abolished are quotas. The position of American pictures should be far better than before the war and there seems every reason to expect good treatment in Italy, portions of which already are open to us. Before the war there had been little film business with Italy because of the government monopoly there, so that the opportunity should be very marked.

Francis C. De Wolf, chief of the Telecommunications Division, State Department: He also looks toward acceleration of our film distribution throughout Europe. He raises the question of what kind of pix we are going to send to Germany, which will probably be a joint industry-government decision for some time to come. His feeling is that films which would show democracy at its best would be most suitable. There is strong belief in Washington that hate films would do this nation a disservice.

One major question mark is Russia. The Russians are interested in an exchange of pix on a parity basis. In the past they have shown a preference for importing such "neutral" pictures as "Snow White" and "Bambi." It would be gratifying if we would get a better cross-section of our total production into that country.

Major Stuart Palmer, head of the Army feature film section: He predicts a renewal of certain types of Army-Hollywood cooperation. In recent months there has been a lull in features made with Army cooperation because of the fast-changing situation in the war in Europe. Palmer now sees a trend toward pix featuring Army problems in post-war Europe, rehabilitation, and even subjects dealing with the German atrocity camps. He anticipates fewer pictures made with Army cooperation but with plenty of cooperation on each.

Navy: Will undoubtedly step up activities, according to a spokesman. It will point up J-E Day, rather than post-V-E Day. It is speeding up with its policy to get its subjects before the public as rapidly as possible. This is to counteract any letdown on the home front.

Taylor Mills, OWI film chief: He sees a tremendous challenge to the industry now that the war is over in Europe.

One of the new technical processes developed during the war may possibly be the third dimension that motion pictures are looking for. This is the so-called Trivision process of producing stereoscopic still pictures developed by Douglas F. Winnek.

His process operates with a single lens camera and does not require a viewing device. The secret is in small vertical ridges embossed on the base side of the film. The Marine Corps is using the process for aerial photography in the Pacific and General Electric is conducting experiments with it.

State Department and other government officials attended the Freedom of Expression luncheon in New York today. It dealt with peacetime problems of communications, including radio and films. . . . Much of the credit for Washington's sober, orderly reception of V-E Day belongs to Loew's Carter Barron. He headed the committee in charge of arrangements for the capital's downtown areas, including the theatres and other places of amusement. . . . Sol Sorkin, manager of RKO's Keith theatre, the firm's showcase here, is now operating sneak previews in the house with considerable success. . . . Warners theatres here are again going to use the "Victory Bowl" stunt of bond prizes during the Seventh War Loan.

Here's the OWI-WAC lineup for the next few months: June 7—"Iwo Jima," the Navy two-reel tinter, edited on the Warners lot; June 28—Disney's "Something You Didn't Eat," made for War Foods Administration; July 5—"Report To the Nation" on the Frisco conference, when and if the State Department gives the green light; July 19—"What Every Veteran Should Know," which Universal starts shooting this week; Aug. 2—"Toscanini," originally made by OWI Overseas, and titled "Hymn To the Nations." Will be distributed as a Treasury subject; Aug. 16—National War Fund subject, as not yet scripted; Aug. 30—"When He Comes Home," to be made by Dore Schary on the Selznick lot.

Bond preems skedded for D.C.'s center-city theatres are: Loew's Capitol, "Salty O'Rourke," May 23; special moppet matinee at the Capitol—a new stunt for first-run houses here—"Son of Lassie," June 9; RKO Keith's will have "Enchanted Cottage" on June 4; Warners Earle will preem "The Corn Is Green" on June 27. . . . Walter Pidgeon, first of 10 stars named as associate regional chairmen for the Bond drive, had Canton, O., added to his schedule. He appears there tomorrow in a citywide outdoor Bond rally, followed by a brass hat banquet at night. . . . Treasury's 16mm. Bond program being given impetus by the appeal of Commissioner J. W. Studebaker, U. S. Office of Education, to school superintendents to volunteer their projectors and operators for use in their local communities. Department of Agriculture has sent a similar appeal to all county farm and home agents.

WB In Title Dispute With Loew Over Tag

Warners are understood to have filed protest with MPPDA against UA producer David Loew using title, "A Night In Casablanca," for his forthcoming Marx Bros. picture. They claim Loew's tag will conflict with their own "Casablanca," and impair returns from film which is still current. Loew contends there can be no possible confusion between two pictures, and points out that records show hundreds of title and locale duplications. Case is expected to come up for arbitration.

UA PULLING OUT OF HAYS SETUP SEPT. 21

United Artists yesterday announced it would resign from the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America on or about Sept. 21. UA bow-out from MPPDA is second to occur during past few months, Warners being slated to retire from membership June 1. Following statement was issued:

"In view of the fact that virtually all of the producers using the facilities of United Artists Corp. for distribution have joined the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers, the owners of United Artists Corp. have deemed it to the best interests of the company to resign from the MPPDA, the resignation to be effective on or about Sept. 21, 1945. They also have authorized United Artists Productions, the producing affiliate of the corporation, to become a member of the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers so that its trade association activities will be carried on exclusively through the association to which its producers belong and which its affiliate has joined."

GOV'T. TESTIMONY IN GRIFFITH THEATRE SUIT BACKFIRES

Oklahoma City, May 15.—Testimony of a government witness in the anti-trust suit against the Griffith theatre interests boomeranged in Federal court here yesterday, as the second week of the trial opened before Judge Edgar S. Vaught.

Robert L. Wright, special prosecutor for the Department of Justice, had Fred G. Vincent, former operator of the Petty theatre in Hominy, Okla., on the stand. Vincent, who is now with the War Production Board in Oklahoma, testified that his father-in-law opened the Petty theatre in 1923, a 1,250-seat house in a town of not more than 3,000 persons. After the death of his father-in-law, Vincent acquired the management in 1923. He told the court that in 1936 he had a disagreement with the film companies and at the same time, another theatre, the Ritz, was opened in Hominy. Vincent also stated that the Griffith interests had purchased 40% of the Ritz stock.

In 1940 Vincent decided to stop operating the Petty and it was leased to the Griffith interests. Upon cross-examination by Charles B. Cochran, chief of counsel for Griffith, Vincent disclosed that Hominy was over-theatred for a town that small and that was his reason for wanting to get out of show business.

However, the government did get over some damaging testimony yesterday in its effort to prove that the Griffith chain is operating monopolistically in alleged violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Wendell Bearden, who erected the Tech theatre in Lubbock, Texas, with P. E. Smith in 1936, stated that he was running third and fourth run films. He also testified that in 1938 he was approached by two Griffith representtaives who wanted to buy him out. Bearden quoted a Griffith official as saying that they were going to control the Lubbock theatre business if they had to build a new show house. Bearden then offered to sell for $20,000, but was offered only $10,000, which he rejected.

Then, Bearden disclosed, the Tower theatre, a 1,300-seater, was erected just two blocks from the Tech theatre and started to show second-run films, which prior to that time had been shown only in downtown theatres.

The government charges in the case that Griffith Amusement Co., and Consolidated Theatres, Inc., of Oklahoma City, and R. E. Griffith Theatres, Inc., and Westex Theatres, Inc., both of Dallas, Texas, are operating monopolistically in restraint of trade and should be dissolved as theatre chains.

lationship between films and television was Klaus Landsberg, director of Television Productions, Inc., a Paramount Pictures subsidiary. He predicted that eventually television studio equipment and facilities will influence the design and use of motion picture equipment.

Austrian's talk dealt with film—the backbone of television programming, and resulted from several years of producing live talent shows for the see-hear medium. He presented facts and figures to show why film and film techniques are better suited than live talent for the majority of television studio programs.

Landsberg pointed out how motion picture production and television broadcasting industries can be of great mutual aid to each other, and compared the requirements of the two media. Going into the design of post-war television equipment, Landsberg said that it must embody more eye-appeal than motion picture equipment because it will be constantly before the public at special events as well as in the studio. He said that functional design need not be unattractive and will provoke confidence so essential to television now.

During the war television had to do the best it could with equipment on hand. As a result, many improvements have been developed by broadcasters in the course of actual operations, which design engineers have not had opportunity to study yet, according to Landsberg. He illustrated the point with pictures of control equipment along radically new lines which he designed and recently put into operation at station W6XYZ. This equipment reflects the influence of the motion picture studio, and represents a gradual evolution toward greater simplicity and serviceability under the stress of actual operating requirements, he said. Equipment can be moved from studio to studio with the mobility of the present sound control equipment in motion picture studios, or can be loaded into a three-quarter-ton truck for field work. He also showed pictures of his new link transmitter design that features compactness and simple operation.

Landsberg declared that better television reproduction has been obtained by the use of negative film rather than positive; that is, negative reversed into positive by electrical means during transmission.

In predicting that eventually television studio equipment, etc., will influence the design and use of film equipment, Landsberg said that while mobility and flexibility of television facilities are not essential, they likewise will be essential to motion picture production. Most important, he said, it will result in decreased production cost and more economical quantity production of films so vital to television programming.

Another feature of last night's sessions was the discussion of prefabricated theatres by R. H. McCullough of National Theatres. McCullough told of the advancements made in theatre design by his company and touched on advantages of the pre-fabricated house for future construction. National Theatres prefabricated theatres will come all equipped for television programs and contain other up-to-the-minute technical developments.

CHI LEGIT UNIONS THREATEN LIGHT OPERA WALKOUT

Chicago, May 15.—Summer operetta season here may be halted, if the threatened strike of Association of Theatrical Agents and Managers is backed up by IATSE, American Federation of Musicians and Actors Equity. Unions are talking about walking out of the Civic Opera House because of dispute between James C. Thompson, operator of the house, and ATAM.

Thompson has refused to sign a basic agreement with ATAM on the reputed grounds that he wants to keep the right to hire men of his own choosing. His own manager, Herb Carlin, who only received his union card two weeks ago, was pulled off the job last night.

Civic Opera House opened Monday night with a production of "Du Barry Was a Lady," in which Thompson is associated with the Shuberts. This is first of series of operettas planned by them for the summer.

Unions are kicking up a fuss, according to Ollie Saylor, business agent of ATAM Local 18032 in New York, because Thompson hasn't signed yet, although Carlin himself is a Thompson appointee. Issue, as far as Thompson is concerned, is not over Carlin but over the union forcing him to hire a union man not of his own choosing in case Carlin were to leave.

"Thompson thought we were bluffing when we permitted the show to open Monday night, figuring we'd let it go by," Saylor said here, "but we're not."

Thompson is managing the house himself now, aided by Jack Manley, non-unionist, who was Carlin's assistant. Saylor indicated that unless Thompson inks the agreement, or at least signifies his good intentions by letting Manley apply for a union card, the other unions will walk out along with ATAM.

Remaining union members on the job are the Shuberts' Sam Gerson, flack for the operettas, and Harry Mirsky, company manager. Saylor's explanation for not pulling them out is that "the union doesn't have any fight with the Shuberts."

SHORTAGES HOLD UP THEATRE BUILDING, PERMITS TO 124

Washington, May 15. — Reason no additional civilian film theatre construction will be authorized in the near future is a critical shortage of seating, textiles, projection and sound equipment, WPB announced today.

Less important reasons are listed as lack of manpower in tight labor areas and an insufficient supply of some construction materials.

WPB issued its explanation because an increasing number of applications to build and outfit film houses have been coming in since D-Day and for some time before that.

"The applications evidently resulted from erroneous beliefs that current WPB relaxation of some controls affected all phases of civilian needs," commented the WPB. At present, it was explained, there are no facilities for the manufacture of theatre seats and textile coverage or for projection equipment for commercial use. Although projection and sound equipment is at a very high peak, it is almost all gobbled up by the armed forces, with a little left over for replacement of worn or fire-damaged civilian theatre equipment.

Up to the end of last month, WPB has received 263 applications for theatre construction. of these, authorization were given to 124 to replace structures destroyed by fires, tornadoes, floods, etc., and material has not been available even to handle all these authorizations.

WPB also announced revocation today of L-267 which controls production and distribution of photographic equipment and accessories other than 35 mm. projectors. However, material will be short for this equipment for several months it was explained.

MEACHAM DEBATES DATE FOR NLRB FILM ELECTION

Date for election of studio set decorators will be fixed by Stewart Meacham, regional director of the National Labor Relations Board here, within the next two or three days. Groups representing the Conference of Studio Unions, IATSE and producers discussed election with Meacham yesterday, but were unable to agree on a date for the balloting.

Director Meacham suggested Sunday, May 27, between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., at the NLRB headquarters at 11 W. 7th st., but it is understood there was some objection to conducting the balloting on Sunday. It was reported the IATSE was reluctant to submit a list of strike replacements who will vote, Attorney Michael Luddy indicating they might be attacked by "goon squads."

The IATSE was represented by Attorneys Michael Luddy, Judge Matthew Levy, Roy Brewer, B. C. (Cappy) DuVal, with Attorney Homer Mitchell and Fred Pelton heading producer group. Herbert Sorrell, Attorney Frank Pestana and Ed Mussa appeared for the strikers.

FILM LEADERS SEE FAVORABLE SIGNS FOR PROD, GROSSES

New York, May 15.—United States picture industry leaders, charting a course for future operations in the domestic and foreign markets, last week found that disturbing factors arising after V-E Day are partially balanced by the favorable prospects for production, distribution and exhibition in the months ahead. For the first time since Pearl Harbor the shadow of wartime shortages of labor appear to be lifting.

Film executives do not look for any sharp decline in box office receipts or film rentals before the last quarter of 1945, if then. A dip in grosses is expected, of course, but 1945 still is a war year. Any real drop is expected to come later, possibly in the last quarter of this year or early in 1946. The unemployment problem, with its direct bearing on picture theatre grosses, is expected to loom large after the Japanese war.

The industry does not look for any real reduction in film production costs, but a gradual decrease is likely, certainly no increase.

Corporate earnings are expected to decline in 1946 because of reconversion as war work is cut, and then eliminated altogether. However, the picture industry has no reconversion problem.

POUND PER PERSON IN CLOTHES DRIVE

An average of more than one pound for every individual employed in the industry was collected in the studio campaign for used clothes for Allied relief, it was announced yesterday by Chairman Ginger Rogers. In announcing her appreciation of the work done, Miss Rogers said that garments and shoes picked up and processed by authorized agencies for the United National Clothing Collection amounted to 32,566 pounds.

Lead in contributions was held by 20th-Fox, with 8,000 pounds. Warners was second with 5,522, and Universal next with 3,008.

LLOYD DROPS PLEA FOR CRIMINAL ACTION VS. U

At request of Harold Lloyd, Federal criminal complaints, charging Universal with copyright infringements, was withdrawn today.

Harold A. Fendler, attorney for Lloyd and the Harold Lloyd Corporation, said his clients desired early decision of their civil suits against Universal growing out of the alleged infringements. The criminal investigation, he said, would have resulted in indefinite delay.

Lloyd is asking injunctions and damages totaling $1,800,000, charging that Universal's pictures, "Her Lucky Night," "She Gets Her Man," and "So's Your Uncle" violate the copyrights on the Lloyd pictures, "The Freshman," "Welcome Danger," and "Movie Crazy."

HOPE, LANGFORD SCRAP HEADS FOR ARBITERS

Arbitration in the Bob Hope-Frances Langford controversy over the singer taking a summer show was imminent yesterday with the filing of a complaint with American Arbitration Association by Martin Gang, attorney for Hope. An answer has been prepared by I. B. Kornblum, representing Miss Langford.

Dispute arose over the singer signing a contract with J. Walter Thompson to head up the Chase & Sanborn summer show with Spike Jones, assertedly with the verbal approval of Hope, who holds an exclusive personal contract with Miss Langford. This is denied by Hope, who is said to have told her he would have to get the client's assent to such an outside arrangement, but she signed with the agency in the meantime. The sponsor, Pepsodent, Stewart Meacham, NLRB regional director, declared each side will have the right to challenge voters, that an investigation of challenges will be made by the local NLRB office and recommendations submitted to Washington.

• HOLLYWOOD INSIDE •

MEXICAN players are rapidly beating down a smooth path between this country and Republic to the south, with constant commuting. Pedro Armendariz left week ago to take over lead in "The Pearl of La Paz," but will return here to start male star role in Hunt Stromberg's "Dishonored Lady" early in July. Arturo de Cordova, who recently returned here after starring in Mexican picture, treks south again in three weeks for another fling down there, and Esther Fernandez is reported about to come north again. Dolores del Rio, according to advices from below the Border, may soon leave Mexico City for New York, to do a play there, and Jorge Negrete is another actor expected in Hollywood soon. Cantinflas may soon arrive here, too. Fortunio Bonanova, Spanish actor, helps swell plane companies' purses with his frequent commuting between Hollywood and Mexican capital.

MUCH favorable comment is pouring into Universal publicity department from both exchange managers and exhibitors throughout country for novel press books which department recently devised for its "Inner Sanctum" series. Press books, which have been pretty stereotyped down through the years, are issued in form of snappy tabloid, with scare heading, and give X-men and exhibs reported incentive to do double duty plugging series.

V-E DAY, far from softening travel difficulties, is apparently only making them tougher. Rail accommodations that had been fairly easy to obtain are now difficult. Acts needing passage only to Chicago go through all sorts of grief to get space. East-West travel situation is expected to become increasingly headachey.

raine and Argentina will be officially seated and make their formal speeches. Also at this and the Saturday sessions commissions will make reports to the delegates on various matters they have been shaping up for incorporation into the final plan for security of the world.

Attending these sessions will not be so many gate-crashing "press" as at previous meetings of the United Nations Conference for International Security. Mike McDermott and his press staff of the State Department have gotten a line on the "tourist press" that came in at earlier meets as "press," and the new green plenary session cards were issued most sparingly today. The yellow cards are outlawed.

NO RUBBER WALLS

With around 50% of the press already having departed, there will be an abundance of working room for the laboring press in the Opera House at the resumed sessions. The public, of course, will get in. State Department has around 75,000 applications for seats, and with only 2,000 allowed in for each of these sessions, there will be plenty of effort to do inside wire-pulling to get the ducats. But McDermott and his crew are going to resort to "protocol" and the first applicants will get the ducats.

Delegates here are planning various side trips over the weekend, with plenty of dinner parties being planned for them as well. Cocktail parties can keep a person busy making five to six stops between 5 and 7 o'clock any night. Big one tonight was held by Office of Inter-American Affairs at the Bohemian Club. Then Sunday the press will have a gala day at the Bohemian Grove, with press Club that evening putting on a revue burlesquing the conference and its leaders at the Curran theatre. As at Gridiron dinners in Washington, no printed comment or review goes on the show.

THAT H'WOOD SIDE TRIP

Many of the delegates are having consuls in Hollywood make arrangements with the studios there to visit them at the conclusion of this meet, which should be early in June. There should be at least 1,000 of the visitors from foreign shores getting a gander at the studios and stars after this shindig winds, before they return home.

Blue Network commentators start the fade routine with Baukage and his assistant, Pauline Frederick, returning to Washington tomorrow. Miss Frederick from there heads overseas as accredited woman correspondent for Western Newspaper Union, heading for Africa, Burma and India on June 1. Jean Wright, also General Pierce and his aide, Edith Sherrick, head for Hollywood on Friday, with Johnny Johnstone going south on Sunday to handle the Winchell show.

'Without Love' Chalks Up 170G In Four Wks.

"Without Love," Metro's Spencer Tracy-Katharine Hepburn starrer, closed its four-week run at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz theatres with approximately $170,000. Four-week take is above the non-holiday average for Metro films in the trio of day-daters considering that "Without Love" was screened during the midnight curfew period. All-night operation at the LA and late shows at the other houses would have added approximately $15,000 to total.

TRIPLE-THREATER KAYE TOPS PANTAGES WAR BOND PREEM

Danny Kaye and his Pabst Blue Ribbon airshow will headline combined radio-film War Bond premiere at the Pantages theatre Friday, May 25. Program will be all Kaye, with the comic starring on stage, screen and radio, since his latest Samuel Goldwyn production, "The Wonder Man," will be the Bond preview film for the evening. Event is the second of seven such radio-film premieres arranged for Hollywood blvd. theatres in conjunction with the Seventh War Loan campaign.

Admission will be limited to Bond buyers only, including members of the show to be played on the Pantages stage. With Kaye will be Harry James' orchestra, Eve Arden, Benny Rubin and Ken Niles. Tickets for the 7:30 p.m. performance will be available to purchasers of Bonds at all Hollywood first-run theatres, banks and leading stores. Future Bond preems are being lined up for Warners Hollywood, Grauman's Chinese, Egyptian, Hawaii and Guild theatres on the boulevard.

All-star War Bond show at the Wiltern theatre last night played to a capacity house. Returns in bond sales are not tabulated but because of unusually large buys beyond the scale of $100 to $5,000, total gross for the Treasury Department is expected to compare with any other strictly War Bond event yet staged locally.

A last-minute substitution in the all-star cast had Sid Fields working with Lou Costello instead of Bud sprained his back severely and was spraied his back severely and was unable to attend. Program got underway with a warmup before the one-hour show, which was recorded, and was followed with an afterpiece before the bond preview of "Enchanted Cottage" was screened. Among those appearing were Bing Crosby, Costello, Shields, the Andrews Sisters, Rise Stevens, Paulette Goddard, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Carl Hoff and orchestra, Don Wilson and Ken Niles.

Jimmy Durante and Garry Moore will do their regular broadcast June 15 from the stage of the Fox Beverly theatre, playing to an audience of Seventh War Loan Bond Buyers. "People Are Funny" airshow is scheduled to emanate from the stage of the Westlake theatre, with date to be announced later.

New York, May 16.—Children's War Bond shows set for the "Showmen's Seventh" campaign already total 1,599, a 60% increase over the 1,000 total staged during the entire Sixth War Loan, it was announced here today by Tom J. Connors, national distribution chairman for the drive.

Connors also reported 3,756 War Bond preems so far set for the Seventh, compared with 4,575 for the entire Sixth, and 7,619 Free Movie Day pledges as against 9,703 during the entire Sixth.

Washington, May 16.—"All-Star Bond Rally," Hollywood's film contribution to the Seventh War Loan, will play to the largest audience of any short subject in history, Tom Baily, WAC Hollywood coordinator for the Treasury, said here today.

He said the picture would be shown in virtually every theatrical house in the U. S. and Canada, as well as being shown to the Army and Navy overseas. It also is included in the Treasury's 16mm. program.

Ted R. Gamble, head of the Treasury's War Finance Division, who was another of the speakers addressing a luncheon of government film workers, said that the measurable exploitation given to the drive by films, radio, press and outdoor advertising amounts to about $30,000,000, of which pictures are donating upward of $10,000,000. He stressed also the growing importance of 16mm. films for Bond drives and other jobs, declaring the 16mm. field was producing the "greatest single effort" of the drive in the film business.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(CBS News Analyst)

San Francisco, May 16.—We at least begin the German occupation under circumstances more wise than last time. Doenitz continues to operate but under allied direction and only until the surrender details are completed. The last time we recognized a German Republican government under Ebert; this time we will occupy the whole country with allied military government in control. The last time Germany was able to sign an armistice, retreat with her armies back into the Reich and retain a hundred thousand men; this time she is completely disarmed. Now we must do a better job on the war criminals. The last time we put nine hundred on the lists and ended with German judges in German courts issuing sentences that varied from a few months to four years. This time it is important that we carry through, and that we also are just. Justice can take care of sufficient Nazis, Junkers and Industrialists without our raising a hue and cry over every German. Willie Messerschmidt, for instance. There's no question about those Industrialists who helped set up Hitler, but we must consider the record on men like Messerschmitt. A war producer, per se, is not guilty no matter what use may be made of his products afterward. Unless we operate justly, sternly and hard, but just, we will be behaving like Nazis, and we will have sown the seeds of another war.

The letter was held up at NBC and Gracie didn't receive it until last week. Two hours after she got the letter a wire arrived saying the boy had died. Gracie was most upset and sent a letter of condolence to the boy's mother. The woman answered with a request that Gracie send her a record of "The Lord's Prayer." LIGHT AND AIRY

You'll hear it batted around wherever writers bend the elbow and from the tone and temper of the mouthings radio has something to worry about. Why, they want to know, does a top air scribbler always cock an ear for a picture deal once he's talked about in the trade or rated in the four-figure payoff class? The answers would stretch from here to Azusa but one or two don't fall far of the mark. Offers one of the scribes who recently made the celluloid leap, writers in radio just aren't appreciated and their work is taken as a matter of course. Another calls it the prestige that attaches to writing for the films. More to the point, we believe, is the beating a writer takes in radio, turning out a fresh script every week. Writing for pictures is not timed by days but weeks and deadlines rarely start the butterflies fluttering among the innards. The coin angle doesn't figure, they agree, for radio's pay to its top journeyman far exceeds initial picture remuneration. The average writer starts in the studios somewhere around $600 and to the same type of performer in radio $1,000 a week is not out of line. What's radio going to do to hold its creative artists, they parry, painting a grim picture for the future. Cloak them with prestige, shower them with gold and emblazon their names in the billing? That might do it but it won't stem the flow to the sprocket factories as long as they toil in Hollywood. For a writer to say, "I'm working in pictures," satisfies a certain ego in him and once that is overcome it won't be necessary to shackle him down to his typewriter at home. He'll stay put once radio can be made attractive to him in its more social graces.

It's interesting to note that Ray Bolger is finally to get his chance to prove what the trade has long believed, that he is one of the most promising emcees among the "sleepers." But it remained for Hay McClinton and Herb Sanford of N. W. Ayer to spotlight the opportunity and give him a reasonable trial. In the 10 weeks' absence of Jimmy Durante and Gary Moore he'll keep the Camel spot puffing away and unless all signs go wrong he'll carve a niche for himself in the kilocycle trick. As a microphone personality he lacks none of the elements important to success and looks set for a new career in show biz.

STATION BREAKS . . . Ray Noble heads up the summer replacement for Frank Sinatra with his music and guest singers. Original plan was to have Bill Goodwin and Axel Stordahl carry on. . . . We hope the report isn't true but there's a rumor around that G. Allison Phelps is coming back to KMTR under sponsorship of Clinton cafeterias. . . . Despite its high Hooper on the Blue, Jergens-Woodbury has ordered an overhauling of "Hollywood Mystery Time" cast. . . . Skinny Johnson's "Tonight in Hollywood" for Jergens have averaged off a 9.3 over a three-month spread. . . . Armour has decided against a summer siesta for Hedda Hopper. . . . Carol Stewart, onetime CBS sound effecter, will do the warbling on the Marlin Hurt summer replacement for Al Pearce.

Radio has proved itself an almost indispensible medium in the dissemination of American good will in foreign lands, especially to the south of our borders. This much was proved during the European war years and brought to sharper focus at the United Nations meeting in Frisco. John Ogilvie's radio setup in Office of Inter-American Affairs has performed superlative service in spreading the good word through the 20 Latin-American republics and that's going to be important to American industry. It is highly possible that within a short time such government agencies as OIAA and OWI will be merged into one organization or at least considerably shrunk fiscally. Someone is going to have to carry on the public relations job these organizations have so firmly planted and if it isn't the government it must be private enterprise. Radio and films will have to carry the torch if the Latins are to be cultivated as good neighbors and better yet to be solidified as buyers of American goods. International public relations were given new birth in Frisco and the government may yet realize its importance in the postwar world.

Spotlight Bands are coming back to Don Lee-Mutual June 18 and it doesn't require any clairvoyancy to know who engineered the move. The fine Italian hand of Ed Kobak is seen through the mist and that augurs well for the young network. In his brief career in radio, Kobak has proved a tower of strength to his two network associations and is one of the more astute salesmen among the newer execs. Given free rain and solid cooperation by Mutual's so-called prima donnas he'll keep the network on firm keel and make its competition felt commercially as well as in other elements of the operations.

HITCH HIKES . . . Bobby Armbruster wants to know if they've auditioned a summer replacement for Lew Pollack at the Derby. . . . Don Bernard flipping cues with his left paw after fall from a ladder in his rose garden. . . . Clifton Webb, Adolphe Menjou, Warner Baxter or Bart Marshall will be in the lead bracket with Cass Daley when the audition record is made. . . . Jack Benny will compete for Hooper points with "The McGee's" May 29 when he does "Please, Charlie" on "This Is My Best." . . . Frank DeVol, one of the busiest maestros in town, is making 20 special arrangements for Harry James and tapping the beat on "Truth Or Consequences." . . . Arnold Stang is playing the dumb stude on the Kay Kyser campus. . . . Miss Lee Williams, radio director of Fuller, Smith & Ross, due out next week with Manny Rosenberg of Transamerica for the two Ethel Barrymore airings from Earl Carroll's. . . . Dinah Shore goes hospital touring from June 7 to July 10.

DEFENSE SCORES IN GRIFFITH THEATRES TRUST ACTION

Oklahoma City, May 16.—Cross examining of two government witnesses by Attorney Charles B. Cochran gave the defense two good blows in the anti-trust suit against the Griffith Theatres chain in Federal Court here today before Judge Edgar S. Vaught.

Second witness of the eighth day's session was A. A. "Speedy" Moulder, in theatre business in Sapulpa, Okla., since 1900. After testifying on direct examination that the Griffith interests had assertedly threatened to put him out of business unless he sold to them, Moulder, under cross-examination by Cochran, admitted that L. C. Griffith once came to him and said: "If any one has threatened to put you out of business he was not authorized to do so."

Most of the day's session was spent with John Gray, former operator of the Rivoli in Enid, Okla. Gray said that in 1939 he came to Oklahoma City and conferred with Claude O. Fulgham, who he believed to be a director in one of the Griffith chains. According to Gray, he talked with Fulgham about selling his theatre. "I quoted him a price and he refused." Gray testified, "saying he would pay the open market price." Defense attorneys objected to the testimony because Gray did not establish what connection, if any, Fulgham had with the Griffith interests and Judge Vaught ruled that testimony would be considered only if a connection was definitely established.

On cross-examination of Gray, Defense Counsel Cochran apparently attempted to show that former did not remain in business very long at one place. He had Gray testify that he was a former Griffith employe and had managed the Mecca at Enid until July, 1935. After that Gray, under Cochran's probing, traced his theatre jobs down through the years in various Oklahoma towns.

SEG WILL GET 4A CHARTER WITH COMPLETE SUPPORT

150 members of the SEG organizing committee in the Masonic Temple, Heller declared the Four A's will give its full support to the new organization.

The following statement was issued by the international board of the Four A's:

"In order to ensure all motion picture extras democratic control over their own union affairs, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, after thorough investigation of the extra situation, has decided to give full support to the SEG and will issue a charter to the Screen Extras Guild following an election of officers and directors, according to conditions previously outlined by the Four A's.

BOTH ORGANIZATIONS INVITED

"The Four A's invited two organizations to apply for a charter for an extras' organization, Screen Extras Guild and Screen Players Union, with the stipulation that to qualify for a charter, the organization must meet the following conditions:

"(1) All former B members of Screen Actors Guild to be eligible for membership without payment of initiation fees and without discrimination or recrimination.

"(2) Democratic constitution and by-laws to be acted on and approved by members of the new organization and subject to approval of the Four A's international board.

"(3) Election by secret ballot for board of directors and officers of new organization to be held in 60 days, with all former Class B members of Screen Actors Guild desiring to belong eligible to vote.

"Screen Players Union ignored the invitation from the Four A's. Screen Extras Guild accepted it.

"To the best of our knowledge, the invitation from the Four A's was never presented to the membership of SPU.

"The Four A's is not willing to turn over control of the union affairs of approximately 4,500 extras to a group which is not representative of the extras.

"The Four A's has the responsibility and is determined to maintain its union jurisdiction in the entertainment industry.

"The Four A's believes the charter to be given Screen Extras Guild will afford all extras the opportunity of deciding their own affairs.

"We have arranged with the California State Federation of Labor to assign C. J. Hyans to assist Screen Extras Guild in organization work and an office will be opened shortly. Membership application cards will be available for all extras.

SEG GETS FULL SUPPORT

"The new organization, Screen Extras Guild, can be assured of the active support of all the component parts of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, which includes the American Federation of Radio Artists, Actors Equity Association, Screen Actors Guild, American Guild of Variety Artists, American Guild of Musical Artists and Chorus Equity Association."

JEFFERS CLAIMS SPU FREE

When he learned that a Four A's charter would be given to the SEG, Business Representative Mike Jeffers of Screen Players Union declared:

"In issuing a charter to the Screen Extras Guild, the Four A's relinquishes jurisdiction over film extras and leaves Screen Players Union, which has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board, free to apply to any other AF of L international for a charter. Within a week the confusion of such action will be over. What good will a charter do the SEG when it can't negotiate for a contract? It apparently is accepting such an affiliation without even presenting it to the membership.

"The SPU is the only extra organization certified by the government to negotiate with the producers. We already have agreements with most of the independent producers and currently are negotiating with the majors."

Jeffers also announced that the SPU is preparing to ask the NLRB for a rehearing on its amended certification and will request that original jurisdiction over bits, parts and stunts be restored to SPU. He said the board will be asked to amend its certification to comply with the GI Bill, which guarantees veterans can go back into the same jobs they occupied before being called into military service. He said the NLRB amended certification would prohibit extras returning from military service from performing their old jobs unless they carried dual union cards.

CHI EDITOR RAPS EXHIBS WHO BAN ATROCITY PIX

Chicago, May 16.—Harsh criticism of exhibitors who refuse to show atrocity newsreels because of their policy of not wanting to show gruesome pictures was voiced today by E. Z. Dimitman, executive editor of the Chicago Daily Sun.

Dimitman, only Chicago newspaperman included in Gen. Eisenhower's invitation to inspect the horrors left behind by the Nazis at Dachau and Buchenwald, said the whole thing was the ultimate in man's inhumanity to man, also that it was the duty of every American citizen to view the results of the German policy of "work-starve-degrade-kill."

"All of us were disgusted, on our return, to hear that Gus Eysell, managing director of Radio City Music Hall in New York, wouldn't show the film," he commented, following an address before a luncheon group of 500 civic leaders, press and radio reps in the grand ballroom of the Palmer House.

"We had to look at the corpses and the living-dead firsthand, and I fail to see any reason at all why an exhibitor would balk at showing the newsreels. If they don't, they're making a fatal mistake, because the public must be made to realize through every means of communication what a horrible fate awaits those who let the Germans rise to their former power."

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, May 16.—The inter-union feud which not long ago caused the Mexican cinema industry to come to a standstill, apparently ended when the sections comprising directors, writers, actors and technicians, which had broken away from the S.T.I.C. (Cinematographers Union, controlled by the C. T. M. Labor Union), and, under the leadership of actors Cantinflas and Jorge Negrete, and cameraman Gabriel Figueroa, obtained official recognition as a separate union, the S.N.P.C. Production was resumed. But S.T.I.C. leaders threatened, then carried out different sabotage measures throughout the country in an effort to cause the dissolution of the new union and force the sections which form it to rejoin the S.T.I.C. The feud fires kept burning.

Yesterday cinema star Jorge Negrete was to sing at the Iris theatre. S.T.I.C. members, workers in the theatre, did not allow performance to begin, in spite of the fact that the theatre was packed.

This was a little too much for the actor members of the S.N.P.C. A meeting was immediately called. The S.N.P.C. ordered all Mexico City theatres closed until definite steps are taken to effectively stop sabotage of the S.T.I.C. leaders against those of the S.N.P.C. and the cinema industry in general. Both Cantinflas and Negrete were enthusiastically applauded during the meeting, but this state of affairs may cause another standstill in the cinema indlstry.

At a meeting last night of the S.N.P.C., union headed by cinema-star Cantinflas, it was voted that all members working at studios contribute 5% of the earnings to be turned over to actors and workers of legitimate theatres, as long as these remain closed by order of the S.N.P.C.

It also was approved that charges against S.T.I.C. be presented before the District Attorney.

Cantinflas was enthusiastically applauded when addressing union members.

Fidel Velazquez, of the C.T.M. labor union, declared that the C.T.M. has not interfered in last developments of inter-union war, as neither of the two unions has asked the cooperation of the powerful labor union.

FRENCH STARTING TO REBUILD FILM INDUSTRY

French motion picture industry is already launching a rehabilitation program and the Comite de Liberation du Cinema Francias has established an exchange bureau to hasten rebuilding of cooperation between the French and American industries, according to word received by the Hollywood Writers Mobilization. Louis Daquin, producer and director, who is general secretary of the French film committee of liberation, sent the message to the Mobilization and the Hollywood Council of Guilds and Unions in care of Emmet Lavery.

Daquin expressed the thanks of the French film people for the welcome Hollywood extended the French stage and film actor, Pierre Blanchar, when he was here last December as the guest of Charles Boyer. At that time the HWM and the Council co-sponsored a mass meeting honoring Blanchar and proposing the establishment of exchange committees through which French and American film people could reach a better understanding of each other's problems.

Daquin advised that a trade union bureau of foreign relations also is being set up in Paris by the film unions. In addition to the Daquin message, Henri Bergson, prexy of the French Syndicate des Scenaristes, has advised the Screen Writers Guild here of a pledge of cooperation between French and American film scriveners.

PROCESSING, COLOR FILM TALKS ON SMPE AGENDA

Society of Motion Picture Engineers launch next-to-last day of the 57th conference at the Hollywood Roosevelt today. Afternoon session will be given over to technical papers leading up to subjects on color film and new processing equipment.

Featuring tonight's papers will be "Practical Utilization of Monopack Film," by Charles G. Clarke of 20th-Fox; "The Printing of 16mm. Kodachrome Duplicates," by Ralph M. Evans, of Eastman Kodak Research Laboratories, and "Machine Processing of Ansco Color Film," by J. L. Forrest, of Ansco.

Army papers covered such subjects as "Army Film Distribution and Exhibition," by Major Robert A. Kissack, Jr.; "An Optical Cueing Device For Disc Playback," by Major Garland C. OUR CLAMS AND OYSTERS HAVE FANCY IDEAS!

Do they read the lush All-Year Club ads — and come to California? Yes — but not via slow freight. No siree — not these babies! Just a few hours after they're fished out of cool Atlantic waters, they're in one of those fast American Airliners — heading directly for Hollywood. Which means that when they're served you at Sardi's — they're just as fat and fresh as the moment they left the Atlantic waters . . . and extra-tempting in such specialties as:

- EASTERN OYSTERS — On the half-shell . . . fried . . . stewed . . . baked . . . or a la Rockefeller.
- EASTERN CHERRYSTONE CLAMS — on the half-shell, with Sardi's special cocktail sauce.

Our quantity of these eastern seafoods is limited, so we suggest you phone your reservation now! HO-2131 is the number.

NLRB SETS DATE FOR SET DECORATOR ELECTION

seek to vote as decorators, but it was reported last night the number is 53. It is understood that 52 set decorators, members of Local 1421, were employed in the major studios the day before the strike was ordered 10 weeks ago. There are 77 decorator members of Local 1421, but some of them were employed by independent producers and others were idle when the walkout started.

The NLRB directed that all decorators employed the day before the strike, as well as replacements, are entitled to ballot. Date and hours of election were announced yesterday by Director Stewart Meacham, following a conference Tuesday with representatives of all three groups, who have agreed to abide by the decision of the NLRB.

There was considerable discussion in labor circles yesterday over action of southern California Congressional delegation in demanding an end of strike, and criticism of delegation by the chairman of the L. A. Democratic Central Committee because they had assertedly attempted to intervene in a dispute between AF of L unions and tell the National Labor Relations Board how the election of decorators should be held. Telegram to delegation, signed by Chairman Michael D. Fanning, follows:

"I was very much upset, as were other Democrats, to find that you had seemingly permitted your name to be used in a way that favors one side in a jurisdictional dispute between AF of L unions.

"May I say that the War Labor Board, William Green, president of the AF of L; Harry Bridges and labor press generally have all condemned Herbert Sorrell for leading a strike in direct violation of the no-strike pledge given to the President. This strike has never had popular support among sincere labor people. It does not concern wages, hours or working conditions, all of which are far beyond those enjoyed by the average union member in other industries. Millions of dollars in wages have been lost because of this strike which has been branded 'no good' by every friend I have in the labor movement. I have talked with CIO leaders and other liberals, and not one of them is supporting this strike.

"Now, on the very day that the NLRB is to meet with representatives of the contesting unions to set an election, seven Democratic Congressmen from southern California, plus Gordon L. McDonough, come out in a statement suggesting that the NLRB should conduct the election. You must remember that the teamsters union, the IATSE and many other unions have done their utmost to keep the studios open and keep some 15,000 people working, while the other two or three thousand have been doing everything they can to shut down the studios. Every one agrees with your statement that the strike should be ended, but when you suggest the method by which the election should be held, it is an attempt on your part to influence a government agency which already has ruled how the election should be held.

"As the chairman of the Los Angeles County Democratic Central Committee, I know you would want me to bring these facts to your attention."

Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, sent a wire to California Congressmen declaring that action of Chairman Fanning had embarrassed other members of the L. A. Democratic Central Committee, since Fanning was an employe of 20th-Fox.

James Saphier and Tom Fizdale last night were reported pulling out of their deal to operate the Myron Selznick agency. Saphier and Fizdale took over the agency last February but since then certain factors are said to have militated against successful operatoin of the firm. Reported that Saphier and Fizdale would set up their own firm for representation of film and radio clients as soon as they wind up their affairs on the Selznick deal.

He will take testimony here today and then go east for further depositions. He is expected to make his decision in New York, where he will be held on other legal business. Controversy between Hope and his singing star resulted from her signing a contract to head up a summer show with Spike Jones for Chase & Sanborn. Kornblum & Austrian represent Miss Langford, and Gang, Kopp & Tyre is counsel for Hope.

BATTLE of the ballrooms in San Diego between Wayne Daillard's Pacific Square and Larry Finley's Mission Beach terpalace hit the news sheets at the beginning of the week. Finley has advertised his spot as "San Diego's New Home of Big Name Bands" for past couple of weeks. Daillard replied via the same method "Don't Be Confused, Pacific Square will continue to present 90% of all name bands." Daillard then continues with list of 27 topflight maestros under the heading "Coming During Ensuing Weeks." Mistake occurred in his advertising in that he does not have all the bands booked that he lists as coming. Several batoneers have been protesting. However, one not yet heard from who was listed is Eddie Duchin. Latter is now lieutenant in the Navy and, according to last reports, was at Iwo Jima . . . not with his piano.

AFRA stock performers recently organized as "The 12 Players Club" have been given a Saturday night spot on Columbia's coast network for a series of dramatic productions. First will be "The Lady and the Letters," written and directed by Ray Buffum. Wilbur Hatch directs the music and Jimmy Matthews does the announcing. CBS will sustain the series with lines out for a sponsor. Time slot is that recently vacated by Harry Carey's "Western Theatre of the Air." Group of 12 AFRANS comprises Lurene Tuttle, Bea Benaderet, Jack Moyles, Mary Jane Croft, David Ellis, John Lake, Cathy Lewis, Charley Lung, Edmund MacDonald, Howard McNear, Jay Novello and Herbert Rawlinson. Most of the players are used in supporting roles on coast to coast commercials.

CLIFF ARQUETTE'S "Glamor Manor" will be given another chance to whip up an eary audience for the half hour comedy and audience show on the Blue. After an eight-week vacation, Arquette brings his troupe back from east, the move being made by the client in deference to his wishes to broadcast from Hollywood. Series airs at 9 a. m. and if at the end of the six-week trial the audience problem again crops up the show will be moved back east where it is no trick at all to fill a studio at the noon hour. It is felt by both Arquette and the Benton & Bowles agency that the program is now well enough established to make it attractive to ducat grabbers.

NBC will girdle the globe Memorial Day to dedicate 20 hours of broad- casting to the memory of the war dead, beating the Japs and the success of the Seventh War Loan. Hollywood's contribution will be an hour show with film and radio stars, and as climax to the 20-hour observance of the holiday, Fred Waring's group in New York will present an hour musical program. From the net's opening at 5:30 a. m. until 1:30 a. m. closing every program will be integrated into the theme of the three-way observance.

Time will be blocked out for both specials, with commercials cancelled on two stations.

SHOWMEN'S 7TH ON NITE SHIFT

Total of 80 "On To Tokyo" mobile bond-issuing units are working the metropolitan Los Angeles area nightly as part of southern California showmen's Seventh War Loan campaign. Mobile units, under direction of Spencer Leve, are contacting war plants, firms, clubs, lodges and residential sections. They are manned by theatre personnel, Citizens Defense Corps and members of the Citizens War Service group.

Success of units so far has resulted in plan to send them to group picnics, church affairs, general community gatherings and large meetings where bond-issuing facilities are not available. In residential areas, units are assigned to a four-block section for house-to-house solicitations while truck sound systems broadcast 7th War Loan messages.

MONOGRAM RELEASE. Executive producer, Trem Carr. Producers, Jeffrey Bernerd and Kay Francis. Director, William Nigh. Screenplay, Harvey H. Gates and Sidney Sutherland. Original story, Sidney Sutherland. Photography, Harry Neumann. Production manager, William Strohbach. Musical director, Edward J. Kay. Technical director, Dave Milton. Supervising editor, Richard Currier. Recorded by Tom Lambert. Set dresser, Vin Taylor. Stylist, Lorraine MacLean.

PREVIEWED at Monogram studio, Hollywood, May 17, 1945. Running time: 70 MINS.

"Divorce" is a nicely turned out second-halfer and good enough to make top billing in the minor theatres. Kay Francis not only clicks in the rather lightly emphasized stellar role, but, in conjunction with Jeffrey Bernerd, has done a smooth production job.

Theme and plot of the story are standard, time-tried material but are saved from triteness by neat scripting and directing. Strongest appeal of the picture will be to the feminine portion of the audiences. The work of the two child actors of the cast, Larry Olsen and Johnny Calkins, and Helen Mack as their mother is of sufficient quality to rescue the somewhat corny children-and-estranged-parents situations from dullness.

A prolog of preachment on the evils of divorce is neatly produced and dramatized, but doesn't add anything to the picture. Subsequent story action fails to tie into this opener.

Helen Mack as the wife whose home is almost broken up by Kay Francis, turns in a top performance, and Bruce Cabot does excellently as the errant husband. Rest of the cast deserves equal praise and William Nigh's directing can be credited largely for the picture's entertainment values.

Both Barrels Blazing

(Western with Songs)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Colbert Clark. Director, Derwin Abrahams. Original screenplay, William Lively. Photography, George Meehan. Film editor, Henry Batista. Art director, Charles Clague. Set decorations, John W. Pascoe. Sound engineer, P. Faulkner. Assistant director, Wilbur McGaugh.

CAST—Stars Charles Starrett, with Tex Harding, Dub Taylor, Pat Parrish, The Jesters. Others in cast: Emmett Lynn, Alan Bridge, Charles King, Jr., Edward M. Howard, Jack Rockwell, Robert Barron. REVIEWED at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, May 17, 1945. Running time: 58 MINS.

Columbia hasn't done right by Charles Starrett or regular western fans with "Both Barrels Blazing." Action is nil with the exception of a few scenes, and the story, which could have held interest, is developed at a walk most of the way.

Starrett, a Texas Ranger, takes a vacation across the border into New Mexico to locate a large quantity of gold that had been stolen in his law bailiwick. Posing as a prospector, Starrett attempts to ferret out the loot. In between times he assumes his guise of the Durango Kid to clash with assorted outlaws. Gold finally comes out in the open when a crook uses an old panhandler as front to dispose of the coin, and Starrett makes his cleanup and rides back to Texas.

Aiding Starrett is Tex Harding. Latter also takes time out to become a sagebrush Sinatra on crooning of two numbers played by The Jesters. Dub Taylor is a comical sheriff. Emmett Lynn does an excellent characterization of the old panhandler, and Pat Parrish graces the femme lead. Alan Bridge, Charles King, Jr., Edward M. Howard and Robert Barron are among the chief heavies.

Derwin Abrahams directed the Colbert Clark production, and George Meehan photographed.

FIRST SCREENING IN N.Y. OF SURRENDER, DEAD DUCE

New York, May 17.—Films showing the formal surrender of Germany to General Eisenhower at Reims and action shots of the mob that surged around the dead Mussolini in Milan got their first New York screening today. Newsreels earlier in the week carried the story of the surrender of the first big group of Nazis in Italy.

The special newsreels issued here today highlight the capitulation of German armed forces to the Allies at General Eisenhower's schoolhouse headquarters in Reims. They also show General Montgomery receiving from General Von Friedeburg German peace offers covering all forces in northern Germany and Denmark and the unconditional surrender of this group 25 hours later.

Although lacking shots of Mussolini's actual execution, the reels revealed the treatment accorded the bodies of the dead dictator and his 25-year-old mistress by the angry mob in the piazza.

Loew Moves To Clear 'Casablanca' Rights

David L. Loew yesterday directed United Artists legal department in New York to request arbitration to clear rights to title, "A Night in Casablanca," which Warners is contesting as an infringement on tag of its "Casablanca." Warners contends proposed title of Loew film, which will star Marx Bros., will cut down proceeds of its picture, still playing. To bolster his claim, Loew has forwarded to UA 170 examples of duplication in titles, none of which reportedly has been contested. Loew is scheduled to start Marx picture in August for United Artists release.

Morros said he has signed Henrietta Schumann, concert pianist, for an important role and will build up a cast from a list of musicians and singers who have appeared on the Carnegie Hall stage. Picture will be an independent production.

(CBS News Analyst)

San Francisco, May 17.—The battle of Okinawa is approaching a climax with the storming of the three towns that are the key to the Japanese defense—Naha, Shuri and Yonabaru. Our attention now is mainly on the fighting in Naha, the western end of the line, but we are closing in on the other two positions as well. Shuri Keystone of the line in its center, is domniated by an ancient castle, home of the Kings of Luichui. Stretching out from the castle in all directions are tunnels heavily fortified and dug well underneath the ground. The Japanese general headquarters are believed to be at Shuri. We cannot presume that taking these three positions will mean the end of the Okinawa campaign because the Japanese can fall back to new positions, but we will have taken the main defense line.

EXPORT ASSOCIATION CONSIDERED FOR FILM PROTECTION

New York, May 17.—Presidents of major companies met today with foreign managers to consider drafting of an agreement to cover formation of an export association under the Webb Act. Association plans are a protective measure to combat anti-United States film legislation in any territory.

N. Peter Rathvon, chairman of the industry committee, stated that formation of the export association "is being speeded up" in order that the industry might be ready to function in any territory where legislation has been or may be enacted making it impossible or too difficult for U. S. firms to do business on a competitive basis.

Association will permit all American picture exporters to become members.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Broadway isn't "Boredway" anymore. The Gay White Way is aglow with light, and with the lifting of the curfew, men and women of the armed forces are once again mingling with civilians to have fun from midnight to yawning.

At the opening of the Starlight Roof, the first gala social function since V-E Day, formal dress was conspicuous by its flagrant display of diamonds and decolette. Virginia Peine Reynolds was very happy with her beautiful flowered print, until she spotted the same dress worn by a dowager of Helen Hokinson proportions! David Selznick came with Anita Colby, but spent most of his time commuting between the ringside and the phone booth. Irving Lazaar beaued Joan Castle. Joe and Jean Bigelow didn't miss a dance to Nat Brandynne's lilting tunes. Billy Wilder popped up from his Towers suite to say goodbye to Val Sherry, before shoving off for Germany.

DISA AND DATA: Gilbert Miller, whose road production of "Harriet" has been his only activity this season, shoves off for Paris as soon as priorities can be arranged, to buy several theatres and o.o. the foreign market for his usual crop of importations. . . . Margalo Gilmore submitted three chapters of the book she is writing about the experiences of "The Barrets of Wimpole Street" company overseas, and Harcourt Brace was so enthused about it, that they've skedded it for their fall list. Patricia Collings is editing. . . . Nedda Harrigan's phone hasn't stopped ringing since a local columnist with a misplaced sense of rumor reported Nedda and Lt. Josh Logan staging a New York reunion. That news-hound must be far sighted "on account of" Logan is still across the Atlantic in Paris. . . . With the closing of "Seven Lively Arts," Bea Lillie will take a brief holiday at Tallulah Bankhead's 16 acre estate in Bedford Village, before heading for her next show—the Chinese-Burma theatre. Bea is determined to go to Singapore, in the hope that she can find the body of her son, Bobby Peel, lying in the hulk of a ship at the bottom of the sea, so that she can bring him back to his native England to be buried alongside of his father. But none of Bobby's buddies, laughing at her gay buffoonery, will ever suspect her Pagliacci performance.

TURN ON THE SWITCH: Last fall, when Richard Krakeur produced "Sleep My Pretty One," he was most anxious to have Laurette Taylor in the star role. But he was talked out of it from all sides by the wisenheimers who warned him, "She's unreliable. She hasn't been seen on Broadway in five years. She has no box office," etc., etc., ad infinitum. So Dick, heeding the advice, grabbed Pauline Lord. The engagement lasted three performances. Small wonder that Dick is now surpressing a cynical smile at the news that Miss Lord will play in the road company of "Glass Menagerie," while you have to have an "in" with the management or scalpers to see Laurette Taylor, the newest toast of the town at the same Playhouse where a few months ago she was considered passe!

ITEMS DROPPED BY THE BROADWAYSIDE: Arlene Francis will soon be heading west to divorce Neil Agnew, and her intimates suspect that it won't be long before she reties the knot with Martin Gabel. . . . Henry Morgan dropped in at David Burton's the other cocktail hour and spent a half hour chatting with a young, attractive girl. When she left, Morgan turned to Burton and said, "Pretty scenery! What did you say her name was?" "Olivia de Havilland, you dope!" Burton enlightened him. Incidentally, "Livvie" is now a patient at Phillips House in Boston for a checkup on that maralia germ contracted in the Pacific. . . . Martha Sleeper is hurrying home from RKO to reunion with her groom, Lt. Harry Deutchbein, who's just returned from two years on the North African and Italian fronts. George Somnes is paging Martha to be his leading lady again at Elitch Gardens in Denver this summer, but her answer depends on her husband's future plans—and whether MCA can effect a salary tilt over last season's pay check. . . . Connie Bennett will have less than two weeks in New Yory to line up her writers for her five day a week daytime airer via the Blue, teeing off May 21st. So far, no format has been set, although one rule has been definitely agreed upon. No cosmetic account can be included in the co-op sponsorship, as competitors of Connie's own beauty products. To introduce her to the radio press gang, a cocktail shindig will be held at the Waldorf (17). . . . Samuel Hopkins Adams is arriving from his North Carolina home to be on hand for the launching of his biog about "the man whom came to dinner," "A Woollcott," which Reynal-Hitchcock is publishing next month. . . . Ward Morehouse's daughter, Ruthie, and her soldier groom, Jack Faulker, don't care that "people will say they're NOT in love anymore." . . . Nanette Fabray deserves some sort of an award for her pinch-hitting services. She's the gal who first arrived on Broadway when she took over Jan Clayton's part in "Meet the People." Later, she replaced Connie Moore in "By Jupiter," and now she'll substitute for Celeste Holm in "Bloomer Girl." Last season, when she created a role of her own, unfortunately she didn't hit the "Jackpot"—but it wasn't her fault.

Play will go into rehearsal as soon as Miss Davis is free from current film and is expected to be overseas before mid-summer.

SIMPP CHOICE OF NEW PREXY TO BE MADE IN TWO WKS.

formation of SIMPP and has been its first and only president. He did unusually difficult tasks for the organization during his term of office, but he is understood to have resented bringing into the body as special counsel Morris Ernst, New York attorney.

Wright, who is a straight-from-the-shoulder operator, is known to have told various SIMPP members that he was no office boy nor would he be subject to rough treatment. He has extensive motion picture law practice and sacrificed personal interests to devote time to various difficult problems. His resignation is reported to have been turned in at the last SIMPP meeting in Hollywood. Though Selznick made no mention of Wright's successor, it is likely that Sam Goldwyn would sponsor the post for Ernst.

Selznick talked on various subjects today. He stated he has had cable correspondence with J. Arthur Rank and though he has not talked deal with him, will meet the English capitalist in Hollywood shortly. Then he stated that he at one time considered taking over Ross Federal Service offices for a distribution organization, but that is out now.

Commenting on the Hollywood studio strike situation, Selznick declared the indies are taking a beating on the big studios' attitude toward the strike, since the big lots are better equipped with manpower, settings, etc., than the single operator.

He declared there is no possibility of he and Sam Goldwyn forming a company; also that with the current producer-actor setup he can take over a distribution company and operate it himself without outside product contribution. His plan is to make four to five pictures for the 1945-46 season, and stated that "Spellbound," the first to be released in the new season, would open at the Astor here on Labor Day, and probably elsewhere before in four or five situations.

Switching again to the SIMPP group, he declared it is determined to take steps to set up its own organization so as not to be caught in the middle as in the current studio strike situation. He said SIMPP had no intention of departing from the Breen code endorsement, as it is "healthy for the business as a whole." However, he thinks the code should be revised by an industry committee every few years, and that the industry should abide by it.

Prior to ending his talk and announcing he was leaving for the Coast next week, Selznick dwelt on the foreign situation. He said the status of U. S. pictures is dependent on the farsightedness of the industry abroad, and that it is necessary to have a film "secretary of state," a man of stature, to handle the foreign post-war situation. He also said the industry, to successfully deal in the foreign mart, should have "little less ego, fewer statuettes and more statesmanship."

CRITICS AND CROWDS AT THE ORPHEUM THEATRE CAN'T BE WRONG ABOUT

THE ANDREWS SISTERS "8-To-The-Bar-Ranch"

DAILY NEWS
DAVID HANNA SAYS:

"Apparently Los Angeles is a city not easily cowed by the cultural advice of Harvard university—if the standees at both opening performances yesterday of the Andrews Sisters' '8-to-the-Bar Ranch' revue represent local opinion."

"For yesterday's Orpheum crowd found the Andrews' show very much to its liking, a speedy, entertaining revue whose only accent was a combination of Texas and Brooklyn."

"Without being persistent about it, the Andrews sisters are very definitely the stars of the show. Patty performs as mistress of ceremonies—bringing on her relatives and fellow performers with easy graceful introduction as beguiling as her own affable personality."

"'Apple Blossom Time,' of course, is the girls' signature tune and as they amble through it and others in their repertoire of close harmony numbers one is struck by the fantastic number of melodies they have introduced in the comparatively few years they have been variety and film headliners."

"The girls use a western set as a background for this stage presentation of their radio show company. With all the members done up in sagebrush regalia, the picture is more colorful than the ordinary variety performance. The thought seems to suggest itself that the girls really might 'round up' some business if their film producers would use them in an '8-to-the Bar' movie."

EXAMINER
NEIL RAU SAYS:

"For the first time since the Andrews Sisters started making their annual trek to the Orpheum the public has the chance to hear enough of their singing at one session in their 'Eight to the Bar' show so as not to go away disappointed."

"Heretofore the girls have made such brief appearances that audiences have practically knocked themselves out calling for more, but this time they open the show and ring down the curtain. And during the hour-long show they cover the field as far as their most popular tunes are concerned."

"The gang works so well together that it strikes you right off that their efforts could be tied up into a neat package deal as the basis for a corking movie."

"The girls, of course, form the backbone of the show, with their three separate appearances."

" 'Eight to the Bar Ranch' turns out to be an ideal spot to visit for a tuneful period of relaxation."

HERALD-EXPRESS
GEORGE JACKSON SAYS:

"ANDREWS SISTERS 'EIGHT TO BAR' RANCH SHOW IS 'MUST' "

"In your search for a pleasant hour of diversion you must include the Andrews Sisters' Eight to the Bar ranch show on your list. The show, a smooth running affair, opened yesterday on the Orpheum stage and when your reporter left the attendants were setting up guide lines for expected capacity crowds for the balance of the week's run."

"Don't imagine that this is regulation vaudeville, with the singing trio coming on for the star spot. No sir, the show is opened with Vic Schoen's swingy orchestra playing 'Apple Blossom Time,' and from that tune on the girls take over."

"They bounce on to sing 'Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy,' follow up with 'Don't Fence Me In' after a session of kidding, and then Patty, the honey-haired one, takes the master of ceremonies spot."

"Of course, the main attraction is the swinging of the Andrews Trio and in addition to their opening tunes they also offer 'Every Time I Fall in Love,' and a cleverly arranged medley of their records which have been among the best sellers for many years. Biggest fan reaction was to the final number of the sisters, 'Rum and Coca Cola,' with the patrons edging up closer to get the lyrics."

"Taken as a whole, the show will delight fans of the Andrews Sisters and furnish relaxation for an hour for nearly all followers of this type of entertainment.

CARPENTERS, TOOLERS PAY WEEKLY STRIKE BENEFITS

Machinists and carpenters have started paying strike benefits to pickets, officers of Carpenters Local 946 declaring word had been received from Prexy William Hutcheson that aid would be forthcoming from the international for duration of the walkout. Carpenters are receiving $10 weekly when they picket nine hours, while machinists get paid, $20.

Members of Local 946 also voted down a proposal to appoint a special committee to investigate the strike strategy committee and general situation, stating they were well satisfied with current leadership and had complete confidence in men directing affair. James Skelton is business representative of carpenters, Charles Sproul prexy, and Joseph Cambiano international representative. D. T. Wayne is business head of Studio Machinists Local 1185.

Wayne denied that larger numbers of studio toolers are returning to their jobs. He said a few had gone through the picket lines and that appropriate action was being taken against them. It was reported many of these were machinists who had been forced off jobs at Mitchell Camera Co. for failure to pay $5 strike assessments.

Both the IATSE and Conference of Studio Unions were making preparations for National Labor Relations Board election of decorators on May 24. Prexy Herbert Sorrell declared yesterday that every strike replacement vote will be challenged and the person asked to prove his qualifications as a set decorator. The IA, on the other hand, is expected to challenge votes of striking decorators on the grounds they have been discharged and no longer have jobs in the industry.

With Prexy Richard Walsh and other IATSE tops due here, it was believed international was preparing new move to strengthen its hold on film work in line with Walsh's announcement that studios would be kept open and producing pictures. Company heads continued to express satisfaction with developments, saying many more pictures now are before the cameras than before the strike was called 10 weeks ago.

Town Minus Top Cafe Show

Sacramento, May 17.—Closing of Donovan's Cafe of Nations Saturday, April 12, leaves Sacramento without a first-class night club offering floor show and dinners for first time in nearly 10 years. Last owners were Borrah Minevitch and Monroe Goldstein, who ran into trouble with city authorities on gambling, employment of musicians under 21, and other troubles after buying out Frank Sebastian. Principal local spots left offering dancing and dinners are Mocambo, El Rancho and Swing Club, but all are outside city. None offers floor show.

Trem Carr, executive director, tops the list of representatives taking the Chief East tomorrow.

'RAVIOLI CIRCUIT' TROUPES WIN GI ACCLAIM

Bob Reynolds, attached to the XV Fighter Command somewhere in Italy, has high praise for show folk who cross over to entertain the GI's. In his weekly column for the command's newspaper, "Sortie," Reynolds has this to say:

"With the passing of one USO show and the advent of another, a soldier's emotions run the gamut like a barometer registers a hurricane. For with every show come people from home, and those people span the ocean for him and for a brief moment transplant him imaginatively to his beloved United States. Night after night the boys from the audience would flock to the stage and gather around the permers, asking the same questions, literally in unison.

"Those swell kids who come over here to entertain us deserve a bouquet of kisses and thanks. It's a tough grind for all the USO entertainers and all they ask is an appreciative audience. I've seen those audiences—in forward areas, in hospitals, in rest camps, in large cities, and in out-of-the-way posts — and their great appreciation for what the USO and the War Activities Committee is doing is hard to describe." He adds that the "Night of January 16th" USO show is making the rounds of the "Ravioli Circuit" and should reach his headquarters soon.

SEG OFFICERS WILL BE CHOSEN AT MASS MEET

A general mass meeting of film extras will be called shortly to elect officers of Screen Extras Guild, which has been advised it will be given a charter by Associated Actors and Artistes of America. It is understood that all former B members of the Screen Actors Guild will be permitted to ballot and that they will be accepted to membership without payment of an initiation fee.

Issuance of charter by Four A's is certain to result in a tiff between SEG and Screen Players Union for union control of players. SPU has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as official bargaining representative for players, but SEG is expected to ask the certification be changed.

SEG sponsors declare NLRB certification directed that SPU represent all extras, but claim members have been refused admittance without payment of an initiation fee and that they were not allowed to ballot for selection of officers. They insist this was a violation of the certification and grounds for its revocation.

GRIFFITH TRUST SUIT TO TAKE RECESS UNTIL AUTUMN

Oklahoma City, May 17.—Government's anti-trust suit against the Griffith theatre interests will recess May 24 until probably some time next autumn under an agreement between government and defense attorneys. Case starts its third week of trial Monday, running through until Thursday.

Today, the ninth day of the hearing, was given over principally to direct and cross-examination of the government's witness, Mrs. Juanita Berry, widow of Ray C. Berry, who opened the Campus theatre in Norman, Okla., in 1928, and the Oklahome there in 1930. She testified that when her husband's lease on the Campus expired in 1938, the building owner leased it to Griffith instead of renewing.

On cross-examination the defense attempted to show that the Berrys had trouble with the owner from whom they leased and that they were delinquent in rental payments at the time Griffith secured the lease.

The suit is being prosecuted by the government in an effort to dissolve the Griffith Amusement Co. and Consolidated Theatres, Inc., of Oklahoma City, and the R. E. Griffith Theatres, Inc., and Westex Theatres, Inc., of Dallas, on the ground chains have acted in restraint of trade and in alleged violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

'World,' 'Whistler' in First Run Houses

"Tomorrow the World" and "Power of the Whistler" have been booked into the Guild, United Artists and Wilshire theatres, to open May 24 following two-week stay of current bill. Next for the trio of daydaters will be "Flame of the Barbary Coast" and "Earl Carroll's Vanities."

FRISCO MEET COMES TO LIFE BUT EARLY JUNE FINALE SEEN

two weeks—the first since May 2—will be held Saturday morning. This will be a commission session, there being four commissions set up for the conference, a brand new thing for this confab, and offering a contrast to the past plenary sessions which for the most part were just setting up the rules under which the boys would play and saying who could be in on the game.

Newsreel cameramen were busy today getting historical background shots of the Philippine, Greek and Australian delegations, which are being made by the American motion picture industry They can expect real action in the Opera House Saturday morning with this "first" and maybe the radio boys can get a bit of something good too for network or even international broadcasting since this session will give the first public squint at much of the real behind-doors work of the many conference committees. Saturday's session will unfold reports on the new world court.

Since the departure of Molotov, Eden and company—with the parade of world-famous big shots who are naturals for either pictures or radio—the newsreelers have been doing routine shots of delegations and sweating out the chance for breaks that don't seem to come, while the working commercial camera crews have been cut almost in half. The radio boys have been getting plenty itchy, too, with magnificent facilities and nothing to put over them.

A spot checkup today shows NBC and CBS coverage on the conference down to about one-third of first week, with the Blue claiming its volume still up to half the original time used. NBC still had local commentators Elmer Peterson and Larry Smith specializing on the conference, with E. B. Canel and Richard Harkness also going strong, the former for Latin-America.

PRESS STICKS IT OUT

While radio personnel dwindles there's no perceptible change in the volume of press representation, although new faces replace those that disappear, and the crowded Palace hotel, rookery of the fourth estate, seems as jammed as ever so far as the press is concerned. Plenty of beefs have been heard among the working press over the way in which news occasionally appeared to trickle out to favorites, but inside story appears to be that members of other delegations have intimate friends among the press, particularly the big papers that have constant embassy or foreign coverage, and tipoffs get to some of these friends.

Minor pressure groups continue their heat, but Johnny-come-lately press conferences appear to be progressively less patronized. The cocktail route grows spotty what with so many of the working members of delegations plugging far into the night and ducking any handshaking not absolutely necessary. For the guys and gals who do the work, the fine fervor of the confab has worn off more than a little, and talk of going home fills the air with the generally voiced hope, in quarters both high and low, that the job can be mopped up by the first week in June.

Meantime parties go on, with trips galore. San Francisco Press Club is readying its revue, "Friskiana," a strictly off-the-record sizzler at five bucks a copy for conference personnel only, for Sunday evening at the Curran theatre, with Barney Gould producing. The press gang will have a chance to see a mock air attack Saturday when the Delta Queen takes off on a day trip canceled last week due to low ceiling. And even the cowboy capital of Salinas is getting its place in the conference sun by inviting the press, radio and delegations to see its rubber fields—its guayule patches.

THEATRE TAX, DATING BILLS DOOMED IN SACTO

Sacramento, May 17.—The proposed 10% amusement tax and so-called "dating" bills apparently have been bottled up in committee here and there is very little chance of measures passing. The two bills were the most important to the film industry to come up at this session of the legislature and have been bitterly fought.

Amusement tax bill would cover all theatre tickets as well as other amusement admissions. The "dating" bill would provide that the year of release be displayed on every picture and carried in advertising.

Kent Redwine, representing the Producers Association here, did some effective work in stopping a number of anti-industry bills before they were even introduced, and now is keeping his thumb on the tax and "dating" bills, which have not yet been moved or set for hearing in committee.

Silen Stays In SF

San Francisco, May 17.—Helen Murray, KPO sales promotion manager, is leaving for another spot reportedly with NBC. Her successor is Hunter Scott. Bert Silen, NBC correspondent, who was imprisoned by the Japs in Santa Tomas, remains here as assistant manager of news and special events for the coast operation of NBC.

"It Had To Be You," based on Dorothy Kilgallen story, "Pygmalion Jones," is set for early production, William Goetz, head of Internationla Pictures announced yesterday.

SCRAP PRESS, RADIO CODES, EAST ON PEACE TIME BASIS

Washington, May 20.—Lifting of the lid on radio and press news by the Office of Censorship except for the Pacific-Asiatic area put Atlantic region news handling virtually on a peacetime basis today. Byron Price advised broadcasters and editors to scrap previous elaborate press and radio codes and issued a combined radio-press code for the first time. This code is boiled down to barest essentials. Heretofore, radio was under more stringent wraps than the press because it could be speedily monitored by the enemy.

National Association of Broadcasters issued a statement which reminded that:

"The American broadcasters thus far have made a success of voluntary censorship in this nation at war,

THREE newscasters bounded into elite circle of Hooper's Top 15, an offshoot of set-hugging during the washup of the Nazis in Europe. H. V. Kaltenborn placed ninth, Gabriel Heatter sprinted into 12th place and Lowell Thomas just got under the wire for 15th spot. Latest Hooper report also showed a new leader, "The McGee's," passing Bob Hope for the first time since Dec. 15. Other highlights show "Great Gildersleeve" having the largest number of children dialers per listening set; Nelson Eddy, Walter Wichell and Dinah Shore tied for the most femme listeners, and Lux radio theatre with the highest sponsor identification. Trailing "Fibber and Molly" and Bob Hope, in the following order, are Lux, Screen Guild Players, Joan Davis, Bing Crosby, Walter Winchell, Charlie McCarthy, Kaltenborn, Hildegarde, "Mr. D. A.," Gabriel Heatter, Abbott and Costello, Kay Kyser, Lowell Thomas.

AS a result of an extensive two-year study and tests by Warners publicity field representatives, studio reports 90% of exhibitors in West Coast territory are using company's press book ad mats without change. Old custom of cutting up exchange mats and adding personal touches by theatre managers has largely been discontinued because of research by traveling flacks. Questionnaires were distributed to accounts in western territory, and suggestions received were incorporated into streamlined press books, which accounts for small percentage of changes. On "Pillow to Post," for instance, just released, exhibitors were queried six months ago on treatment of ads for picture, what type they wanted and thought best suited to film. Following a study of their answers by home office advertising staff, rough drafts were circulated for final comment before final ad campaign was set.

SANTA BARBARA'S Lobero theatre is coming back into its own as break-in house for Coast legit productions. 600-seater, which was a popular debut spot during the late twenties and early thirties, has had three new Coast shows put on there during the past year. "Doll's House" and "Blithe Spirit" bowed earlier; while "Rain" took off to a paying audience over the weekend. Coast producers like the spot because the small house is highly flattering to any production, both in size, acoustics and lighting. Audiences there are also rated as highly show-wise, being versed in legit rather than music. With small capacity, producers do not come off the nut with their playdates in the house, but they feel the cost is well worth it, rather than take a show into either San Francisco or Los Angeles on a cold opening.

'VIOLET OF THE AP' OFFERED CAREER

Washington, May 20.—William Rankin, former Metro writer, has grabbed screen rights to "Violet of the AP," which appeared last week in Life mag. He also has invited 18-year-old Violet Gibson, AP copygirl in the House of Representatives press gallery, to Hollywood for a screen test.

Yarn, by Mary Hornaday of Christian Science Monitor, tells of the glib, gabby kid who has become a minor tradition on Capitol Hill with malapropisms that outdo Sam Goldwyn.

Violet says she and her mother expect to leave for the Coast within the next two weeks. All Washington can do is warn, "Look out, Hollywood! This kid is an unabashed tornado with the voice of a prizefight announcer."

When she received Rankin's wire, she dashed through the House press gallery waving it and shouting, "Hey, Charlie Chaplin and Errol Flynn, here I come."

She is definitely in the Olsen and Johnson tradition.

Escape In the Fog

(Melodrama)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Wallace MacDonald. Director, Oscar Boetticher, Jr. Original screenplay, Aubrey Wisberg. Photography, George Meehan. Film editor, Jerome Thoms. Art director, Jerome Pycha, Jr. Set decorations, Joseph Kish. Sound engineer, Philip Faulkner. Assistant director, Milton Feldman.

CAST — Features Otto Kruger, Nina Foch, William Wright, Konstantin Shayne, Ivan Triesault, Ernie Adams, with Mary Newton, Ralph Dunn, John Tyrrell, Charles Jordan, Noel Cravet, John H. Elliott.

REVIEWED AT Grauman's Chinese, May 18, 1945. Running time: 63 MINS.

"Escape In the Fog" is a nifty spy thriller, aimed to give solid satisfaction to fans of such high adventure doings. Sturdy production values have been dealt out by Wallace MacDonald, and Oscar Boetticher, Jr., has given plot fast, suspenseful direction to mark it as first class supporting feature. Script and good playing maintain interest against a background of San Francisco fog and war intrigue.

Original script by Aubrey Wisberg deals with adventures of William Wright, psychological warfare expert, in outwitting enemy agents who are trying to prevent his departure for the Orient with plans for underground operations. Involved with him is Nina Foch, Navy nurse on leave, who has dreamed of Wright's brushes with death. This dream sets the pattern for development of events after the two are brought together and proves to be the means of saving Wright's life and recovery of the missing plans.

Cast plays it straight and by so doing lends credence to the adventures. Wright and Miss Foch team excellently with good performances. Otto Kruger does well by his assignment as Wright's superior. Konstantin Shayne, Ivan Triesault and Ernie Adams are expert menaces. Others in the cast also appear to advantage.

Aiding melodramatic mood set by plot are photography by George Meehan, art direction, set decorations, etc. Jerome Thoms' tight film editing contributes to the fast pace.

RAIN

San Francisco, May 20.—When "Rain" splashed onto the Broadway stage 23 years ago, it shocked and thrilled playgoers because of its frankness and biting satire. It was also great drama in the south Pacific. With the passage of time greater dramas have been and are being played in the same locale. And "Rain," which opened at the Geary tonight, is just a driblet of its former self. It's a tired old mist by now.

The Ravel production has Gladys George as Sadie Thompson and a setting by R. L. Grosch & Sons to its credit. What is left both from an acting and direction standpoint is sheer dross. None of the case seems to have any knowledge of the theatre, save for Miss George, who is a standout in the role made famous by Jeanne Eagels. She creates a new Sadie, tempered to a fine degree by her own characterization of Carole Arden in "Personal Appearance." Yet Sadie is more of a lady than Carole ever could be.

When Miss George is not on the stage the play bogs down and reveals its contrived verbiage and plot through the ineptness of the supporting cast and Kent Thurber's mechanical direction.

Eire Played 800 U. S. Pictures In 1944

Washington, May 20.—Total of 909 films, 90% of them produced in the United States, were shown in Eire during 1944. Of this aggregate, 312 were more than 2,000 feet in length, 253 were 2,000 feet or less, 205 were trailers, 197 topical subjects, and 42 were educational. Some others were shipped into Eire last year, but were nixed by the censors.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(CBS News Analyst)

This is being written from Hollywood again. I've come back from the United Nations Conference at San Francisco, not because I want to, but because I must, because of another trip I have to make. Actually the San Francisco conference begins its most important sessions this week, and from now on will begin obtaining agreement on the provisions for the charter which will unite us for peace, as we have been united for war. Most of the newspaper and radio men you run into in San Francisco look upon this effort dubiously, although few of them, unless they are honest, put such thoughts down in print or voice them over the air. I cannot understand this attitude, unless it is a combination of the cynicism that is typical of Washington newsmen, and an idealism that does not recognize that we are not ready for the millineum, or that one man or one country's idea of heaven may be somebody's else's idea of hell. Actually, it looks to me as if we are getting much more at San Francisco than any realist had any right to expect before the conference began. Many of the best informed told me, before the conference, that we would not have human rights put down as objectives in the charter, but they're going to be there. Trying to work the Act of Chapultepec which might set up a principle that would divide the world into dangerous regions has been worked out in a way more favorable to international cooperation than originally seemed possible. Our obtaining the Pacific bases appeared, before the conference, to be completely incompatible with our aspirations to accord freedoms and opportunities to other people and to work together to maintain the peace, but even that problem is being resolved. And the correspondents are ignoring the development in San Francisco of a new and most effective means of representing the people in affecting foreign policy, the consultants. More about them later. Most of the correspondents in San Francisco may be down in the mouth, but it looks to me as if you can be most hopeful about what is done there.

FCC CLIPS STUDIO TALKIE BAND TO 18 CHANNELS

Washington, May 20. — Assignment of broadcast channels to film companies for location-to-studio transmission have been sharply whittled down by Federal Communications Commission in its final allocations on the frequency band between 25,000 and 30,000 kilocycles. Of the 25 channels proposed last January on a sharing basis, only 18 were given recognition. In its determination of channels there was no assignment for television and frequency modulation in the lower ranges.

In the 25-28 megacycle band assigned to the picture companies, six of these stations will be shared with relay press. In the band from 152 to 162 megacycles will be the other 12 sites on a sharing basis with geophysical and forestry conservation services.

Just as in the proposed allocations nothing definite is provided for theatre video. However, large chunks of the ultra-high spectrum will be used for experimentation in this service before any decision is made.

The FCC back-step from its original announcement that FM was to move upstairs to the 84-102 megacycle region marks a victory for the FM people who put up a terrific fight against the shift. They carried this battle to the Interstate Commerce Committees of the House and the Senate and generally made the Washington air blue with their protests.

FCC announced it will conduct tests this summer in conjunction with the broadcasts on three different areas of the spectrum—50-68 mc., 68-86 mc. and 84-102 mc., at conclusion of which tests FM will get the location in which its reception is best. Meantime video, which thought it was all set, is left up in the air.

Video has been slated for 12 channels for immediate post-war operation and was all set to go. These channels were in addition to experimental frequencies much higher in the ether.

Television still will get its 12 channels between 44 and 108 megacysles, but won't know where they are to be located until after FM is finally set. As a sop to the video boys, FCC has scraped together a 13th channel at 174-180 mc. which television also will be allotted for immediate post-war operation.

FCC said the delay will not hamper post-war development of FM and video. The commission said the WPB notified it that "the radio industry will not resume production of new AM, FM and television transmitters in 1945 or even in the first part of 1946" unless the Nips fold in the meantime.

By JACK HELLMAN

It has long been the better part of wisdom not to tamper with a success. Leave well enough alone seemed to be a solid format for the rating-conscious but every now and then someone comes along to kick over the traces. Such a situation again has come to pass and the adage-smasher is Woodbury. An overhauling has been ordered for "Hollywood Mystery Time," which is currently headed by Carlton Young and Gloria Blondell and directed by T. Wells. What the client is kicking around is only the highest rated evening half hour on the Blue (11.8) at a cost of around $2,200. True that it picks up some of its points from Walter Winchell and Louella Parsons but on the dollar breakdown it's a sweet buy. What the sponsor wants is bigger names and that means more budget but whether the point increase matches the coin outlay remains the speculative bug. In a nub, the sponsor is out to buy a rating but what's wrong with 11.8 on the Blue?

Gents like Walter Craig are rare in radio. Ask him what he's doing in town and he'll tell you he's paying off a debt to Cass Daley. As you well know this is no time of the year for the boss of the Benton & Bowles radio works to become conscionable of moral obligation, but all else has been brushed aside for the business at hand. Craig feels he's responsible for the comediene taking such a huge interest in radio at the expense of her picture career and now that she has had a full season of big time behind her he figures she's ripe to head her own show. So here he is to set up an audition, personally supervise the wrap-up and production and take the record back east to be examined by the firm's clients. And don't make book he won't sell it. With television so close at hand, and you name a better sight act, Craig's interests reach beyond AM broadcasting.

If you like involved situations, sit yourself down with Bill Lewis and John Swallow at Kenyon & Eckhardt and get a load of snafu on the Eddie Bracken situash. It finally evolved this way or, at least, something like it: If Bracken is called to the Army before end of his current cycle July 29, J. Walter Thompson agency must fill the NBC Sunday time until Fred Allen starts for his tea and margarine sponsor in September. If he is still around after July 29 he will be prevailed upon to stay on through August. If not, there presents itself the hazardous task of building a new show for four weeks, which is no pushover. While K & E loses the Standard Brands billing on Allen to JWT the agency will salvage something out of it, possibly a return of the "One Man's Family" account. Best trade guess on the Allen package price is $18,500 although the price tag on the initial pitch by William Morris was $27,500.

STATION BREAKS . . . Dunninger, the mentalist, Mitch Ayres orchestra and Anita Ellis, singer, will fill the 17 weeks on NBC while Amos 'n' Andy are away entertaining the GI's. . . . Haven MacQuarrie's Hooper jumped four points to 11.1 and there's talk again of networking his intellectual quizzer. . . . Alene Butcher joins Vic Hunter's Chicago operation at Foote, Cone & Belding today. . . . Norman Corwin's superb dramatics will be spotted by CBS in the first half of the Kate Smith hour this summer. New Marlin Hurt show for Tums takes the first half of the Lux span in July for eight weeks but where it moves for the remaining five of the cycle is Hal Kemp's headache. Helen Mack, who has so skillfully piloted "Date With Judy," will be at the controls. . . . Bert Prager has placed Hugh Herbert's "That's My Pop" with CBS as a summer sustainer for fall sale. . . . Gilbert Seldes, television program director for Columbia, due in June 6 to enlighten us on progress of the new technological art and survey Coast prospects. . . . Lewis Allen Weiss, vice chairman of the Mutual board, and Willet Brown, board member, in Chicago for directors meeting. . . . Cliff Arquette's sponsor has a 17-year hold on him—the current seven and an option for 10 more.

A mixed trade reaction is bound to result from the device, borrowed from pictures, used last night on NBC by Eddie Bracken and his producer, Mann Holiner. Although it is not practiced generally yet it is no innovation that they repeated a first show after four months. Last night's broadcast was a "playback" or reissue, as the cinematics know it, of Robert Riley Crutcher's kickoff show, which was widely acclaimed in the trade and teed up the series with a 16.3 Hooperating. Reasn for the repeat is that hundreds of requests have been received both by those who missed it and others who would like to hear it again. Both Holiner and Bracken will take immediate issue with any insinuations that the repeat was a cover-up for lack of an acceptable script for last night's broadcast. Playback of the opener has been in their crew for some time and the assumption is taken that audiences change with seasons and that those at the dials last night would make up only a small percentage of last February's listeners. There's also the possibility that it might serve as Bracken's swan song to radio before going off to war.

HITCH HIKES . . . Glenhall Taylor will be away from his desk at Y & R for six weeks on a combined wedding trip and business call at the New York office. He will be married today at Las Vegas to Mrs. Barbara Farlander Spencer. . . . Milton Samuel is schooling his flacks at the Blue in the art of photography and equipping each of them with a kodak. . . . Jack Benny winds up his season with Sunday's broadcast and then heads overseas with a USO troupe. . . . Hillman-Shane-Breyer's "This Is My Story" won City College of New York's first prize for the most effective radio program developed by an ad agency.

GINNY SIMMS MOVES TO CBS IN FALL FOR BORDEN

Ginny Simms switches over from Philip Morris to Borden's in the fall and CBS retrieves one of its singing stars from NBC. Deal was closed over the weekend by Young & Rubicam, which successfully withstood the pitches of several other agencies for both the account and the warbler. Show packaged, by Music Corp., carries price tag of $12,500.

Kenyon & Eckhardt is overturing the account with a comedy show, "County Fair," which may yet be bought for the Blue Network time being vacated by Jerry Wayne for the summer slot on CBS beginning July 6. The Simms show takes over the time either Sept. 28 or Oct. 5 and airs for the east at 4:30 on Fridays with a Coast repeat at 6 p.m.

Ward Wheelock made a strong bid for the Simms show, and Milton Biow sought to retain the singer's services for the cigarette account, but the creamery outfit's terms and time were more acceptable to MCA, which negotiated the deal for Miss Simms.

Miss Simms, former vocalist with Kay Kyser, last season had a five-minute singing spot on CBS for Kleenex. Format of her current show will be only slightly altered, with much of the guest talent being drawn from the ranks of returned GI's. Likely that "Cookie" Fairchild will continue to direct the music and a name comic may be added to the regular cast.

COURT ORDER HALTS TRIAL OF IATSE LOCAL 44 MEN

Trial of four studio workers accused of "acting against the best interests of the IATSE" was halted over the weekend after 21 members of Local 44 had enjoined Prexy Richard Walsh and the IATSE from proceeding with the hearing. Temporary restraining order issued by Superior Judge Emmet H. Wilson also enjoins Walsh and the IA from preventing regular meetings of Local 44 and from interfering with autonomy of the union.

Temporary restraining order is returnable at 9:30 a.m., May 28, but it was reported IA might seek a dismissal before that time. Four workers claim charges were preferred against them because they refused to take over jobs of strikers or workers who are refusing to cross studio picket lines.

In the meantime, rank and file members are demanding regular meeting of Local 44 be held tomorrow night. International seized control of local after its members voted against working outside their local jurisdiction.

One defendant had announced his candidacy for business representative in opposition to B. C. (Cappy) Du-Val, who currently holds post. Election was called off, rank and file being advised balloting would be postponed until international relinquished its control.

$300,000 To Exploit Warners 'Marines'

Budget of $300,000 for exploitation of Warner Bros. "Pride of the Marines," starring John Garfield, was set over the weekend following conferences of Jack Warner, Charles Einfeld, Ben Kalmenson and Mort Blumenstock. Most of the money will be spent on key city engagements. A special advertising budget will be earmarked for newspaper space above theatres' normal expenditures.

Demand IA Reveal List In Strike Vote

Attorney Frank Pestana yesterday sent a wire to the NLRB in Washington asking that the IATSE be required to file a list of strike replacements it will seek to vote in the Decorators election. Ed Mussa, business representative of Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421, declared the IA had announced list would not be submitted until the day of the election, scheduled for Thursday.

RUSSIAN LEADERS HERE FOR STUDIO EQUIPMENT

ported to spots in the Ural mountains for safekeeping.

However, the Russians protected themselves in the making of films by having studios in out-of-the-way spots, turning out entertainment and propaganda films that were not affected by invasion or attack. These studios were in Almaata in central Asia, Tashkent, central Asia; Tiblisi, in the Caucasian mountains, and in Sverdlovsk in the Ural mountains.

A Russian group will be in Hollywood this week to endeavor to purchase immediately about $2,000,000 worth of equipment, consisting of speed cameras, projectors and sound equipment that they want dispatched back to Russia as expediently as possible. They also will seek to make arrangements with Technicolor to get its cameras and equipment for a studio they plan building in the Crimea for color film making exclusively.

The damages sustained in Moscow and Leningrad studios were about 50% of the equipment.

Russians state that their country has no intention of competing in the entertainment market with American films. They will continue making mostly dramatic subjects, which have been of heavy entertainment substance, and also will go heavily on making of films that will be instructive in rehabilitation work in their own and Slavic-speaking countries.

Russia has sufficient technicians at present to continue operation of its studios, but it is likely that when all have been reconstructed, many technicians will be imported from Germany.

FUNFESTS TAKE EDGE OFF UN MEET FOR 'AMERICAN DAY'

San Francisco, May 20.—The entertainment industry and the press provided the real excitement today at the San Francisco Conference for International Organization, with the accent—outside the serious business of committee sessions and continuing huddles of the Big Five—very definitely on fun.

Two big shows, both spotlighting the conference with serious and almost spiritual overtones of dedication to peace and democracy, featured the day.

Governor Earl Warren played straight man to Jack Benny in comedian's weekly radio show, aired before overflow audience at the Civic Auditorium and broadcast both nationally and overseas, for the first of the two funfests. The second was a one-night stand at the Curran theatre of "Friskiana," a ribald topical show grilling the greats and featuring newsmen in hilarious roles backed by Waves, Wacs, soldiers, Marines and a thumpingly large aggregation of local night club and theatre talent.

Robed and burnoosed Sayed Gamil Daoud Al-Mussal, first assistant to the Secretary of State of Saudi, Arabia, and member of the Saudi, Arabian delegation to the conference, opened the Civic Auditorium "I Am An American Day" show, national observance of which was proclaimed by the late President Roosevelt in a proclamation issued shortly before his death.

Sgt. James Iannone of Brooklyn, Purple Heart winner and ex-Naxi prisoner, and Lieut. Herbert Gentry, Silver Star holder from Luzon, shared the spotlight with Governor Warren, chief speaker. Program also included local and state bigwigs, Benny's reinforced radio troupe and Ruth Hussey, of Hollywood, who gave a thrilling tribute to America's battle dead in reading "a soldier's letter to his mother." Corp. Cliff Engle, formerly of NBC, provided the vocal continuity. Art Roessner's orchestra and Army and Navy bands played for the 10,000 persons jammed into the auditorium. Rita Hayworth pinch-hit for Mary Livingstone, home ill; otherwise the entire Benny gang was on deck. Conference themes were bandied back and forth with heavy emphasis on the Russians in a humorous vein.

Even more members of foreign delegations than graced the afternoon show studded the San Francisco Press Club "Friskiana" show, with honorary press club member Helen Hayes as guest of honor.

Highlighted feature of the show was a San Francisco version of "The Front Page," rewritten and staged by permission of the authors. The Hildy Johnson and Walter Burns of the original casting were backed by all the original characters, played by Frisco newsmen.

The traditional Los Angeles-San Francisco rivalry was ribbed in several sequences, including one delicious ballet in which windblown Powell street cuties, representing Frisco, appared in sophisticatedly scant street clothes, while the chorines representing Hollywood appeared in dark glasses, plus slacks, beach garb or swim suits. Even Mayor Lapham played a role in one skit.

There were other socko acts, too, including a sensational tableau and song with fighting Marines duplicating Joe Rosenthal's Pulitzer prize winning picture of raising the flag over Iwo Jima and a United Nations final with U. S. soldiers, sailors, Marines, and soldiers from other United Nations lands, Waves, Wacs and Spars carrying banners of the 49 United Nations represented at the conference.

The music was sensational, or close to it, with a half-dozen good tunes written and arranged by Jerry Herbst, with lyrics by Jack Sharpe. Barney Gould produced and directed the production, Bill Shea of NBC was production manager, the Helene Hughes dancers supplied the choreographic highlights, and Jack Seltenrich directed the 20-piece show band.

On the serious side, however, work proceeded apace with a series of meetings held throughout the day, among them a session of Latin-American foreign ministers studying the Soviet's stand on regional security compacts, the United States delegation also meeting and, it is reliably reported, reaching final agreement on this important issue. Russia had okayed, in principle, the United States-Latin American plan on this point late Saturday.

Many Conference officials relaxed Sunday at the Bohemian Grove on the Russian River, getting set for a big day's work tomorrow when the all-important Steering Committee—representing heads of all 49 delegations—is to figure out ways of speeding up work, and 18 separate committee meetings are scheduled. Present goal of Conference is to wind up the task of drawing up the new world security charter by June 5—and going home.

FIVE PLAYERS GIVEN HOSPITAL TOUR SCHEDULES

War Department schedules for five Hollywood Victory Committee volunteers for tours of Army and Navy hospitals were received through USO-Camp Shows over the weekend.

Sonny Tufts opens a GI tour tomorrow at Darnell General hospital, Danville, Ky. He also has dates scheduled at Nashville, Memphis, Hot Springs and El Reno, Okla. Joseph Cotten leaves tomorrow for a week of visiting both Army and Navy installations on Puget Sound. A two-week tour through North Carolina has been scheduled for Marilyn Maxwell, leaving May 23, and three weeks of dates in the New York and Boston areas have been arranged for Ida Lupino in June.

Dinah Shore will spend three weeks in hospitals en route to New York, stopping off at Ogden, Glenwood Springs and Colorado Springs, Clinton, Ia.; Battle Creek, Mich.; Sampson and Utica, N. Y. Gale Sondergaard, Dan Duryea and Frank Fayen wound up hospital tours over the weekend, while Irene Dunne will close a week's tour in the Washington, D. C., area tomorrow.

Theatre Mgrs. Get New Problems On Curfew

San Francisco, May 20. — Where to get ushers, cashiers and doormen is the current headache for picture houses here resuming all-night shows following curfew-lift. Turnover in usherettes is terrific, Bill Sutherland, IATSE biz agent, reports. Some of the gals move out so fast they don't stop to pick up small pay checks. Army and Navy wives check in and work only until husbands ship for the Jap war.

MAIL 30,000 BALLOTS IN CHARITY VOTE

Approximately 30,000 ballots for the industry-wide vote on adoption of a single, individual charity campaign were delivered to unions, guilds and allied industry groups over the weekend and now are being distributed to the various memberships, the Permanent Charities Committee announced. About 300 ballots already have been returned to headquarters.

Edward Arnold, executive veepee of the Permanent Charities, announced the votes must be in the mail by May 30 in order to help decide the issue, which comes up for final action by the committee's board early in June. He explained that if the one-campaign plan is adopted, preliminary work must begin immediately.

Radio Network Plugs

Top plug tunes of the week, as logged over the major networks, NBC, CBS, Blue and Mutual, are being LISTED ALPHABETICALLY, not numerically, under a new accord between the music publishers and song pluggers union, as a means to curb the payola evil. Thus, it is figured, the normal competitive methods, sans artificial stimulation to get on top will tend to eliminate some of the petty bribery, etc.

BETTER READ THIS FIRST IF YOU'RE GOING ABROAD

Washington, May 20.—Picture industry people planning to head for Europe soon on business trips can benefit by tips issued over the weekend by the Department of Commerce on procedures for obtaining permission for foreign travel.

The department suggested that application first be made to the passport division of the State Department or to a local passport agency. Applications for visas should then be addressed to the nearest consulates of the countries to be visited. Transit visas also will be required to cross one nation in order to reach another.

Then the commercial traveler should write to the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Department of Commerce, for a foreign commercial travel application, which must be filled out and returned to the bureau.

This procedure covers only travel on surface ships controlled by the United States, or travel on neutral ships or on commercial air lines. Applications for transportation should be addressed directly to the operating companies.

WB TO BRANCH OUT IN SPECIALIZED SERVICES

Warners plans to build up a strong organization to take over when company withdraws June 1 from Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America (Hays office).

Washington representation probably will be handled by a special staff, including Ted Todd, who formerly was Warners Chicago publicity representative. Another force will specialize in exhibitor relations in every state in the country and every state capital where legislation originates. Members of this latter group will work out of different exchanges.

Policy of new organization is to anticipate trends before they occur, and to act upon them before they get out of hand. Constant surveys will enable company to look ahead.

Studio labor relations will be handled by special department, and Warners will make its own deals and sign its own contracts. Feeling in Burbank is that labor problems can be better facilitated by company's own bargaining agents who will make deals on Warners own particular problems, as against old practice of Hays outfit making a blanket deal binding on all studios, no matter what their individual needs may be.

Company will continue to use certain services of MPPDA set, including purity seal and list of accredited correspondents, it is reported.

JEFFERS SEEKS CUT IN ENTRANCE FEE FOR SPU

A bid for affiliation of former B members of Screen Actors Guild who have not yet joined Screen Players Union is expected to be made by SPU this week. Business Representative Mike Jeffers will recommend to the SPU board of directors at its meeting tomorrow night that current initiation fee of $25 be slashed to $10 for a 10-day period.

In the meantime, Screen Extras Guild was continuing its organizing campaign, following announcement that it would be given a charter by Associated Actors and Artistes of America. It was stated that charter would be issued as soon as a democratic election of officers is held. It was indicated that SEG will then seek a new election of film extras with the idea of nullifying the certification given SPU.

SPU, on the other hand, has announced it will seek a rehearing on its certification in an effort to have its original certification reinstated. Original certification gave SPU control of parts, bits and stunts, in addition to extra work.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

From the Shrine of Guadalupe, on the hill of Tepeyac, where in pre-Conquest times stood an Aztec temple to the mother of the gods, the voice of the archbishop of Mexico and the strains of a grateful Te Deum for Allied victory were heard, transmitted through radio station XEW.

Carlos Niebla of Metro's Mexico City office celebrated Victory Day with a gay cocktail party for the film colony; so did Alexander Gregory Pincus, at his Paseo de la Reforma home, under the flags of Mexico and the United States. His guests drank to the end of one phase of the war.

The Catalonian composer, well known to Radio Mil audiences, Antonio Diaz Conde, is in charge of musical score for the Aguila Films picture "Pepita Jimenez." The producing company offers a party at Ciro's Champagne Room this week for Director Emilio Fernandez, Spanish Star Rosita Diaz (very blonde and young at 42), and our borrowed-from-Hollywood Fortunio Bonanova. The following day director and cast will leave for location in Taxco.

Representatives of Metro and the Nacional Financiera are planning control of a chain of cinemas through Mexico and Central America, to exhibit the home product and Metro films. Capital invested will be 50% Mexican.

George Creel recently wrote: "After more than a century of heated discussions on every possible subject, twenty million Mexicans (our total population), are in accord at least on one: Cantinflas. The admired and beloved actor brings laughter to Mexican audiences; in private life he has an outstretched hand and a ready check book for those in need."

Mr. Creel is wrong. Of the 20,000,000 Mexicans, one small fraction does not agree with the rest. S.T.I.C. (Cinematographers Union) leaders still are fighting the cinema union headed by Cantinflas, whom they call a Fascist, and I very much doubt their love for the cinemastar.

* * * * * * * * *

Again President Avila Camacho has been informed regarding latest developments of cinema inter-union feud, by Undersecretary of Labor Manuel R. Palacios. One wonders if the President is too busy to do anything about it. Members of the S.N.P.C. union controlled by Cantinflas are hopeing he is not. Legitimate actors throughout the country are sending in complaints against the S.T.I.C. which has been barring them from theatres controlled by that union in Mazatlan, Monterrey, Fresnillo, Tijuana, Merida and other cities. In Mexico City theatres remain closed.

Cinemastar Emilio Tuero's voice has been hushed for a year. Radio audiences wondered why. Twelve months ago the cinemastar's little girl was dying. Tuero knelt before the Lady of Guadalupe, Mexico's dark Virgin. Tuero is very proud of his voice. He offered to silence it for a year. This meant the loss of some 50,000 pesos to the singer. His little daughter recovered. Emilio Tuero kept his promise.

Shooting of "Squadron 201" (the Mexican fliers fighting with Allied forces) has begun in Vera Cruz, with Lilia Michel and Domingo Soler in leading roles, Jaime Salvador directing. The Secretariat of War has offered all facilities to the producers. Cameraman Victor Herrera left for the U. S. to purchase necessary stock shots.

John McEvoy told reporters here he will soon be back to shoot exteriors for "Tahiti Atmosphere" pic. Apolonio Castillo, who won Mexico's swimming championship, will have important role but, most certainly, with a changed name. Who could possibly take an "Apolonio" seriously?

Magazine "Estampa" has chosen Manuelita Arriola as radio's most popular star of 1945. . . . Chilean cinemactress Alicia Barrie has been signed by Lumiton Films of Buenos Aires for one pic, after which she will return to this city. . . . Luis Sandrini, the Argentinian cinema's popular comedian, has been signed by our Filmex. . . . Ricardo Montalban back from Hollywood, with wife, Georgina Young. The stork is expected in August.

SECURITY RELAXED ON RADIO, PRESS BACK EAST

a success that is a glowing part of the important and vital total contribution of American radio toward the war effort and final victory.

"Continued cooperation in voluntary censorship and careful attention to security matters are necessary until the last shot is fired against the enemy—and there is no replying shot. We commend this necessity to the consciousness of every American broadcaster."

In general, press and radio can now tell of the physical setup or technical details of shipyards; movements of diplomatic exchange ships under direction of the State Department; movement of merchant ships in the Atlantic as soon as the military high command declares the Atlantic free of enemy submarines; ship-launching dates; weather information; information about war prisoners except those from the Pacific-Asiatic zone, and one or two other matters.

STRIKE ACTIVITY MAY BE CENTERED ON ONE STUDIO

Proposal that studio strikers change their strategy by throwing a picket line of 1,000 men and women around one studio at a time was made last night at the general mass meeting of film unionists at Hollywood Legion Stadium. Charles Barker, a member of Studio Machinists Local 1185, declared he believed a studio could be shut down in five or six days if this plan was followed. Proposal probably will be voted on at meeting of strategy committee with pickets on Wednesday.

Plans for national boycott of pictures and for expansion of news sales in front of theatres here were explained by Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions. Sorrell read a letter from Joseph Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor, on boycott, which will be sent to unions throughout the country.

It also was stated that Walter Harrison will leave for San Francisco tomorrow to discuss proposed boycott with locals. James Skelton, business representative of Studio Carpenters Local 946, reported a contribution of $5,000 by the Southern California Carpenters District Council. He said an appeal for financial aid for strikers also was being made to carpenters' unions throughout the state.

Carl Head, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, told group that election of Set Decorators will ease situation some, but that no crafts will return to work until contracts have been signed to replace those which were canceled by major studios.

There was little other activity as strike entered its 11th week. Both sides were making preparations for National Labor Relations Board election which is scheduled for 7 to 9 p.m. Thursday.

'HORSESHOE' LUCKY FOR 61G TO TRIPLE RUN

Los Angeles first-run theatres are dominated this week by sock $61,000 estimate "Diamond Horseshoe" is piling up at the Chinese, State and Uptown. Total outlook for current seven days among the 20 first-runs and moveovers is $265,000 or slightly better, despite holdovers in majority of situations. Slight drop in daily take at some theatres since last Tuesday is figured to have been caused by the opening of Santa Anita but strong attractions are more than holding their own against the bangtail lure.

NY LEGIT OPENING

BLUE HOLIDAY

New York, May 21.—Irvin Shapiro and Doris Cole brought their all-colored vaudeville revue to the Belasco tonight. The result was a melange of uncertainty in performance, routining and general accoutrements that constitute stellar box office.

Despite the starring of Ethel Waters, "Blue Holiday" hasn't a thing for Broadway. It has some fine performers in support, namely Josh White, Willie Bryant, Timmie Rogers, Katharine Dunham dancers (minus Dunham), Hall Johnson choir and Mary Lou Williams. But the sum is disappointing, mainly because of inadequate material, lack of names, casting and staging.

BACKING TOP MAIN STEM PRODUCERS

New York, May 21.—Four shows slated for Broadway next season will be financed wholly or partially by RKO, Bill Dozier, assistant to Charles Koerner, stated today. If the shows are successful, RKO then garners screen rights at little cost and saves itself from open bidding against other majors as in the case of the current smasheroo, "I Remember Mama."

Among the shows RKO will help angel is "Alice Blue Gown," mod-

THOSE in the trade close to the American Tobacco radio operation have a certain conviction that George Washington Hill generally gets what he goes after, hang the cost. Having been turned down previously by Phil Harris to head up Luckies Hit Parade may have whetted his determination to get him at all costs. Which may be the reason for the presence in town of Fred Wakeman, executive for Foote, Cone & Belding on the cigaret account, as his last official act before turning back the portfolio. Harris is not averse to taking over as headman of Hit Parade, but makes it conditional on his wife, Alice Faye, teaming up with him as featured vocalist. Hill is said to have scouted the idea and issued orders to sign up Harris without Faye. Should the transaction be closed, Mark Warnow would move here to handle the stick work with Harris emcee and voicing an occasional ditty. Hill is said to have in mind one of those "phoney feuds" between Harris on Saturday night and Jack Benny the following day. Harris, however, would continue with Benny as both would be on the same payroll. Hill currently is on a two-month vacation in Maine but in daily teletype communication with his NY office.

CLASSICAL music really is to come into its own, in Frank Borzage's forth-coming production at Republic, "Concerto," to an even greater degree than in Columbia's "A Song to Remember." Background score will incorporate more than 30 classical compositions, taken from works of such composers as Bach, Mendelssohn, Rachmaninoff, Wagner, Liszt, Mozart, Beethoven, Schuman, Debussy, Von Weber and Schubert. At least two of the leads in Technicolor musical also will play selections from other classicists on piano. Universal, too, is to present number of songs from composers of same calibre, in Fessier-Pagano production, "Once Upon a Dream," which will star Susanna Foster. Songstress will warble Brahms' "Lullaby," Tschaikowski's "Dream Fantasy," from "Nutcracker Suite," and same composer's "Shadows" and selection from Rossini's "Barber of Seville," Jack Brooks writing lyrics to some of the numbers.

OLD theatrical expression, "like getting a plug in the Bible," is to come true for Frank Ross, who will produce "The Robe" for RKO. Producer yesterday signed deal with Consolidated Book Publishers, largest publishing firm in world, to provide color stills from picture to be used in a New Testament which concern will bring out shortly after completion of picture. Testament can hit stands within three months after delivery of stills, according to Melbourne I. Feltman, with whom Ross closed tie-up, and not only will be sold in department and book stores, but will also have national house-to-house sales. First printing will be 1,000,000 copies. Deal marks first time a motion picture has been exploited in Bible printing, and advance sales are expected to result in added public interest in picture.

LONG established as one of the most successful musical formats in radio, Fred Waring's highly precisioned orchestral and glee club renditions will be abandoned when the bandman starts his new NBC series June 4. The Waring trade-marked format gives way to informality and audience participation, with a salute to the states thrown in. Waring's glee club has been one of the standards of radio for the past 10 years and acclaimed in the trade as the class musical show of its type. Fact that the new series will be heard in the mornings may have something to do with the changed format.

And yet the maiden's cruel fate was not so very tough.

There was no housing shortage in the days of long ago.

REVIEWED at the Pantages, Hollywood, May 21, 1945. Running time: 61 MINS.

"I'll Tell the World" is a mildly amusing combination of broad comedy and music that will find an okay reception in supporting bookings. Added production values are three songs and three specialty numbers worked into the 61 minutes' running time. Direction is fast and the cast, headed by Lee Tracy and Brenda Joyce, plays the story strictly for laughs.

Tracy portrays a glib, fast-talking young man, burdened with the gift of gab from the age of three months. His tongue keeps him in hot water and out of jobs until he turns his attention to radio as a sports announcer. By virtue of gab he saves an independent station from bankruptcy, becomes the feature of an etherized advice-to-the-lovelorn column and lands his girl friend, Miss Joyce, a singing job on the air, which was the original purpose of his radio adventures. Novel introduction of Tracy as a baby is used at start of film and then repeated at the finale to show that fast-talking Tracy strain will be carried on by his offspring.

Tracy and Miss Joyce are an excellent team for the funning, both playing for chuckles. Miss Joyce also is credited with three songs, all well vocalled and listenable. Raymond Walburn and Thomas Gomez are rival radio station owners who aid the comedy. June Preisser, Janet Shaw, Lorin Raker, Howard Freeman and others in the cast also are okay.

Leslie Goodwins directed the original screenplay by Henry Blankfort, and Frank Gross produced. Among the specialties standing out were a piano boogie-woogie number by Gene Rodgers and the western tune by Jimmy Dean and his Trail Riders. Paul Ivano's camera and other technical credits are good.

Roy Rogers Returns To New Rep Film

Roy Rogers is due back late this week from 10 weeks of rodeo, hospital and War Bond appearances in the east, and will start new singing western, "Sunset in El Dorado," around first of June. Picture is first of two completed scripts awaiting him, but second will depend upon his draft status.

LEGIT OPENING

THE RED MILL

If a person is inclined to forgive operetta or musical comedy a great deal of its patent phoniness, "The Red Mill," which opened at the Philharmonic last night, is worthwhile theatrical fare. Unfortunately the show is retarded by a book that creaks as much as a rusty windmill. Cliche situations, boy-trying-to-get-girl type, and a great many antiquated drolleries clutter up the intervals between a nostalgic score by Victor Herbert.

Unquestionably Herbert's music, and certainly this is one of his most tuneful efforts, is all that keeps "Mill" flourishing in revivals around the country. Producer Edwin Lester did himself and Civic Light Opera a good turn by employing Edward Ward to arrange and baton the score. Then, too, the presence of Eddie Foy, Jr., Dorothy Stone, Lee Dixon and Odette Myrtil help out matters considerably. These adept comics have the ability to take even the corniest of gags and draw laughs from the customers.

Nancy Kenyon's voice is pleasant, albeit the young lady is rather wooden in acting. Morton Bowe's voice is not so pleasant and his acting leaves a great deal to be desired.

Aida Broadbent has given her dance routines over to the keeping of some attractive and talented young ladies, who are by far the best terp line seen in these parts for some time. The singing chorus, however, lacks articulation and gustiness needed to project Herbert's music in spots.

Arthur Longeran's settings are very fine, both in color and taste, as are the costumes designed by Walter J. Israel.

Billy Gilbert did the best he could with the opus as far as direction goes, yet "Red Mill" still doesn't come off too well. It resembles nothing so much as an assemblage of highly talented tyros in some small town who put the show on for three nights at the local high school.

And as for the lighting of this piece, well, there must be gremlins at the Philharmonic or else the man on the mazdas is suffering from a nervous ailment.

Joe Unger In Town

J. J. Unger, United Artists western sales manager, arrived yesterday from New York for huddles with W. E. Calloway, company's western district manager. He will be here several days.

FINLEY ADDS CASINO GARDENS TO HIS TERPALACES

Completing four months of negotiations, Larry Finley bought a one-third interest in Casino Gardens ballroom yesterday for a price in the neighborhood of $35,000. Finley, who owns the Mission Beach and Trianon terpalaces in San Diego, bought into the Collonades Corporation, which has Tommy and Jimmy Dorsey as the other two toppers.

In addition to being a partner with the maestro brothers, Finley also holds a managerial contract with the corporation. However, Birnie Cohen will remain on as resident manager, while Finley will divide his time between his San Diego holdings and the Ocean Park dancery.

Negotiations, which were held both here and in the east, were completed by Finley, Arthur Michaud, Tommy Dorsey's manager; Lee Eastman, Tommy's attorney, and Dick Gabbe, representative for Jimmy Dorsey.

Renovation on the beach hoofery will begin at once and Tommy will bring his orchestra in for seven weeks, starting June 1. Jimmy Dorsey will follow Tommy, also for a seven-week stand, with dance hall going on a six nights per week basis in the middle of June.

Finley stated that his buy-in of the spot is the first of a series of expansions he plans in setting up a terpalace chain.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(CBS News Analyst)

We're obviously going ahead on this war against Japan as if the Soviet were not coming in. If they do, all right, so much the better, but we're not banking on it. And we're also doing all possible to speed the end of the war with the Japanese. We're making no secret of the force we're going to throw against them, even announcing that the First Army is on the way. Every time an air commander talks to a correspondent these days he says, "Japan hasn't seen anything yet!" We're on the offensive in the war of nerves, as well as in the air, on the sea and on the ground. And we must not overlook what's happening in China, not only in taking the port of Foochow, where we might land, and inland, Hochih, where the Chinese begin to threaten to cut Japanese communications with Indo-China, or can threaten to take back that strip of railroad from Shanghai to Canton, and the Kuomintang announces new plans to improve the lot of the Chinese farmer and worker, and another, and this time, sincere effort, I think, to make peace with the Communists in Yenan. The stage is still being set, but when the curtain rings up on Pacific D-Day, Japan can expect a smash hit—and I mean that both ways.

DIRECTOR George Marshall just barely got through with Alan Ladd's scenes in "The Blue Dahlia" before the Army took the actor away from Paramount. Ladd is due for induction today and his "Blue Dahlia" work was finished only last week. Final scenes on the picture, with 200 extras called, are being shot today but they don't call for Ladd. . . . WALSH CHECKING OF AUTONOMY-MINDED IA LOCALS

Prexy Richard Walsh has started checking records of the four big IA studio locals which have been leading the fight for autonomy it was disclosed last night. Walsh and other IA executives called at headquarters of the Sound Camera Laboratory and Costumers locals yesterday and requested to see copies of the minutes of recent executive board meetings. Local IA leaders interpreted this as an exploratory move to see if there was anything that might warrant the international seizing control of the unions.

Walsh and vice prexy Felix Snow are said to have personally called at headquarters of Motion Picture Customers Local 705 and Film Technicians Local 683, with vice prexy Carl Cooper and Roy Brewer, IA International representative, calling at headquarters of Internatoinal Sound Technicians Local 695 and International Photographers Local 659. It is understood they were unable to see the minutes at Local 695 since business representative Harold V. Smith was out of the office and those in charge refused to turn them over. It is said the same situation was found at Local 705, business representative Ted Ellsworth being out.

The officials of the four big locals incurred the wrath of prexy Walsh and his international associates when they showed up as defending counsel for four members of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44, who are accused of "acting against the best interests of the IATSE" because they refused to take over jobs of striking workers. Members of the IATSE general executive board are here to sit in with Walsh, resulting in rumors that seizure of other IA locals might be planned.

By RADIE HARRIS

Mary Morris is so-o-o-o disappointed that she was thumbed down in her physical for her USO overseas tour in "Double Door," and will return to her drama post at Carnegie Tech. . . . The raison d'etre for Ruth Chatterton's visit to Hollywood is to auction off the community furniture shared by Rafe Forbes and herself when they were "Mr. and Mrs." 21 years ago. It's been in storage ever since Ruthie's divorce from George Brent, but the mothballs haven't decreased its value any—most of the pieces were antique to start with! . . . Jose Iturbi has cancelled all his east coast bookings for the next few months because he refuses to leave his Maple Drive pool in the heat of the summer. . . . Those two silent figures putting flowers on the grave of David Belasco in memory of the 14th anniversary of his death were Elizabeth Ginty, his secretary, and Beth Merrill, his star. "Matty," the property man at the Belasco, who always accompanied these two faithfuls on this annual visit, was with "Mr. B." this year. . . . Sonny Tufts' brief look-see at New York was made briefer when he left several days ahead of schedule to participate in the "I Am An American Day" festivities in Chi—which entailed a complete rerouting of his hospital tour. . . . Mary Martin's sudden announcement of her impending blessed event, come November, has given poor Mary Pickford "One Touch of Apoplexy!" . . . Francis Sill Wickware, who did the "Life"-size portrait of Lauren Bacall for Mr. Luce's mag, first met Lauren (nee Betty) at a charity cocktail function for Greenwich House. Betty's aunt, Vera Bacall, was on the executive committee, and through her Wickware came to know the whole family—little dreaming that those "bonds" would be salable in such a short time!

ADD ARRIVALS: Anne Baxter, Wynn Rocamora and Diana Lynn at the Sherry Netherland. . . . Constance Bennett at the Park Lane. . . . Jean Hersholt at Hampshire House. . . . Renee Clair at the Pierre.

DEEP TANGLE WILDBERG: When Irvin Shapiro, producer of the Ethel Waters variety revue, "Blue Holiday," wanted to book the show into the Belasco, Jack Wildberg, co-owner of the theatre, would only okay the deal with the proviso that the opening date came AFTER the preem of "Memphis Bound," the all-colored musical which he is sponsoring. Shapiro agreed, and the date was set for the 18th, the night following the opening of "Memphis Bound." Now, the pay off is that the Wildberg production is being delayed a week in Boston for a complete rewrite of the second act, while "Blue Holiday" beats it to the punch by opening six nights earlier, on the date selected to avoid competition!

FROM AN ADVANCE PEEP AT GERTRUDE LAWRENCE'S "A STAR DANCED:" "I was approved for a part in a fairy play called "Fifanella," which was put on at the Repertory Theatre in Liverpool. Estelle Winwood played the beautiful Fairy Queen, but she mad little impression on me because I only had eyes for the Prince in his scarlet tights and doublet. This fascinating youngster was played by Eric Blore!"

OSCAR SERLIN SPEAKING: "Why did I go to Hollywood to sign Dorothy Comingore, Ricardo Cortez and Paul Kelly for the three important leads in "Beggars Are Coming To Town," when I am the first one to get on a soap box and proclaim my loyalty to Broadway? The reason is this, and you can check the indisputable proof in my files at 1270 Sixth Ave.: I auditioned over 80 actresses, and even included all the model agencies. There were three requirements for the role—a pretty face, pretty legs and a heart beneath a shallow exterior. I hoped desperately to discover a new talent who would meet all these requirements. Remember me? I'm the guy who gave Teresa Wright her first chance on Broadway in "Life With Father," and I put Bill Eythe in "The Moon Is Down," when he had never played a lead before. Unfortunately, among those 80 aspirants who read for me there were none who fitted the role in every category. It was only when I was certain in my own mind that I had exhausted every possibility here, that I went to Hollywood, and there too, I gave an equal opportunity to everyone to read for me. When Dorothy Comingore ultimately won the part, it was because she was the ideal choice for which I had been searching. That I found her in Hollywood doesn't prove that I'm a traitor to the Walgreen and Sardi set!"

ADD SLOGANS: Anne Baxter climaxes every 7th War Loan speech by telling the audience, "This is one time when your word is not your bond. Don't TALK about it—BUY it!"

Flannery Poised For 8-Wk Overseas Tour

Harry Flannery shoves off within the next two weeks on an eight-week tour that will take him across both oceans. Accredited to CBS, his itinerary includes Casablanca, Cairo, Iran, Italy, India, China and Burma. Nelson Pringle, CBS commentator, returned over the weekend from a 2,500-mile tour of the Pacific theatre. Flannery handled Pringle's programs while he was out of the country and the courtesy will be returned.

U Tags Two Scribes For Last of '44-45 Oaters

Universal's writing lineup for the balance of the 1944-45 westerns season was completed yesterday with the inking of Adele Buffington and Bob Williams. Miss Buffington will script "Down By the Border" and Williams pens "Rustler's Roundup." William Lively is writing "Gun Town" and Patricia Harper is inking "Law For Pecos." All four writers are working for Associate Producer-Director Wallace Fox.

ROBINSON QUITS 728 RACE TO SUPPORT ED HARPER

Howard Robinson has withdrawn as a candidate for business representative of Studio Set Electricians Local 728, leaving Ed Harper and James Shaw to oppose A. T. Dennison, who is seeking re-election. Robinson in withdrawing urged membership to vote for Harper, indicating that if the ballots were split between Harper and Shaw, Dennison would stand a good chance of retaining the post.

Robinson declared that Dennison had always placed the interests of the IATSE international ahead of the local membership, and advised that he be retired from office. Most of the other rank and file leaders are supporting candidacy of Harper in the belief he has the best chance of defeating Dennison.

Ballots were mailed out last week and must be returned not later than midnight Saturday.

Members of Local 728 also will vote on a proposal to amend the by-laws to provide for two classifications in the local, production and maintenance. A member would be permitted to hold only one classification at a time. Any new member of local on production would be required to work on the rigging crew for three years before going on as operator on shooting troupe. By-laws amendment is up for vote at next meeting of local.

SPU ENTRANCE FEE OUT; WILL JOIN CONFERENCE

Screen Players Union will open its membership to all former B members of the Screen Actors Guild without the payment of initiation fees. It will apply for affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions if recommendations of Business Representative Mike Jeffers, submitted to the Board of Directors last night, are approved by the general membership. Majority of Directors are on record as approving moves, but final okay must come from rank and file.

At the same time, Jeffers declared SPU would accept a charter from Associated Actors and Artistes of America provided it gave local autonomy to SPU.

It is understood current initiation fee of $25 would be waived for a period of possibly 30 days to give all former B players an opportunity to affiliate. Extra players who have already paid $10 and $25 initiation fees would be given credit for those amounts on their quarterly dues.

In discussing the recommendations, Jeffers declared:

"I had originally intended to suggest that the initiation fee be cut back to $10 for a period of time, but after discussing it with rank and file leaders I believe it would be advisable to completely eliminate the entrance fee temporarily. It has never been the desire or intention of the SPU to prevent any former B member of the Guild from coming into the new organization for extras. In fact, we want them all in. In that way SPU will be stronger and will be in a better position to represent all players.

"The reason for temporary relection of a charter by SPU was due to the fact that the Four A's requested conditions which were undemocratic, that would have eliminated local autonomy and been detrimental to the SPU membership. This does not mean that SPU will not consider a Four-A charter if it permits SPU to retain its democracy and autonomy."

Jeffers also announced SPU had signed an interim agreement with Roland Reed Productions at PRC calling for the use of SPU paid up members on all calls for extras. He said this made 33 indie producers who inked agreements with the SPU.

In New York and Hollywood, at work and just visiting with some of their good friends . . .

Frances Kish, Editor of Movies, and Gary Cooper, in a moment of what seems to be momentous conversation on this and that, at New York's fashionable Club 21.

People make news; people make magazines, and we want you to know the people behind the Hollywood news published in the Ideal magazines, Movie Life, Movie Stars Parade and Movies. Our New York, as well as our Hollywood, office is close in spirit to our home town, Hollywood. We believe the phenomenal growth of the Ideal movie books is due to the fact that we think in Hollywood terms. The people who buy our magazines are the very same people who fill the movie theatres. They shop for the best Hollywood news as they shop for the best pictures. We believe that our policy of concentrating upon the best Hollywood news is the reason our magazines sell out, month after month. And we are pledged to maintain that policy, to do a progressive and constructive liaison job between Hollywood and the movie-going public.

SORRELL OFFERS TO QUIT IN STRIKE PEACE MOVE

New peace move for settlement of 11-week-old studio strike was stymied when Roy Brewer, IATSE international representative, is reported to have insisted that Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, step out of the picture and that the Conference be scuttled. Sorrell agreed to quit immediately if a satisfactory settlement was made with the strike strategy committee, but painters' committee which accompanied Tom Ranford, prexy of Central Labor Council and head of District Council of Painters, to conference with Brewer, turned thumbs down on doing away with the Conference.

LINDELOFF NIXES SORRELL MOVE

Members of committee, composed of Paul Wade, Clarence Shields, Jack Reed, Clarence Thompson and G. A. Sullivan, laughed when told that Sorrell was a Communist. One of them is said to have replied, "We don't care what he is, he does what we tell him to, and that suits us." When L. P. Lindeloff, international president of the painters, learned of the move, he quickly turned thumbs down on any deal calling for Sorrell to get out of the picture.

Calling from the east yesterday, Lindeloff declared the situation was too important for Sorrell to step out. He said this attitude was shared by William Hutcheson, international head of the carpenters, and international tops in the IBEW, machinists and Building Service Employes International Union. He said the situation was very important to the building trades and that they could't take a chance of having their members double-crossed if Sorrell stepped out.

CARPENTERS HALT METRO PIC

Sorrell was notified yesterday by Willis Hill, business representative of the downtown carpenters, that he had forced a Metro location of "She Went To the Races" to vacate shooting at the Hollywood race track. Sorrell declared Willis had advised him the track management was notified the carpenters and building service employes would walk out if the company was allowed to shoot.

Lindeloff also notified Sorrell that letters pertaining to the national boycott of pictures made under strike conditions were being sent to 1,500 painters' locals throughout the country. He said Hutcheson had agreed to the same move and that mailing of letters would be discussed with him tomorrow.

There was little other strike activity yesterday, with both groups preparing for election of set decorators Thursday at the National Labor Relations Board. Strike strategy committee tomorrow will take up proposal that activity be centered on one studio at a time, with picket line augmented to 1,000 men and women.

ALL THEATRES BEING SET FOR BIGGEST BOND SALE

distributor chairman, pointing out the need for 100% cooperation in making the day the largest single bond selling event in the Seventh War Loan.

Free Movie Day commemorates the invasion of Normandy, Connors declared, and a greater number of theatres are needed to put the event over with a bang. He pointed out that exhibitors lacking the personnel can obtain people to man bond booths from local War Finance Committees and many civic, patriotic and veterans' organizations.

State of Illinois will eclipse its previous record in special theatre events for the "Showmen's Seventh," according to word received at national headquarters here by Sam Pinanski. On the basis of weekend tabulations by Walter Immerman, state exhibitor chairman, Illinois already has 165 War Bond premieres, 129 children's matinees and 454 Free Movie Day pledges lined up. Totals are far ahead of similar events staged during the Sixth War Loan. In Chicago, the Chicago theatre will hold the state's major event on Thursday evening with a War Bond premiere which will include stage stars and other attractions.

Bob Hope and his radio troupe did a half-hour noon Bond show on the stage of Shea's Buffalo theatre and final tally is expected to show sale of about $100,000 in bonds for the one show.

Eddie Cantor now is on a cross-country War Bond junket which will end here at the Paramount theatre on Broadway with a special appearance with the Glenn Miller Day show June 6.

Washington, May 21.—Thanks of the Treasury Department for the film industry's short subject, "All-Star Bond Rally," was expressed today by Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., in a letter to Tom Baily, Hollywood coordinator of the War Activities Committee. Morgenthau complimented Baily on behalf of the Treasury for delivering "a very tangible instrument of help for our most important War Loan drive."

MORE OF THE SAME AND JUST AS DULL FOR UN WATCHDOGS

San Francisco, May 21.—Maybe a good juicy murder or a first class assassination might perk up the conference here for the newsreel and press boys. At this moment things seem to have reached the "where shall we put the adverb?" stage, and all eyes are turning only toward that calendar date of June 5 in hopes that all the "T's" will be crossed, the 'I's" dotted and a satisfactory world security charter buttoned up, signed, sealed and delivered. Current rumble is that State Department is inquiring about trains June 5, 6 and 7.

The newsreel boys were on the job tonight for the shots they had wanted to make early in the confab and the shots that American theatregoers probably wanted most to see—the Soviet delegation, the super-enigma and, probably because of their inscrutible silence, the supreme focus of interest of the conclave for many. With Commisar Molotov long gone, the fine edge obviously is gone from this sequence, and the news value substantially diminished. The newsreel job comes pretty close to being washed up on most scores. Tomorrow will see the Chinese posing for their shots in a sequence enhanced by a beautiful gesture of international protocol.

STETTINIUS OFF SOON

Secretary of State Stettinius announced today he was hopping off quick-like for Washington at a time unstated, but surely this week, and that in his absence T. V. Soong, head of the Chinese delegation, would preside as chairman of the world conference. Next to the Chinese and Russians, the United States delegation was closest to the finale, Secretary of State Stettinius making his little speech of gorgeous banalities and giving the entire delegation its place in the kleig sun today while the cameras ground. Just previous to the Americans, the Greeks posed for the cameras, and now that the Russians are properly committed to history via the cinema, there remains only the Chinese tomorrow morning, and, after that, the Australians, who haven't even been pegged for a date.

NEWSREEL JOB WASHED UP

That washes up the delegation picture jobs and unless something juicy breaks, the moviemen will sit around with their thumbs up, doing scenics, maybe, until the next plenary some time next week.

In gorgeous high-sounding words Secretary Stettinius handed bouquets and challenges to radio when he opined that "when there is peace again throughout the world there will exist an urgent need for a continuation of the spiritual unity which enabled the United Nations to produce the miracle of victory. Radio is making a great contribution to the winning of the war. Radio and television have an even greater obligation to the future in the winning of the peace. The homes of the world must be made into one great, common living room for the family of nations. The challenge is a great one, but I am certain that the men and women responsible for the functioning of this great medium of communication are equal to the task." The radio folks may not know exactly what it all means, but it's the nicest bit of soft soap that they have had since the conference began, and nobody can blame them if they get a lovely, gullible glow.

FIREWORKS EXPECTED

Absence of Stettinius from the conference leads to conjecture and hope, of course, there being those who anticipate that the absence of the American parliamentary Sampson could open the door to some interesting fun, which doesn't seem remotely possible. There are those, too, who have predicted that Senator Vandenberg would leap into the limelight in a sensational way before the end of the conference and opine if he's going to do it, he'll do it while he's co-chairman of the delegation. But there's far more wishful thinking than libel in that opinion, says the consensus, and the prospect is there aren't likely to be any fireworks that would provide a field day for the newsreels, radio and press while Stettinius is chinning with the quiet new man in the White House.

More conjecture focuses on the subject matter behind the Stettinius-Truman conference and the hope it will mean something in the way of footage, air time and headlines when Stettinius returns. Meanwhile these delegates are working for who laid the rail, the cocktail route seems to be on the diminuendo, the radio folk are folding their tents and silently stealing away like the Arabs of the poem rather than those of swank Nob Hill.

RKO ANGELS FOUR BROADWAY PLAYS WITH TOP PRODS

ernized musical version of "Irene," written by James Montgomery with music by Henry Tierney, to be produced by Charles Casanave. Another is "Legend of Sleepy Hollow," in which the Washington Irving classic will be set to music and produced by Oscar Serlin, with Ray Bolger as star. Also on the financing schedule are "Anything Can Happen," autobiographical best-seller by George and Helen Papashvily, to be adapted by S. N. Behrman, produced by Max Gordon and directed by George Kaufman; "The Play's the Thing," by Ferenc Molnar, which Jed Harris will direct and produce.

RKO will meet from 25% to 50% of the production costs of these shows with exception of the Washington Irving musical. If the book and music of this one suits, it will be financed 100% by the film company.

Dozier revealed that RKO will distribute 40 pictures next year—five more than during the present season. Eight of them will be top-budget productions costing from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000; eight will be "A" pictures budgeted from $750,000 to $1,000,000, and 24 will range in cost from $200,000 to $600,000 for an overall budget with a $22,000,000 minimum.

This includes films to be made by producers outside the organization as well as the company's own product. Three of these pictures will be in Technicolor, including "Fabulous Invalid," starring Maureen O'Hara.

The company foresees a gradual decline in grosses during the forthcoming reconversion period. Producers already have been notified to cut down on production costs wherever possible, Dozier declared. He added that "the key to conservative filming is the script writer, because in the writing of a screenplay costs can be cut by shifting locales and situations where settings or scenes will not require large budgets.

RKO plans to make only one other rehabilitation picture besides the present success, "Enchanted Cottage." Its title is "Tomorrow Is Here," based on an original screenplay by Pamila Harris, which is budgeted at $450,000.

44 RANK, FILE CALL GENERAL MEETING FOR TONIGHT

Rank and file members of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 have called a general meeting for 8:30 tonight, stating action was taken after officers of union refused to send out notices for the meeting. Members declared that when they requested the local secretary to send out the notices, he replied he was still taking orders from the IA International.

Control of local was seized by International after members voted not to work outside their jurisdiction. Charges were preferred against four members, one of whom was campaigning for business representative against B. C. (Cappy) DuVal, and defendants were placed on trial accused of acting "against the best interests of the IATSE."

International was given a big surprise when officers of Sound, Camera, Laboratory and Costumers locals showed up as counsel for defendants. Group of members finally went to Superior Court and enjoined Prexy Richard Walsh and the International from proceeding with the trial, interfering with autonomy of the local or from preventing membership meetings. Hearing is set for May 28 on temporary restraining order issued by Judge Emmet Wilson.

Members of IATSE General Executive Board were in town yesterday, resulting in many rumors around studios that control of other locals might be taken over by the International. This was denied by IA tops, but business heads of top IA studio locals were conferring on situation and keeping a close check on developments

International announced that election of officers of Local 44 would be postponed until International control was relinquished, but members themselves could order ballot tomorrow night if turnout is sufficient. It was reported any action would be contingent upon whether International supporters or antis were in majority at the meeting.

A word of Caution

Addressed to Advertisers and Publicists in the Motion Picture Industry

About a year ago, Photoplay developed the Speed of Sale yardstick—for the purpose of measuring the hold on the public of given magazines.

Today, speed of sale is the sole method by which true competitive position may be evaluated: volume of circulation—for generations the source of competitive facts—has become the reflection of a given publisher's paper policy—and nothing more.

So great is the demand for motion picture magazines, and so short the supply, that a publisher can sell just about as many magazines as he can find paper for.

How "Speed-of-sale" Works

There are some days in a given month when competition (in its true sense) still exists. These are the days immediately after each magazine goes on sale, when piles of each are high. Photoplay reasoned that if you knew how fast each pile was reduced when all were available, you would have a true indication of which magazine the readers wanted FIRST and MOST.

To establish this new criterion, and to validate it—Photoplay invested nearly a year of costly research. Sales records were carefully examined involving more newsstands by far than the total number of motion picture theatres existing in the whole U.S.A. Month after month after month, the speed-of-sale of many motion picture magazines was posted and studied.

As a result of these tests, it was established that Photoplay's 85% to 95% sellout in the first seven to ten days of sale was "up to 36% faster" than that of any other magazine of its type!

What This Means In Terms of Circulation Potential

In a list of cities carefully selected for their typicality, Photoplay is conducting a series of "saturation" tests.

Each month the supply of copies poured into those cities is sharply increased—and the percent sold is carefully checked. So far no ceiling has been reached: Today the number of copies poured in is more than double the paper-rationed base, and so is the number sold—in almost exact proportion.

Projected nationally, this means that Photoplay could today be selling nearly twice as many copies—more copies by nearly 70% than any motion picture magazine has ever officially recorded!

Photoplay has rigidly held, as close as wartimely possible to its prewar level of quality. Toward this end it is willing, if necessary, to continue to sacrifice its numerical competitive position, in order best to serve its present readers and the motion picture industry. The recent actual addition of four pages of editorial text is concrete example of how this policy works in practice: To obtain paper for this long range purpose, an additional 70,000 current circulation potentiality had to be sacrificed.

We believe that this policy of keeping faith with our readers has the support of the Industry, because it follows the Industry's own policy for preserving the loyalty and respect of the motion picture audience.

As any impartial, unbiased check of newsstands will show, this audience has already overwhelmingly responded to make this signature possible:

U'S MILLION BOND BUY SETS $2,500,000 TOTAL

Universal yesterday invested $1,000,000 in government securities, being the first Hollywood studio to make a purchase of corporation bonds during the Seventh War Loan. In reporting corporation buy, A. H. McCausland, studio chairman for the Hollywood Motion Picture War Finance Committee, also announced that Universal studio employes have purchased more than $180,000 since start of the drive, including one individual investment of $75,000.

Universal's purchase of corporation bonds puts the HMPWFC total to date near the $2,500,000 mark. Individual investments at the end of the Seventh's first week was more than $1,000,000.

Somebody in Honolulu, as a rib, started a rumor that the Hula contortionists would be divided into two classes, with their wages regulated according to their wriggles. The rumor caused mental as well as torso agitation among the gals until the WLB ruled that the Hula could not be regulated by the Little Steel Formula or any other yardstick.

THE general belief in the motion picture business that war stories and subjects are out for pictures was challenged yesterday by Warner Bros. Survey of 200 bookings, they said, shows that "God Is My Co-Pilot," story of the Flying Tigers, is one of the company's heaviest grossers and looks like good box office for some time to come. Business on the picture dropped slightly below normal on May 9—the day after V-E Day, the slump being attributed to celebration hangovers and tendency of public to hang over the radios waiting for momentous news. On May 10, however, business took a spurt and has continued heavy since. It was pointed out that war pictures have been Warner Bros. top grossers for the last two years. "Destination Tokyo" went big last year and "Objective Burma" this year is running neck and neck with "God Is My Co-Pilot" at the box office. Studio is consequently optimistic over the several war films it now has on hand.

BREAKDOWN by Sydney Gaynor, general sales manager of the Don Lee chain, discloses that the coast regional copped half of the rating honors in the top shows recently surveyed by C. E. Hooper. Five of the 10 highest audience programs in the daytime bracket along the coast carried the Don Lee signature and the same ratio was maintained among the evening shows. In making his point that low budget shows on the regional span held their own with the fancy tagged transcontinentals, Gaynor reveals that of the top 15 shows none has a higher budget than $2,000 and most of them average off around $500. Only 37 or 14.2% of the 260 coast to coast shows achieved better than 13.1 rating and 58 of that total, or 22.3%, fell into the rating bracket of the coast's top 15.

ARTIE SHAW'S temperament has cost him a CBS wire for his band at Casino Gardens in Ocean Park. Network announced last night that nationwide and local broadcasts for the band have been abandoned due to the maestro's refusal to play ball on music clearance and technical problems. Submitting numbers too late for clearance and issuing the ultimatum "the songs stay in or I don't," Shaw became such a problem child that the chain decided against any broadcasts of his band from the Gardens. CBS will carry Tommy Dorsey when he comes in June 2. Shaw's band was to have been aired on Saturday and Sunday, but the net picked up a substitute remote rather than continue to wrangle with Shaw.

DEATH last week of Henry Victor, English actor, from brain tumor, traces back for cause to a certain scene in "The Beloved Rogue," in which he appeared with John Barrymore about 20 years ago. Victor, in this scene, was thrown down flight of stairs by half a dozen men, with another group at bottom supposed to catch him to break the fall. Men at bottom of steps failed to do so, however, and actor landed on his head, which necessitated hospitalization for several months, with brain condition resulting. During past year, actor had complained of terrific headaches, and had suffered from accident ever since he left hospital.

FEELING the need of more aggressive use of radio, the Navy has broken off its shyness and will inaugurate a new series on the Blue network this summer. Not only will the sea arm of the service participate in the production and provide the material but has no objection to sponsorship of the 26-week series. Deal with the Blue was completed by Admiral H. B. Miller, who recently became director of public relations of the Navy. Most of the programs will be devoted to the achievements of naval aviation in the Pacific war theatre. Adrian Samish, Blue network production manager, will supervise the series, still untitled.

ing was naming of Paul Porzelt to fill vacancy on the board of directors created by recent resignation of Alton Brody. Porzelt is a member of Emanuel & Co., New York brokerage house which floated the recent offer of Monogram preferred shares. Brody is an executive of De Luxe Laboratories which handles some Monogram work.

Monogram will release 28 features and 16 westerns during 1945-46, according to announcement today. Eight of the westerns will star Johnny Mack Brown, with two of them to be earmarked as high-budgeted outdoor features. Regular features will be turned out by Scott R. Dunlap, Frank and Maurice King, Jeffrey Bernerd, Kay Francis, Sam Katzman and Jack Dietz.

Some $14,000 in prizes was distributed to winners of the recent 26-week sales and collection drive. Omaha office ran away with the first prize of $1,000. Second honors and $750 went to the Kansas City branch, and third award of $500 was nailed by the San Francisco branch, all for combined sales and collection efforts. Balance of cash was divided among Dallas, Atlanta, Charlotte, N. C., Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Detroit, New Orleans, Memphis, Portland and Denver offices.

Broidy reported there was considerable overall improvement in 1945 against the previous year both in sales and collections. He said the King Brothers' "Dillinger" was proving one of the biggest moneymakers the company ever had. Sales exec told of picture getting $1,054 for opening Sunday at the Muskegon theatre, Muskegon, Mich., for the house's biggest gross in years. Theatre burned down the next day, Broidy said, possibly pointing a moral of some kind.

Thrill of a Romance

(Comedy-Drama with Music)

METRO RELEASE. Producer, Joe Pasternak. Director, Richard Thorpe. Original screenplay, Richard Connell, Gladys Lehman. Photography, Harry Stradling. Technicolor direction, Natalie Kalmus, Henri Jaffa. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons, Hans Peters. Set decorations, Edwin B. Willis, Jack Bonar. Musical adaptation and direction, Georgie Stoll. Orchestration, Calvin Jackson, Ted Duncan, Joseph Nussbaum, Hugo Winterhalter, Fred Norman. Costumes, Irene, Kay Dean. Editor, George Boemler.

CAST—Co-stars Van Johnson and Esther Williams. Features Lauritz Melchior, Tommy Dorsey and his orchestra, Frances Gifford, Henry Travers, Spring Byington. Supporting players: Carleton G. Young, Ethel Griffies, Donald Curtis, Jerry Scott, Fernando Alvarado, Helene Stanley, Vince Barnett, Billy House, Joan Fay Macaboy.

TRADESHOWN at Westwood Village theatre, Westwood, Calif., May 4, 1945. Running time: 108 MINS.

Metro owns a neat package of musical entertainment in "Thrill of a Romance" and b.o. receipts should climb accordingly. Teaming Van Johnson and Esther Williams in top roles, with Tommy Dorsey and his boys ladling out orchestrations plentifully and Lauritz Melchior, Metropolitan star, singing magnificently, picture is made to order for popular consumption, bobby-soxers in particular, and should click solidly.

Studio tossed a wealth of production values into this Joe Pasternak picture which Richard Thorpe directed tastefully. Most of footage unreels at a resort in the Yosemite, and Technicolor cameras have caught the setting beautifully, natural outdoor locale augmenting sets designed so effectively for picture. Romantic story gives impetus to interest, treated with lightness and charm.

Esther Williams, swimming instructress in Los Angeles, weds Carleton G. Young, young business tycoon, after a whirlwind romance, and they go to a fashionable resort in mountains for honeymoon. Before honeymoon can start, though, groom is called to Washington for a vital biz confab presumably with the President, and his bride is left without her groom and time on her hands. Whereupon Van Johnson, flying major recovering from effects of a month lost in a South Seas jungle, enters scene, his suite next to hers, and pair naturally gravitate toward each other. Complications accrue, culminating finally with the bride walking out on Young and Johnson later serenading her at her home, in comedy sequence, to music of Dorsey's ork and Melchior actually doing the warbling while Johnson goes through the motions. It's a finish fans will go home talking about.

Two stars are delightful in their roles, and they get plenty of able support from Melchior who, when he isn't singing—and his six songs highlight the picture—displays a lively comedy presence. Entire supporting cast is outstanding. Carleton G. Young, Frances Gifford, Spring Byington, Henry Travers, Ethel Griffies, Vince Barnett topping list. Helene Stanley, a moppet, plays several piano selections with skill, and Jerry Scott turns in a tuneful singing interlude. Dorsey and his band, of course, dish out music in their own particular style.

Technical departments line up with other credits, all of class proportions. Harry Stradling's photography is particularly noteworthy, and Georgie Stoll's musical adaptation and direction likewise effective. Richard Connell and Gladys Lehman collabed on original screenplay.

"Where Do We Go From Here?" is an ambitiously conceived and lavishly executed adventure in fantastic comedy that doesn't quite fit in any standard film brackets. It is more in the old light opera tradition than the average film musical, and none the less entertaining for that reason. Audiences with agile imagination will get excited over it, and there's enough glamor, feminine pulchritude, tune and romance to keep the slower-witted from getting bored. The picture is a box office hit if the vogue for fantasy is currently as strong as indicated.

The story is grade school history in gagland with plot and action tossed excitingly from century to century. Fred MacMurray is seen as woebegone Four-F whose patriotic effort is restricted to the prosaic collection of scrap metal. In the mass of scrap there turns up an old lamp and the way that lamp performs when rubbed makes the famous Aladdin article look like a busted cigarette lighter. A few strokes of the hand and the Genie appears ready to grant MacMurray's every wish.

Ali, the Genie (Gene Sheldon) does it with a sort of cosmic century clock and a few incantations. The clock, incidentally, is a bit out of order. So when MacMurray wishes he was in the army he abruptly finds himself marching into Valley Forge with his buddies telling him, "You REPUBLIC RELEASE. Executive producer, Armand Schaefer. Associate producer, Lester Sharpe. Director, George Blair. Screenplay, Wellyn Totman. Photography, William Bradford. Film editor, Ralph Dixon. Art director, Fred Ritter. Assistant director, Al Wood.

CAST—Features Tom Neal, Adele Mara, with Roger Pryor, Paul Harvey, Doodles Weaver, Gene Garrick. Others in the cast: Tom London, Eddie Hall, Charles Sullivan, Sam Bernard, Alan Edwards, Buddy Gorman, John Crawford, Jack Gardner, Robert Strange, Dick Bartell, Timothy Mahen, Nolan Leary, Michael Owens, Howard Mitchell, Harrison Greene, Kenne Duncan.

REVIEWED at the Orpheum, Los Angeles, May 22, 1945. Running time: 56 MINS.

This is a neat action programmer that will find a ready audience in the smaller houses. A competent cast, brisk direction by George Blair, and production mounting that capably fulfills release intentions under Lester Sharpe's guidance, sustains interest in the Wellyn Totman script.

Plot deals with auctioning off of Army horses when the cavalry goes mechanized and how a cavalry sergeant follows his mount into civilian life and steeplechase racing. Tom Neal, the sergeant, is discharged at the time his favorite horse, Sireson, is placed on the auction block. He is outbid by a wealthy family, but joins them in the steeplechase training of the horse. Romance takes an antagonistic trend between Neal and Adele Mara, society girl, but they get together in the end when the ex-soldier and his horse win the big steeplechase race. Early sequences showing some phases of cavalry training and the race in the finale catch particular attention.

Both Neal and Miss Mara show up well in the casting, as does Gene Garrick, soldier buddy. Also competent are Roger Pryor, a gambler; Paul Harvey, Doodles Weaver, whose comedy could have used more footage; Tom London, Eddie Hall, Charles Sullivan and others.

William Bradford's photography, the film editing and other technical credits are expert.

Niven First Pic Set

London, May 22.—David Niven is expected to be demobilized from the British army in November. He is 35 and has seen five and a half years service. He expects to return to U. S. before end of the year to play in "The Bishop's Wife" for Goldwyn.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(CBS News Analyst)

There's no reason to become alarmed about the announcement that the Japanese have been sending bomb-carrying paper balloons over our west coast. They're sending bombs against us from long range in this fashion because they cannot come close enough with carriers for raids by bombing planes. They could try to move down under cover of the weather, but that also would be hazardous, and the release of planes from submarines also is not effectual. A small plane can drop a few small bombs, but operates at a great disadvantage, and returning to its submarine base successfully presents great difficulties. The Japanese therefore have probably figured it best to try to release numbers of these bomb-carrying paper balloons. They had no way to control these because of the effect of varying wind currents over the long distances. We do not want even now to indicate where any of these have come down, although we do announce there has been no property damage. However, there is the danger that some child or some other person might come upon one of these bombs and be badly hurt or killed if we kept the secret longer. We are therefore issuing the story merely to prevent such accidents. The bombs cannot do important damage. The real damage by bombs is now being done by us on the other side of the wide Pacific.

FREDDY MARTIN'S face is slightly red these days from a bobble he pulled in connection with his erstwhile theme song, "Bye Lo Bye Lullabye." Someone wanted the recording which is now out of print and asked, through friends, if Martin knew where a copy might be found. Reply came back from the maestro that he had never disced the tune although he did use it as his theme some years ago. Result was that the platter-seeking character replied that Martin had not only recorded it but that it was a Bluebird waxing and that the catalog number was 10104 and that it was backed by a tune called "Jaywalk." Martin called it quits. . . . Cecil B. De Mille will step in front of Ralph Staub's lens today at the former's home. . . . HUROCK DROPS LEGIT PLANS FOR THE WEST COAST

Sol Hurok left for New York last night after looking over situation here for proposed offerings this fall. Hurok originally had tied up eight weeks' time at the Philharmonic Auditorium with a plan to present a series of light operas. In view of war situation focusing on the Pacific, Hurok dropped his options on the house. His reasons are that transportation will be sufficiently clogged without bringing production here from the east. He also stated that most talent will be making hospital tours and appearances at camps, nullifying his chances of getting any names for shows.

Hurok, however, will bring the Russian Ballet and the Ballet Theatre troupes to the Coast for appearances at the Bowl this summer and the Philharmonic during the winter season.

Several studios also are bidding for Hurok's autobiography, which is due for publication this fall. He wants film to be made as a musical, with top stars who have appeared under his banner.

Hurok will return from the east June 10 in order to oversee his attractions at the Bowl.

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, May 22.—Col. Curtis Mitchell, head of pictorial division of Army Public Relations, flew to England the day he returned here from his recent quick visit to Hollywood. Mitchell has been burning the midnight oil over the joint Anglo-American documentary which will tell the story of the war in Europe from D-Day to V-E Day.

Film, set right after D-Day, is reported to be a special baby of General Eisenhower. Although still very hush-hush, pic will be a six-reeler, with five reels already completed in this country. Expected to be the war's greatest documentary, it will receive widest distribution both in this country and the British empire.

OWI Chief Elmer Davis again is the fall guy for someone's else boner. The role must be familiar to him by now. He has taken the rap and kept his mouth shut many times since coming to Washington.

This time Davis is being blamed in Congress, on the radio and in the press for having set up a censorship policy to prevent American newspapers and magazines and, incidentally, films from entering conquered Germany.

Fact is that the policy was laid down by the Army Psychological Warfare Branch, although it first was announced by Philip Hamblett, chief of London operations for OWI. Neither Hamblett nor Davis revealed the author of the little master plan, and the Army has been kind of shy about stepping up and confessing it is permitting OWI to take a whipping for it.

This sort of thing has happened several times. Result is that uninformed members of Congress will try to whittle the OWI appropriation sharply and efforts will even be made to abolish the agency.

The cordial reception extended to Bob Hope when he played the special show at the White House last week should convince show biz that it still has a friend in the Commander-In-Chief's chair.

Hope opened the show, the first time he had been at the executive mansion, by announcing he had played to all kinds of audiences in theatres, foxholes, etc. Then, looking over the Truman family and handful of guests, he cracked: "But this is the first time I've ever played to two and a half rows."

The three-day Hope visit here was on the sensational side. He did two bond shows, delighted the autograph fans, and even managed to get in 18 holes of golf. He arrived from the golf course two hours late for a press party, but broke the stony faces with some of his best cracks. His golf partner was Navy Chaplain Pardee Erdman, well-known west coast padre.

The Hope furore practically swamped Hildegarde, who sneaked in and out for a quick bond show including an early morning broadcast. The show was hardly off the air when one of Hildy's sponsors long-distanced to ask in amazement: "How in the world did you get her up that early?"

Some months ago this column carried the prediction that reports to Congress would be made via films. The time seems to have arrived. The other day Secretary of the Navy Jimmy Forrestal appeared before a Senate appropriations committee.

Feature of his presentation of the Navy's budget needs was an eight-minute short explaining what the Navy planned to do and how much each thing would cost. Short was made under the direction of Capt. Gene Markey. You can look for more of this in the future.

You can take this column's word for it that, contrary to some trade paper stories, "Two Down and One To Go" will not be yanked from the OWI-WAC schedule. Pic played 800 first-run houses during initial week of its release and is still going strong. And Bob O'Donnell will play it on the entire Interstate circuit, although he was quoted to the contrary.

The sequel, "On To Tokyo," will be released May 31 as previously revealed here. Universal, which received the prints only on Monday (21), has a speedy job of promotion and distribution to get the film out on time.

V-E Day week was a tough one on exhibitors who tried to screen everything Uncle Sam sent them.

"All-Star Bond Rally," "Two Down" and the V-E Day trailer meant 53 minutes of playing time. Some double-feature houses ran them all, eliminating the second feature. Some theatres held over "Bond Rally," which was just as good later on. The Treasury short had been scheduled in advance, but along came V-E Day and scrambled all plans.

Twenty USO shows will leave for Europe within the next 90 days. . . . It's Capt. Robert Quackenbush, USN, now. Promotion came last week for the director of photography of the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics, which includes the photographic lab at Anacostia. . . . Lt. Col. Ralph Jester, former Paramount shorts producer, who has headed the first Air Force Motion Picture Unit, was in town the other day prior to changing back to civvies. . . . Matt Gordon, head of the OWI Foreign News Bureau, is down with scarlet fever in Paris. . . . Guy Lombardo doing a bond stint at Treasury's "Miracle Harbor" exhibit here. The exhibit, incidentally, includes some of the best Signal Corps and OWI films ever made.

At the luncheon the other day at which he paid tribute to the part of 16mm. films in the bond drive, Ted Gamble reminisced about the time he and Merriman Holtz, 16mm. director for Treasury War Finance, had worked together on a project.

Seems Gamble and Holtz had a fling at film production 15 years ago during the American Legion convention in Portland, Ore., home of both men.

"We are both dollar-a-year men now," quipped Gamble, "but we are earning a lot more than our venture paid then."

FILMITES REPRIEVED BY DRAFT RULING ON 'THIRTIES'

As result of latest Selective Service directive, permanent deferments will be given both in picture and radio industries. Barry Sullivan, Paramount actor, who has passed his 30th birthday, was awaiting his summons, and Jack Carson and Eddie Bracken, both also past 30 mark, were in early calls. Renewal of Carson by Campbell Soup in the fall was made conditional on his exemption from military service. Bracken's radio status is indefinite, inasmuch as his NBC time goes to Fred Allen in the fall.

Washington's deferment of men 30 and over likewise will keep Roy Rogers on screen. Cowboy star was slated to take another physical in June.

Publicists Bill Porter of RKO, and Clark Ramsey and Frank McFadden, Universal, also were on verge of call. Porter on Monday had received notice from draft board he would be notified very shortly to report for induction, and both Universal p.a.'s had passed their physicals and were awaiting early calls.

Turhan Bey, Universal actor, will not be affected by ruling and is slated for induction next Monday.

RECIPROCAL TRADE PACTS UP FOR EXTENSION

Washington, May 22. — Hollywood has a definite interest in the new bill to extend reciprocal trade agreements up in Congress this week.

The bargaining power provided by the reciprocal trade pacts is one of the weapons available to the State Department to clear the way for export of more American films.

The agreements have been in existence for the past 11 years and, in general, have aided export of our pictures, a State Department spokesman said.

The new bill would extend the treaty-making power for an additional three years. The existing law permitted the State Department to cut duties on imports by 50% in exchange for trade concessions from other nations. The new bill also gives the State Department the right to reduce by another 50% the duties in effect on Jan. 1, 1945.

Republicans are strongly against this last provision.

Court Rules Against Forced Ticket Buy

New York, May 22.—New York Supreme Court has ruled it improper for a legit producer to buy tickets to his show in order to circumvent stop-limit provisions. It poses the question of what's the position of a distributor who does the same to strike a stipulated control figure forcing a holdover.

H'wood Wary of Legit

New York, May 22.—Growing opposition is reported among picture production executives to financing plays unless the studios can also acquire screen rights at the same time. It is understood Louis B. Mayer, Metro production head, is among those strongly against investing in a play if the company cannot secure film rights as well.

AHERNE 'SAINT' IN SUMMER SOUP SESH

Brian Aherne has been set for the title role in "The Saint," which does summer duty for Campbell soup in the Jack Carson spot beginning June 20. William N. Robson, recently returned from a special radio mission in Berlin, will be at the controls. Leith Stevens, with OWI in Australia for the past two years, is in line for the music direction. Harry Jones, ad chief and radio head of Campbell, is due in Friday with Ward Wheelock, agency head on the soup account. Likely that they'll discuss with Bill Bacher the 20th-Fox studio show which has been under consideration for some time, either as a third entry or replacement for Reader's Digest back east.

DRAB FRISCO MEET GETS HOTFOOT, COMES TO LIFE

San Francisco, May 22.—Don't be surprised if the newsreelers and radio bigwigs, who have been leaving the San Francisco conference in droves, suddenly do an about-face and speed back here. Events today suggest that the biggest show may yet be in the offing, despite the absence of Molotov, Eden, Bidault and other international topnotchers.

It's all because the unexpected developed in double-barreled fashion today when two little guys (say that one with your tongue in your cheek) who hadn't been expected to cut much ice, pulled press conferences that were close to all-conference highs in electric excitement. They jammed the press a la subway and got waves of applause that turned that for Commisar Molotov—who got plenty and don't forget it—into a relative diminuendo. They gave straight answers to straight questions; they uncovered ultra-sensitive issues, and they provided the material that makes mighty good looking in the newsreels, mighty good listening over a general lackadaisical radio, and plenty of headlines and bylines in the public prints.

THE TINY GIANTS

The little guys who stole the show were Dmitry Manuelsky, Ukrainian foreign minister, and a swift-witted wizard named Faris Al-Khouri, prime minister of Syria. Between them they provided some of the most electric moments of the conference to date and had the press palpitating between admiration and astonishment.

The second reason for the possible return of radio and newsreelers (if they return, which may be a little wishful thinking on the part of those human barometers of events and opinion who have been twiddling disgusted thumbs here in understandable ennui at the love and kisses and tidy unraveling of problems) lies in the fact that strongest rumbles say that President Truman will come to San Francisco to close the conference in a blaze of glory. Face means as much to America as it does to any nation, and it's dollars to doughnuts with the remaining conference coverees that Truman will show and that significant news, pictures and radio events can be expected to follow.

Charlie Ross, Truman's secretary and late of the conference press gang, is quoted as saying that Truman only said he would not open the conference. Definitely Manuelsky and Al-Khouri emerged today as men to reckon with in the future.

UKRAINIANS DRAW CROWD

There was a capacity crowd at the St. Francis, too, for the Ukrainians. They came as an afterthought, and there had been gags about them not being specially hot stuff but rather Four-H boys who had raised prize pigs or something and had been given a lovely, harmless junket as a reward. But they had made an impression, and when they got up to talk the reporters were there packing the main floor and hanging in the mezzanine boxes, lapping up every word of the excited French that outpaced the limping English translation.

The White Russian delegation has a press session tomorrow, and it's a safe bet that it will be jammed to the rafters after the show Molotov and Manuelsky have put on. Maybe it's only a flash in the pan, but no piece of theatre in the conference, the consensus appears, has surpassed the Syrian-Lebanese and Ukrainian shows in theatre, electric excitement and possibilities for radio, press and newsreel coverage. It comes as a bright spot in a desperately drab day with committee meetings that were duller than dishwater, and gives a flutter of hope to the belief that San Francisco can again become the number one headline capital of the world, briefly, and that new international sparkplugs have been found.

attendance would automatically qualify them to hold office in the union.

George Stoicca and Armour Marlow Goetten were nominated as candidates for business representative to oppose the incumbent B. C. (Cappy) DuVal, who also was nominated for re-election, although the action was loudly booed. William Magenetti, Hal Sausser and Blackie Mason were nominated as candidates for president. Ed Hill, George Stoicca and Tom Haish were named as candidates for secretary. A long list of candidates were nominated for vice-president, including Bill Goodwin, currently president of the local.

All four members of the local being tried by the international on charges of "acting against the best interests of the IATSE" were nominated for offices, but declined to accept in the interest of harmony among the membership. The four are Jesse Saap, Erwin Hentschel, Gene Mailes and Robert Ames. Approximately 150 members attended the meeting, including representatives from all units and some who have been supporting the international. An attendance of only 75 is necessary for a quorum.

haven't been quite right in your head since Bunker Hill."

Through the erratic offices of the Genie and the busted watch MacMurray sails with Columbus, buys Manhattan Island for $24, etc., eventually ending up in the right century and the Marines.

His romancing with June Haver and Joan Leslie is carried musically and choreographically through the centuries with both gals tuneful and titillatingly lovely at all times.

The songs are excellent production numbers, but probably too closely allied to the action of the story to be lifted out of the film as hit tunes, though one number, "Morale," may be singled out. The "mutiny song" by Fortunio Bonanova and Carlos Ramirez, in a scene where the mutineers suddenly develop into a male chorus with operatic tendencies, is big enough music for any light opera.

William Perlberg hasn't overlooked a bet in production, and Gregory Ratoff's direction has blended song, dance and action into smoothly flowing entertainment.

Photography and color are of top quality.

WMC LAUNCHES PROBE OF STUDIO STRIKE REFERRALS

The War Manpower Commission is starting an investigation of job referrals in the motion picture industry during the current studio strike. This was disclosed last night in communications from Thomas Campbell, WMC area director, to business heads of studio locals. In his letter to union heads, Campbell stated in part:

"We have received several complaints in which it is alleged that workers are being referred to employers in the motion picture industry in contravention of the regional director's decision of April 23, 1945 (as corrected April 25, 1945).

"In order that we may determine the validity of these complaints we request that the WMC or its representatives be permitted to inspect referral records of (union listed) in order to determine compliance with the referral policies of the Southern California Stabilization Program and the United States Employment Service.

"This inspection will be made by a representative of the Wage and Hour Division of the U. S. Department of Labor on behalf of the WMC. We should like to have your immediate response to this request in order that inspection may be scheduled at the earliest possible date."

PROBE FINDS COOPERATION

Studio locals which have been refusing to take over jobs of strikers, including cameramen, soundmen, costumers, laboratory technicians and other top unions in the IATSE, are said to have quickly agreed to the proposed inspection. Certain unions which have been accused of referring men to jobs only to have them switched to other work vacated by strikers, are said to have been reluctant to open their books for inspection.

Simultaneously it was learned that Pomona Valley Central Labor Council was first labor unit to go into action on national boycott of pictures, asked by the Conference of Studio Unions and approved by Joseph Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor. In letters to a score of top film stars, signed by Edwin M. Greenwald, secretary of the organization, the Pomona council criticized players for going through the picket lines.

Greenwald letter addressed players as "Dear Brother" or "Dear Madam," stating they could not be addressed as brother or sister since people of those classification did not pass picket lines. Campbell also stated he had been instructed to advise them that "the finger of scorn was pointed at them" because of their actions and that they were being placed on the unfair list of labor units affiliated with that organization.

NO ELECTION POSTPONEMENT

Stewart Meacham, regional director for the National Labor Relations Board, declared yesterday that no postponement would be ordered of set decorators' election set for 7 to 9 p.m. tomorrow. He added that the IATSE had agreed to furnish list of replacements it will seek to vote by tomorrow morning. IA representatives had refused to submit list earlier, claiming their identity would subject them to attack by "goon squads."

Members of soundmen, laboratory technicians, cameramen and costumers were alerted yesterday over request by Prexy Richard Walsh or his representatives to inspect minutes of recent meetings. None of the officials would discuss move, but it is understood top IA locals are pledged to support each other in any move by Walsh and his international to seize control or lift their autonomy. Secret meetings were known to be scheduled yesterday, but tops claimed to have no knowledge of them.

GRIFFITH TRUST SUIT BEGINS THIRD WEEK

Oklahoma City, May 22.—Government attorneys had J. D. Guest, operator of the Tower and Ritz theatres in Duncan, Okla., as their prosecution witness today in the anti-trust suit against Griffith theatre chains of Oklahoma City and Dallas.

Guest testified before Judge Edgar S. Vaught, as the Federal court trial began its third week, regarding theatre conditions in Duncan, where he operated as competitor to the Griffith interests. He said he took over the Ritz in 1930 and built the Tower in 1942.

Witness declared he had difficulty in obtaining sufficient films to compete against Griffith-owned theatres. Griffith operates the Palace, a first-run show, and the Folly, in Duncan.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Cuban cinema producer Manuel Alonso had convinced several of our producers to make a few pictures in Cuba, with Mexican capital. These producers, ready to start on their Cuban venture, can't understand why President Grau San Martin will not permit film financed with foreign capital to be made in his country. Nor can we. But then, neither can we understand the strange things which happen within our own cinema industry.

Comedian Manuel Medel, star of the last two films produced by Miguel Contreras Torres, publicly and bitterly laments that a two-year contract, at a very low salary, binds him to the already mentioned producer, who, says the actor, believes himself to be a genius: writer, director and actor combined.

Libertad Blasco Ibanez, daughter of the famous Spanish novelist, author of "Blood and Sand," has just copyrighted a screenplay titled "I'm Purely a Refugee." I wonder what she means.

Producer Raul de Anda will visit Hollywood with the hope of obtaining raw stock for next film on his schedule. And then people say my countrymen are pessimists!

The French stage director, Andre Moreau, presents "Les Comediens de France" at the Bellas Artes theatre, with Actors Paul Cambo, Regis Outin, Brigette Chatel and Georgina Tisel. . . . The Institute of Mexican-Russian Cultural Relations sponsors the Soviet film "Lermontov," now playing at the Regis cinema. . . . While the city's most important cinemas, Chapultepec, Magerit, Alameda, Metropolitan, Insurgentes and Palacio are all showing Mexican films this week.

Radio programs with Mexican artists and through local stations are to be sponsored by the Crossley Corp. of Chicago and retransmitted through a Cincinnati radio station. . . . Silvia de Gante, daughter of the Belgian ambassador to Canada, came to Mexico's summer school and remained under contract to Films Mundiales. . . . Shooting of Columbus Films' musical, "Por Culpa de Una Mujer" starts today, starring Carmen Molina, whom we saw for the first time in Walt Disney's "Three Caballeros." . . . Other pix to go into production this week are "La Pajarera," starring Maria Elena Marquez and Roberto Silva, with Emilio Gomez Muriel directing; "Pepita Jimenez," an Aguila Films production directed by Emilio Fernandez, and "Lo Que Va de Ayer a Hoy," with Enrique Herrera, Charito Granados and Manolo Fabregas in leading roles.

Russian Anti-Nazi Pic Berlin Sell-Out

Washington, May 22.—Soviet films are now being widely shown in Berlin, with the Russians reporting "Professor Mamlock," the well known anti-Nazi film, as a sellout. Among the other Soviet pictures being screened in what's left of Berlin are "Lenin in 1918," "Volga," and "Zoya." The last, according to Russian reports, had German women crying over the suffering of a Russian girl, due to Nazi treatment.

SPU SEEKS FOUR A'S CHARTER, CSU AFFILIATION

Screen Players Union yesterday applied for a charter from the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, and at the same time sought affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions. Recommendation of Business Representative Mike Jeffers that initiation fee be waived for all former B members of Screen Actors Guild was not acted upon by the board of directors until last night, but all three moves must be approved by the rank and file membership.

Jeffers in a wire to Paul Dullzell, prexy of the Four A's, stated:

"Screen Players Union hereby applies for a Four-A charter covering unit set forth in supplemental certification by the National Labor Relations Board, dated March 28, 1945, conditions being:

"SPU maintains its autonomous rights, acceptance of affiliation subject to approval of membership. Please inform as to action taken on this matter."

A letter also was addressed to Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, asking affiliation with that organization. Jeffers stated in his letter to Sorrell that objective of SPU was to obtain charter from the American Federation of Labor, and pointed out that organization had been certified by the NLRB as the exclusive bargaining agency for all film extras.

While question of waiving entrance fee for B members must be acted upon by general membership, it was felt that rank and file would accept recommendation of Jeffers and board of directors. Tops felt such action would nullify move by Screen Extras Guild to achieve recognition and would give them no grounds on which to appeal to the NLRB for modification of SPU certification or a new election of screen players.

CANADA STUDIO FOR RANK; PLANS U.S. FILM INVASION

800 picture houses in the United Kingdom, arrived here today by British government plane from London. He is en route to Hollywood to confer with motion picture heads within the next two weeks on his immediate and post-war plans for film making and distribution.

Rank will spend this week with Paul Nathanson, prexy of Odeon Theatres of Canada, who has entered into partnership with him as the first step in an all-embracing British empire film setup.

Nathanson deal gives Rank more than 100 houses across Canada. Both men propose a great post-war theatre expansion in Canada, including the building of large, modern theatres where warranted.

This is the prelude to a battle for Canadian supremacy between Odeon and Famous Players Corporation. Rank's primary purpose in this trip, his first to the northern hemisphere, is to discuss plans with Nathanson whom he had not met before. Rank said:

"I want as many theatres in Canada as can profitably be run."

He also has similar plans for Australia, New Zealand and South Africa in the assembling of a British empire chain. In addition, he is aiming at a larger share of the American market.

Rank has just acquired two New York showcases, the Gotham and Victoria, but is considering building a post-war de luxer for his film product only. He told Daily Variety his production companies will release 30 features this year, that their distribution in the United States is "still a matter of terms."

These films have a British background and Rank has no intention of attempting American gangster films or westerns.

Rank already has made arrangements for distribution of his British films in France and an exchange system with the Soviet government whereby each country has recently been showing the other's product.

The new Toronto studio will immediately stick to shorts, but Rank, with the blessing of the British Board of Trade, plans features later with a Canadian background for distribution in the British empire and the American market—if the latter wants them on their merits.

He will, he said today, establish a Canadian film industry as part of the picture whereby, if the films are good enough, they "will be assured a fair proportion of the audiences of the world."

Heap Big Cholly

Oklahoma City, May 22.—Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy have been made honorary chiefs of the Kiowa Indian tribe. Bergen's monicker is Tongh-Gan-Oi-Keah, which means man of many voices. Charlie is Ah-Tome-Gyah, meaning little chief echo. Bergen and his little wooden stooge headed a War Bond program in Municipal Auditorium for which lo raised them to chiefs.

Walkout of NY Lab Workers Averted

New York, May 22.—Walkout of laboratory technicians employed in New York, Long Island and northern New Jersey, which would tie up pictures badly since bulk of the printing is done in the east, was probably averted following notice of intention last week by union to strike. Local 703, Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, IATSE, expects that settlement may be reached by end of the week. Union is asking for its 2,000 members considerable increases which vary according to classification. Lab workers are now getting $90 weekly top.

DRAFT RULING WILL EASE THEATRE, PIC SHORTAGE

Washington, May 22. — Further easing of the manpower problem came today in a Selective service order indefinitely deferring men of 30 or over who are engaged in the war effort or are doing "useful" work. This order practically blankets the film business since it would not only take care of the studios and laboratories but also film theatres which have been generally listed as locally "useful" and "essential."

Action comes on the heels of yesterday's new army order making enlisted men 40 or over eligible for discharge.

In an effort to supply all needed military manpower from the category under 30, local draft boards are to review the 18-25 year groups for additional 4F's who are so slightly below standards that they can be used for limited service. Hollywood and the theatres are expected to suffer very little by this.

U'S MILLION BOND PUTS TOTAL NEAR $2,500,000

ard Spier, F-WC division manager, to George Mann and H. V. Harvey, "Showmen's Seventh" exhibitor co-chairmen in that area.

New York, May 22. — Army Ground Forces has requested the film industry to cooperate in the promotion of Infantry Day, June 15. Request, made through J. Edward Shugrue, director of motion picture and special events, War Finance Division, to Samuel Pinanski, national chairman of the Seventh War Loan, stresses that date is the 170th anniversary of the appointment of General George Washington as commander-in-chief of the Continental army, and suggests various tieups to be made with theatre bond sales on that day.

Total of 4,378 bond premieres, 1,687 children matinees and 8,558 Free Movie Day pledges have been turned in so far for the Seventh War Loan, according to Tom J. Connors, distribution chairman. Figures indicate these special events during the current drive will exceed any previous campaign.

Connors reported that the Minneapolis exchange territory tops the nation in bond premieres with 331 already set and others to come.

Newark, N. J., May 22.—"E" bonds with a maturity value of $1,000,000 were sold for the all-star "Salute to Major Glenn Miller" stage show at the Adams theatre here tonight.

COWAN SAYS SIMPP CAN'T BENEFIT INDIE FILMER

New York, May 22.—Lester Cowan today said he is not planning to join the Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers because "I don't believe matters can be improved by running to the Government." He declared the main reason for SIMPP seemed to be to get people to go to the Department of Justice on divorcement proceedings.

Producer challenged value of SIMPP to independents because of its lacking a program. "Abuses can be corrected if independents get together, but only if they are willing to help the smaller producer," he declared.

"There would be collective strength in using studios, talent and withholding product where unfair theatre situations (closed territories) exist. There are ways of correcting abuses without going to the Government." Cowan warned too much Government intervention might backfire on indies, particularly where latter have current or future theatre plans.

U APPLIES FOR NY LISTING OF STOCK

New York, May 23.—Universal Pictures, in making application to have its stock listed on NY Stock Exchange, plans to list 754,000 shares of common outstanding and 300,000 shares to be issued in exchange for warrants held by managements which offer privilege to buy stock at $10 a share up to 1956.

Company has grown constantly during recent years, with operating income in fiscal year ended Oct. 28, 1944, totaling $51,000,000, as against $46,000,000 for 1943 and $39,000,000 for 1942. Last year net income was $3,400,000 after tax payment of $8,300,000.

Limited Group Only In Export Assn.

New York, May 23.—Plans now are being shaped for organization of a film export association for handling of best American pictures selected from pool of U. S. product, to foreign countries where there are quota limits on U. S. films. Under this plan, for areas where legislation makes it difficult to do business on a competitive basis, not all U. S. film companies can be given representation on foreign screens, and this has given rise to talk of abolition of U. S. company trademarks on pictures sold abroad.

NY LEGIT OPENING

FOXHOLE IN THE PARLOR

New York, May 23.—"Foxhole In the Parlor" is the best script yet by Elsa Shelley. It is a serious play with a war background deserving of attention as presented at the Booth theatre tonight, but its preachment will probably affect its chances. Play approaches the problem of lasting world peace, with its proponent aiming to get his ideas before the Security Conference in San Francisco. While unable to voice the formulae, he joins the staff of a delegate to the current international sessions. Psychoneurosis is one of the war's vital problems and typical of present conditions, and through one such young veteran the author speaks. Memories of buddies who had been killed beside him in foxholes inspires him to outline the leading principles for consideration at the conference now.

The one-set, short-cast drama is splendidly presented. Scene is on a semi-circular revolving platform switching from one living room to another across the yard in Greenwich Village. The staging by John

• HOLLYWOOD INSIDE •

THE trend hunters of Hollywood are on safari again, trying to trail the whimsical and erratic box office gross to its hide-out in the hollow straws that show which way the wind of audience favor blows. 20th-Fox, looking for it in fantasy, is holding its breath over the just-previewed "Where Do We Go From Here?" Warners is looking for answer in a survey of recent bookings of its war pictures. And now Metro comes up with sunny assurance that they've found the track of the elusive trend in a sneak preview of "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes," Robert Sisk production. The pic got an ovation, they say, at Pasadena's Academy Theatre. Story is a simple yarn of Wisconsin farm life with a lot of "family interest." The same human interest touch is seen by studio heads in Sisk's recent "Hold High the Torch" and "Lost Angel." So Metro has high confidence that the box office trend is towards "family" pictures.

STATUS of Eddie Bracken's contract with Standard Brands, now that the comic has been indefinitely deferred by the Army's over-30 ruling, has created a situation at Kenyon & Eckhardt agency that must be cleared before Bracken can be offered around to interested clients. Bracken's deal calls for that specified Sunday time on NBC and since it goes to Fred Allen in the autumn the assumption is taken that he's a free agent on the basis of a provisional breach. Standard Brands attorneys back east are said to be scanning the contract and by next week Bracken and his co-packager, Mann Holiner, should know where they stand. Also interested in the final determination are several clients, who will toss in their firm offers if and when Bracken is free to negotiate away from SB.

ANDREWS SISTERS took better than $35,000 gross for their end of stage dates at the San Diego and Los Angeles Orpheum theatres. Sisters played each spot for one week with their "8-To-The-Bar Ranch" radio show troupe and hit a combined take of near the $71,000 mark. Bookings were reported to have been on a straight 50-50 split if grosses zoomed beyond control figures, which resulted to hefty coin cut up between the singing trip. Week in San Diego hit in the neighborhood of $32,500, while date at the Orpheum here grossed approximately $38,000. With the Andrews on the two bookings were Vic Schoen and his Decca orchestra, George "Gabby" Hayes, Foy Willing and the Riders of the Purple Sage, and Alamo Pigmeat Markham.

SPECIAL events staffs of local stations are on standby orders to return to Frisco should the lagging United Nations Conference suddenly come to life. Harry Maizlish is training north this weekend to size up the prospects for KFWB and the KFI production crew is also on call. Visit of President Harry Truman to the conclave and the possible return of Russia's Molotov and Britain's Eden is expected to give the meet the needed hypo after two weeks of desultory foundering, as far as radio and the press are concerned. Once a few rockets are set off the airlings will hustle back to the Bay City but just now the locals are marking time until that day when UNCIO gets back into the headlines and the commentators have something they can sink their teeth into.

WELL, maybe this will keep some of those dancers from counting almost visibly as they struggle through their steps—A new device to enable dancers to keep perfect time without music is being used on the set of B. G. De Sylva's "The Stork Club," at Paramount. A series of blinker lights is set in full view of the dancers but out of range of the cameras. The lights flash to beat to the hoofers after the music has been halted to allow for dialogue recording. Lights are blinked by electrical impulses set up by a "silent record" of the dance number in which inaudible signals take the place of music. The new gadget was originated by George Tallian, Paramount sound engineer.

PAPERS throughout country are beginning to cry for more Hollywood features, now that war news has slackened somewhat since V-E Day, according to local United Press bureau, which yesterday started concentrated effort to supply this new demand. This should be happy harbinger of things to come for studios, whose space in newspapers has been sadly cut during the war years. Papers are demanding faster service on Hollywood feature stuff, UP declares, so local staff is out to service clientele in quantity with doings of movie folk.

IN addition to having its Mexico City representatives test native actresses for femme lead in "An American Guerrilla in the Philippines," 20th-Fox has cabled all its contacts in Central and South America to be on constant lookout and test any likely femme talent for part. Studio reports there isn't a single girl in American motion pictures who fits role of "Curley," who figured prominently in book—consequently, countries below the Rio Grande are to be scoured thoroughly. Company plans to bring to Hollywood any girl whom it believes can fill part.

Walkie-talkies, they were advised by rep of Federal Communications Commission, require a shortwave license and the net was told to get busy and make application. Yesterday call letters, KFGM, came through from Washington with assignment on 35,620 kilocycle band.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

They stayed in their twenties for dozen of years,
The heroes who strutted the stage,
Ignoring the calendar's ominous leers
And hating the mention of age,
Perennial youngsters with toupees of gold,
The matinee idols who never grew old.

Eternally young in the thespian art,
Their ages were secrets profound.
Along came a war and the old applecart
Was scattered all over the ground.
And now, as the new regulations unfold,
The youngsters are suddenly thirty years old.

TECHNICOLOR CUTS TIEUP WITH ALL STRIKING UNIONS

Major producers announced last night that Technicolor had terminated agreements with unions whose members are refusing to cross picket lines, and that any qualified persons are being employed as replacements. Producers' statement follows:

"Technicolor Motion Picture Corp. has canceled its agreements with Local 1185 Machinists, Local 40 IBEW, Local 946 Carpenters and Local 278 Janitors, and has terminated the employment of the members of these unions who have declined to render their services for Technicolor. Their places are being filled by any persons with the proper qualifications to perform the work of machinists, electricians, air conditioning operators, carpenters and janitors."

Officials of other studio unions, many of whom have members working at Technicolor, immediately started an investigation to determine whether non-union workers were being hired or whether they were being furnished with cards by the IATSE.

DRAFT-DEFFERED PLAYERS VOLUNTEER FOR OVERSEAS

Film players draft-deferred by General Hershey's new order enrolled en masse yesterday with the Hollywood Victory Committee for the entertainment army to be sent overseas by the industry. Within 24 hours after Hershey's announcement had released men of 30 or over from induction, every major personality affected by the ruling had volunteered for USO-Camp Shows tours, the Victory Committee reported.

Eddie Bracken and Jack Carson, whose draft status recently forced them to cancel proposed tours, announced that they would be available for early departure overseas. Kenny Baker, John Garfield, Alan Ladd and Barry Sullivan enlisted to go on completion of current film or radio commitments to which they could secure releases only in event of military induction.

The HVC also announced that Paulette Goddard will join Jack Benny on an overseas tour this summer. Trouping with the two stars will be Martha Tilton, Larry Adler and June Brunner.

Plan Heavy Picket Line For Goldwyn Lot

While proposal to center activities on one studio at a time has been left up to strike captains, it was reported last night that an effort was being made to recruit a picket line of 1,000 men and women for Samuel Goldwyn Studio at 7 p. m. today. Leaders said possibilities were that heavy concentration would be held on that studio for some time if it continued operation.

As It Looks to FLANNERY

(CBS News Analyst)

This will be my last column for awhile, but my job will be carried on by another CBS news analyst who has the kind of background that will enable him to do an exceptional job—Dr. J. E. Wallace Sterling. Wally is also history professor at the California Institute of Technology, a former Stanford Hoover Library man, and the author of a forthcoming book on British Foreign Policy. I'm off on a trip that will enable me to know a little more, I hope. As I leave, the German picture is shaping up well. We hear from the Russian intelligence service that Hitler is dead, and we can be certain that when the Russian intelligence service comes to a conclusion like that, it's true. We need no longer worry about a Hitler popping up somewhere. We've got Julius Streicher, the Jew-baiter. We've taken the German High Command and last government into custody, and will carry on ourselves. We'll be aided here and there—as in the Rhineland—by some of the men the Nazis kicked out but failed to kill. A lot of grief is in store in a Europe where factories and crops have been destroyed, and where there will be jobless, starving, restless masses —but we're beginning hopefully. And that raid on Tokyo means we're able to get more power in that left hand now that the right is free.

TELEVISION SEEN AS AIDING THEATRE ATTENDANCE

Television is expected to increase box office receipts of motion picture theatres, in the opinion of Walter Abel, veepee and chairman of the television committee of the Screen Actors Guild. Abel, however, believes that television will eventually replace radio as we know it today.

In a news letter released last night by Prexy George Murphy of the Guild, Abel had the following to say about the effect of television on pictures:

Television will eventually replace radio as we know it today, but it will not satisfy the public's desire for other forms of entertainment. Radio, even though providing some of the finest home entertainment in the world, has not kept people at home, and neither will television.

"Television will not have any adverse effect on motion picture box office receipts; if anything, it might tend to increase them, for theatres will incorporate in their programs large screen television of important news events."

Murphy also disclosed that current SAG contract negotiations with the major producers call for revision of term contracts so that players who sign for motion pictures exclusively for one station will not necessarily grant blanket rights to his or her services in radio, television and other fields of entertainment. While no announcement has been made, it is understood many players favor tightening rules governing loanouts from one studio to another, particularly when the player's stipend is increased.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

Fox Case goes to Washington next month to become assistant director of CBS headquarters there. No promotion within the Columbia ranks is so richly merited and will surely bring a resounding huzza from the trade. In his 10 years as head of public relations, news, special events, talks, features and public service for CBS on the coast, he has contributed generously to the growth of the chain's western link and if his advancement seemingly comes as a reward for his yeoman work in supervising coverage of United Nations Conference in Frisco, it must pass as a coincidence. His promotion has been long time coming and the Frisco job was just another assignment to be taken in his imperturbable stride. The years of rich experience will stand Case in good stead at the nation's capital and he'll get on in his quiet way, just a stopover to bigger things at the home office. If one were to ask Case his formula for success it would probably go something like this: "Keep your eyes and ears open and your mouth shut." And if you don't think he practices it you don't know Case. This paragrapher will miss him as much as anyone who has gone on to better things, having practically been at his elbow at every big event covered by CBS. A former newspaperman, he knew our problems and would go out of his way to lighten the burden. The blow of his leave-taking is softened somewhat by the calibre of men who move up to take his place. Chet Huntley becomes director of public relations and Clint Jones heads up Columbia's Pacific news setup. To one who doesn't need it, we're speaking up for the trade in saying, best of luck.

Don Belding brings back word from the east that there is no downbeat of optimism despite cutbacks and the scramming of war babies from radio next Fall. There'll still be a mad scramble for time, runs the general trade belief, and enough radio-wise spenders to keep the kilocycle humming. Belding scouted reports that all is not well within the Foote, Cone & Belding hierarchy and said that the partners were never in more friendly accord on all elements of the firm's operation.

STATION BREAKS . . . It should be made a part of radio's war record that Kay Kyser hasn't played to a civilian audience—barring War Bond rallies—since February of 1941. When he goes overseas in July he'll meet many of the GI's he broadcast for in the camps, some four-fifths of the men in uniform. . . . Anita Ellis won't be on the Amos 'n' Andy summer replacement. . . . If G. W. Hill is unsuccessful in landing Phil Harris for Hit Parade the nod may go to Andy Russell. It's pretty def that Larry Tibbett won't be back in the fall. . . . Don't be surprised if Bill Goodwin sips java with Burns and Allen at Radio City. . . . Harry Von Zell adds the Joan Davis show to his list come autumn. . . . Y & R seems to be cornering the femme stars. In their stable to date are Ginny Simms, Dinah Shore, Joan Davis and Kate Smith. . . . Bob Brewster, long time J. Walter Thompson producer, may turn account exec for the firm back east.

Considerable of a hassel has been generated by reports of Bing Crosby's farewell to Kraft Music Hall after 10 years. The Groaner is in the unenviable position of having everything except time for himself to enjoy it and it's no secret that he'd like to chuck the weekly radio grind. But Bing is smart enough to know that once he ankles Kraft he's off the air in toto for there's a contract with his autograph that runs through 1950. Nor would Paramount or Decca like the idea, those 20,000,000 dialers being a healthy stimulant to ticket and disc sales. It was recently estimated by an exec at Paramount that C. B. De Mille's weekly broadcasts for Lux were worth a million dollars at the b.o. for his pictures. Bing has the bangtail fever and would like more time to enjoy his hobby. Then, again, 10 years on one show may be a little tiring so maybe the Groaner isn't too unreasonable after all. He's still nursing the yen to be Lux emcee.

NBC goes on another midnight merry-go-round June 30 to help the Treasury Department sell series E bonds. Rounding up an all-star hour show for the big pitch, it will be heard in the east from 12:30 to 1:30 a. m. To our mind the time element just about nullifies any good that can come out of such an effort. Just what percentage of dialers does NBC think is still up and around at that hour? It not only will fall far short of its ultimate accomplishment, but represents a waste of high-powered talent. The milk wagons will be rumbling and the morning papers rolling off the presses when Jack Benny and his LS/MFT troupe wind up the War Bond special around 1:30. But where will the bond buyers be? Pounding an ear and deep in the hay. We've been hard hit by rebates to advertisers this year, say the NBCites, and putting the show on earlier would mean another crimp in the bankroll. Why, then, not make the sponsors share in the expense instead of forcing the network to carry the whole load? The setup is cockeyed and while it's rather late it could still be remedied.

HITCH HIKES . . . Ed Cashman and Bud Berend have a Broadway show idea and the angel in mind is Sid Strotz, who has sprouted theatrical wings before. . . . Reason Ken Dolan's booth at the Derby is always so jampacked is that he brings along his own butter and cheese . . . Craig Maudsley east for three weeks. . . . Russ Johnston of McCann-Erickson in town. . . . Record for consecutive broadcasts goes to Jean Hersholt, hands down. He has done "Dr. Christian" 52 times a year for eight years without a single mis-out. . . . Metro won't let Ray Sinatra do the music on the Marlin Hurt show. . . . Mark Hellinger stands a good chance of copping the Lux emceeship next season.

THREE WAY FIGHT FOR TELVISH CONTROL

ple, who have nursed it along and pioneered it from the outset.

Just now the agencies see a move by the networks to grab off production and thereby knock out the admen's 15% commission for production and other services. But there's a more fearful spectre hovering over the new art—the picture companies with their banking connections.

Another straw in the wind looking toward network domination of radio is the recent upsurge of program packages by the big chains. Some see it as a foot in the door and the outlook is said to have posed an alarming problem. In the early days of radio the nets produced the shows but the agencies moved in and grabbed off the best men through the device of more dinero.

The film barons and their financial advisors have been meeting from time to time under wraps, but leaks could not be avoided. Theatre owners are of a mind that the only protection against home television is theatre television and that could not be accomplished if the control is wrested from them.

If the film competish gets too rough it is figured by insiders that the chains and agencies will combine forces and fight off what is now more than a mere threat. Set manufacturers are said to be standing by for the green light to reconvert, and once the cabinet and table sets start rolling off the assembly lines the fight will come out in the open.

TOP CELEBRITIES MAY PULL SURPRISE MEETING IN S. F.

San Francisco, May 23.—The United Nations Conference for International Organization got the biggest hypo in weeks today with the definite news that Pres. Truman would come to San Francisco to celebrate the finish of one job Franklin Delano Roosevelt began—the drafting of a charter for an organization to wage peace throughout the world. Secretary of State Stettinius laid it on the line in Washington following his hurry-up flight thence from the dull-as-dishwater conference halls here, that the President would come west to speak personally before the closing session of the conference here. The time will be "early in June," but newsreel boys, who've been right often enough to bank on, are ready to lay bets that Truman will arrive here June 5 or 6 and that the entire Washington newsreel artillery will come traipsing out with him, perhaps doubling the present crews here.

DE GAULLE EXPECTED

But Truman's anticipated arrival isn't the only thing that brought a bit of hypo today, what with the Syrian-Lebanese fireworks against France yesterday definitely dropping specific problems before the world, even if the general problems only are laid before the conference. The opinion here is that France can use a double order of prestige here right now, and it is known that General Charles De Gaulle has been invited to the White House. The bets are being made that De Gaulle will show up at San Francisco with Truman and tower like a colossus among the lesser luminaries.

A checkup of radio folk at the conference today yields less than nothing to say that the big shots of radio were coming back to wind up the security sessions in a blaze of crystal gazing and compliments. The consensus seems to be that, as of today, there's nothing the networks' brains can say here that they couldn't say just as melodiously and knowingly back in Washington or New York. But this De Gaulle business, if it jells, and the star-spangled Frenchman decides to share the spotlight here with Truman, might induce the topflight wisdom boys to plane out and give once more.

TOUCH OF SHOW BIZ

There has been no indication that Stalin and Churchill might join Truman here in San Francisco. However, there's one thing that has made the greats . . . they have a sense of theatre and timing and fitness that would be a credit to a super-producer or director, and while it's probably two-thirds wishful thinking, it still makes sense that Churchill and Stalin might consider coming here for their huddle, trebling the final importance of the closing conference sessions, giving all the delegates a new sense of importance that might be the last double clinch on selling the world security charter and Dumbarton Oaks to all the United Nations in toto.

The newsreelers wrapped up the Australian delegation for history today in a nice bit of cinema. Jack Connolly, newsreel chief for the international secretariat, reports that the Australians are the 48th national group to be filmed, and that the final job, on the New Zealand delegation, is set for tomorrow morning. About all that remains now for the newsreels, Connolly says, is to stand by for the final big show. Incidentally Connolly is speeding fine film sequences of Latin-American delegations to the lands below the border, and these are expected to be among the finest good will, good neighbor gestures to come out of the conference.

One interesting by-product of the newsreel effort came in the fact that one unnamed national delegation simply wouldn't go for the business of speaking into the newsreel mikes. When the films were shown at the United Nations theatre along with some superb jobs by Latin-American spokesmen, this delegation got amazing second sight, opined it had made a great mistake, and suggested that the sequence be taken over again with all the voice the newsreel men wanted. The answer to date has been a resolute and charming "no."

130,000 FEET OF FILM SHOT

The White Russian delegation had its press conference today under the leadership of Kuzma V. Kiselev, but it's funny how the grapevine gets around. It was a tepid anti-climax to the spectacular Ukrainian and Syrian-Lebanese conferences yesterday, and only half a hall full of news and radio men turned out. There were no heavy lights and not a single movie camera, and nary a movie shot. Well, with 130,000 feet of raw film already shot, according to feedbox totals, it isn't logical that camera crews shall set up unless there's something worth shooting.

On the serious side, conference meetings swept along today behind closed doors, with evening sessions giving public reports on findings. The big four—China, Russia, Britain and the United States—were readying answers to 22 key questions on how the Yalta formula will be applied. The critical questions of the big five veto power were tops.

All in all, the work goes ahead, nobody appears to be blitzed, the rules for preventing time-wasting talk appear to be working.

FILMS, 'COMMAND' IN WAR BOND PREMIERE

day at 6 p.m. A feature preview will be shown in conjunction. Appearing on the stage with Carmichael at the radio-film War Bond preem will be Bob Sweeney, Hal March, Jimmy Higson and the "Teen-Agers" orchestra. War Bond premiere of the Danny Kaye radio show and his latest film, "Wonder Man," at the Pantages theatre tomorrow night already is a sellout, according to the theatre committee. Event is the second of the joint preems to be held on Hollywood blvd.

Southern California division of Fox West Coast Theatres, under supervision of Andrew Krappman, sold a total of 15,500 War Bonds valued at $2,900,000 through last Sunday, the first week of the Seventh War Loan. First week's total compares with 10,000 pieces valued at $900,000 for initial seven days of the Sixth War Loan.

Ruth Hussey and Ralph Bellamy will make a tour of Wisconsin for the Seventh War Loan. Actress leaves here tomorrow and Bellamy heads west from New York the same day for appearances in Milwaukee, Green Bay, Manatowa, Appleton, Sheboygan and Madison. Pair then go to Tulsa for special events in that city and in Oklahoma City. On Sunday, June 3, they will help launch the Red River Navy Invasion Fleet, which is to travel down the Red river to New Orleans, staging beach maneuvers at Shreveport, Baton Rouge and Alexandria.

Arrangements for the tour were handled by the War Finance Division of the Treasury in cooperation with the War Activities Committee and the Hollywood Victory Committee. James Riley is serving as tour manager for the players.

Eddie Cantor goes on the road today for a four weeks' tour for the Seventh War Loan drive. He is scheduled for special bond shows in Salt Lake City, Pueblo, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Chicago, Cleveland and New York.

STRIKERS GET COIN FROM CARPENTERS INTERNATIONAL

Big union internationals backing studio strikers have started pouring coin into the fight, it was disclosed last night with word that carpenters' international was making an initial contribution of $30,000. Telegram was received by James Skelton, business representative of Studio Carpenters Local 946, that coin was en route and indicating further financial aid would be forthcoming.

Strike interest otherwise is centered on election of studio set decorators, set for 7 to 9 p.m. today at headquarters of National Labor Relations Board at 11 W. 7th st. It was stated several decorators now in military service are flying in to cast their ballots, word being received from one in Iowa and another on the Canadian border.

Both the Conference of Studio Unions and the IATSE have the right to challenge ballots. It has been indicated that virtually all votes will be challenged, the IA claiming decorators have been dismissed by the studios and are not entitled to vote, and the Conference taking the position replacements the IA will attempt to vote are decorators in name only and have no qualifications for the jobs, some merely having been transferred on the studio payrolls from other crafts.

If challenges are sufficient to change the outcome of the election, recommendations on their validity will be made by Regional Director Stewart Meacham. These recommendations will be forwarded to Washington, with the Board having final say.

Roy Brown, international vice-prexy of the machinists, addressed the strike strategy committee at its meeting yesterday. He pointed out that while the painters, carpenters, machinists and IBEW had frequently tangled with each other over jurisdiction, they now are all united in the current studio strike.

Question of centering activity on one studio at a time was left up to strike captains. These leaders have authority to shift heavy picket lines as they deem advisable.

All independent producers were notified yesterday that contracts must be signed with all crafts involved in the strike or picket lines will be established around their studios at 8 a.m. Monday. This action was taken because of failure of PRC to get together with the janitors' local of the Building Service Employes International Union on a basic agreement. Jack Williams is business representative of janitors, while George Bradley, a member of the strike strategy committee, is international vice-prexy of BSEIU.

MEX. BIDDING FOR SIGNAL CORPS PICTURE EQUIPMENT

O., offers have been made to the Signal Corps by Mexican and Latin-American film companies to buy its laboratory and camera equipment. There are two Mexican film companies that want the laboratory equipment from that plant, and pressure is said to have been put on by Mexican government officials to enable one or the other to get this property.

The Wright Field installation is one of the most thorough and complete, technically, of the government film-making plants. About $5,000,000 was expended on the project prior to an investigation by the Truman committee two years ago which resulted in the Astoria studio becoming the chief production center for the Army ground forces.

The foreign film companies are said to have had an inside lead on the possibility that Wright Field would be dismantled by the Signal Corps, and got their offers in far ahead of American film people, who only within the last week became cognizant of the situation and began making inquiries.

Figured that the laboratory setup, camera equipment, etc., could bring the United States government better than $1,000,000, besides giving the purchasers properties and materials that still are on the critical priority list.

CONSENT DECREE ACTION WAS A TOM CLARK IDEA

Washington, May 23.—Tom C. Clark, named today as Attorney General to succeed Francis Biddle, will be at the helm of the Justice Department when the Big Five motion picture consent decree finally is fought out in the courts. Clark, who has been head of the criminal division of the department, formerly headed the anti-trust division and negotiated with the Big Five up to the time it was decided to go to court on the case. Clark spent some months in dickering with the companies and finally reported to Biddle that no satisfactory new consent decree could be worked out. He recommended that the case go to trial.

As previously pointed out in Daily Variety, Clark is a tough opponent and will be inclined to fight hard on the entire case. As a former chief of the anti-trust division he is strongly indoctrinated in the views of the division now headed by Assistant Attorney General Wendell Berge.

IATSE BOARD LEAVES FRI.; TOPS CHECK TAKEOVER TALK

Members of general executive board of the IATSE were reported yesterday ready to check out Friday. Prexy Richard Walsh will remain here to continue directing efforts of IA to keep studios rolling during strike. Board was understood to have been in session for some time yesterday, but members declined to reveal purpose of gathering.

Local officials of the big IATSE studio locals were keeping a close check on situation because of reports that international might attempt to seize control of other locals. Local 44 was taken over by the international after membership voted not to work outside its jurisdiction.

Soundmen, laboratory technicians, costumers and cameramen, who have been leading the IA fight for local autonomy, have adopted similar attitudes, being on record as opposed to taking jobs of striking workers. Reports of possible international seizures have led to renewed talk about the CIO and interest in committee which currently is seeking signatures with the idea of applying to the CIO for affiliation. It was stated last night that group already has secured more than 7,000 signatures, but studio labor tops expressed doubt the campaign would succeed unless some of the leaders of the big crafts lined up with it.

Proser Plans Chicago And BH 'Copacabana'

Chicago, May 23.—As another move in a plan for a coast-to-coast chain of Copacabana niteries, Monte Proser is reported interested in setting up a local spot here in the Congress hotel. Proser also is understood to have set a deal with Arnold Kirkeby, owner of the Beverly-Wilshire hotel in Beverly Hills, whereby he will take over a room in that hostelry on a lease basis to establish his nitery.

Proser will return to the Coast from New York following his proposed marriage in the east to Jane Ball, and will go into film production. At the same time it is understood he will close final deal with Kirkeby for setting up a Coast Copa. Proser will handle the booking of acts and run the nitery independently from the hotel setup.

HEARING CALLED FOR PROPERTYMEN INJUNCTION

The 21 members of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 who filed an injunction suit against the IATSE international have been subpoenaed to give depositions in the office of Attorney Michael Luddy. First four called for May 29 are Jesse Sapp, Gene Mailes, Irwin Hentschel and Robert Ames, who were ordered to trial by the international for "acting against the best interests of the IATSE."

Temporary restraining order issued by Superior Judge Emmet Wilson against the international interfering with meetings of local or continuing with trial of defendants, is set for hearing on May 28. Group being called for depositions the following day was taken to indicate the IATSE might seek a postponement of the hearing.

Local met Tuesday night and nominated officers, leaving it up to the union officers as to whether they proceeded with the election. Officers apparently were awaiting instructions from the international, but it was pretty generally believed no cooperation would be forthcoming and that no recognition would be given to nominations.

The international had announced that election of officers would be postponed until control was returned to the general membership. International seized local after a membership meeting voted that members would not work outside their jurisdiction.

• HOLLYWOOD INSIDE •

NEWS that a liquor holiday has been granted for the month of July is not causing local barkeeps to kick up their heels in joy. Liquor situation, never very lush on the Coast since Pearl Harbor, is due for a near-drought state when Pacific-bound GI's hit here. Larger niteries and hotels are not worried, because they order with an eye to consumption six months in advance. However, the small bars, where most of the GI's imbibe, only buy a few cases at a time. With liquor consumption expected to be hypoed by an influx of thirty troopers, these stocks will get even lower and distilleries do not expect to release more hooch to the Coast than they have in the past. Another negative factor is transportation of wet goods from the East, where most of the distilleries are. Tavern owners regard the situation with a jaundiced eye and expect that they will have to put some peculiar brands of rum and brandy across the counter in lieu of dwindling recognized brands. It is these phoney brands which have been forced upon them, on a case for case basis, when they tried to buy better known labels.

CLOSE associates in Washington of Tom C. He himself will not comment on his policies until after he takes over July 1. However, other Department officials predict the case will continue along the present lines without any change in handling. It hardly appears likely that it would be switched from the court to any mild settlement. Fact is, Clark personally handled the matter all during the negotiation stage with the film leaders and attorneys, in the latter half of 1943 in an endeavor to work out an improved decree. Finally convinced the matter could not be settled around the table, he went to Attorney General Francis Biddle and recommended a divorcement suit as the only solution. This is the suit now pending and may come to trial this fall.

HOLLYWOOD'S supremacy as a motion picture producing center may be seriously challenged by postwar developments, according to Leslie Fenton, of Mutual Productions. Fenton, announcing that he plans to get in touch with Florida legislators who are currently reviving the attempt to lure the film industry to that state, pointed out that "pictures can be made practically now wherever you want to make pictures." "After the war you'll be able to load a production into a couple of planes and start on location wherever fancy or script suggests. The war has shown what the bulldozer can do and it will even be possible to put a couple of good bulldozer operators on the job and make over a whole chunk of natural scenery to fit the film story."

FLATTOP story, which Ralph Wheelwright was to have produced as his first chore for Metro, then was shelved when studio decided on no more war pictures, goes on active list again. Narrative, written nearly a year ago, about a flattop in Pacific sorely wounded but which managed to limp back to states under its own power, is practically the same as the history of the aircraft carrier, Franklin, recently so prominent in the news. Indeed, many of the characters parallel those who conducted themselves so gallantly abroad the Franklin, it is reported. Studio now is working again on screenplay, with film expected to go before the cameras shortly.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Bad buccaneers of bygone years are active on the screen
Their cutlass fights on stormy nights enliven many a scene.
The crews of old are dead and cold and long since turned to clay,
While studios have overlooked the pirates of today.

Out yonder in the salty deep, the U-boat pirates roam,
More deadly than the buccaneers who roved the ancient foam.
The film producers weave their yarns of long-forgotten scenes
And fail to grasp the drama of the pirate submarines.

Film Reviews

Three's a Crowd

(Melodrama)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Executive producer, Armand L. Schaefer. Associate producer, Walter Goetz. Director, Lesley Selander. Original screenplay, Dane Lussier. Based on Mignon Eberhart's novel, "Hasty Wedding." Photography, Bill Bradford. Film editor, Tony Martinelli. Assistant director, Joe Dill. Art director, Russ Kimball. Costume supervision, Adele Palmer.

CAST—Features Pamela Blake, Charles Gordon, Gertrude Michael, Pierre Watkin, Virginia Brissac, Ted Hecht, Grady Sutton, Tom London, Roland Varno, Anne O'Neal, Bud Geary, Nenette Vallon.

REVIEWED at the Los Angeles Paramount, May 24, 1945. Running time: 58 MINS.

"Three's A Crowd" is a celluloid clambake that should never have happened. But since it did its only bid for attention is as poor-grade filler for an exhibitor stuck for a second feature. It purports to be based on the Mignon Eberhart novel, "Hasty Wedding," but bad writing, direction and playing thoroughly eliminate any value the novelist's tome may have had.

Plot of the Dane Lussier script, as directed by Wesley Selander, has a girl about to marry one man when she thinks she loves another. The latter is a cad, after her money. She pays a pre-wedding visit to his apartment and returns home content to go through marriage with her fiance. The cad is killed. Before the weary opus is over several others are bumped off, with the bride and hubby suspects. It finally comes out that the bride's sister-in-law has been doing the killing, as if any audience will care by that time, and the newly-weds have a chance to consummate that up to now hectic matrimonial venture.

The cast is handicapped by script and direction and does nothing to overcome these burdens. Production values and technical ends indicate no one was particularly enthusiastic about the outcome.

'Limberlost' Audition Waxed For Hamilburg

The Power of the Whistler

(Melodrama)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Leonard S. Picker. Director, Lew Landers. Original screenplay, Aubrey Wisberg. Suggested by the CBS program, "The Whistler." Photography, L. W. O'Connell. Film editor, Reg Browne. Art director, John Datu. Set decorations, Sidney Clifford. "Whistler" theme music, Wilbur Hatch. Assistant director, Leonard J. Shapiro. Sound engineer, Hugh McDowell.

CAST—Stars Richard Dix, with Janis Carter, Jeff Donnell, Loren Tindall, Tala Birell, John Abbott, Murray Alper, Cy Kendall.

REVIEWED at the Guild theatre, Hollywood, May 24, 1945. Running time: 66 MINS.

"The Power of the Whistler" shapes up as an okay entry for supporting positions. There are plenty of thrills and suspense crowded into its short footage by Lew Lander's direction, which treats the melodramatic factors seriously for the best results, and the cast goes about its assignments for the staisfaction of thriller fans.

Aubrey Wisberg's original script, suggested by CBS's ether character, "The Whistler," deals with a homicidal maniac on the hunt for those whom he believes have harmed him. Temporarily losing his memory from an accidental blow on the head, the maniac is befriended by a girl who has seen death around him while idly reading his fortune in a cafe. She undertakes to run down clues to his identity. Before the search is over he regains his memory but doesn't let the girl know. He takes her with him to meet his first victim, but on the way she becomes suspicious and barely escapes with her life. Trapped in an old barn, she kills the maniac with a pitchfork.

Richard Dix does a thoroughly satisfactory job of the maniac, a man with several personalities, some of them kind. Janis Carter is excellent as the girl, sharing equal footage with Dix. Jeff Donnell, Loren Tindall, Tala Birell, John Abbott, Murray Alper and Cy Kendall are others who appear to advantage in the cast.

Leonard S. Picker's production gives good values for the thrill market. L. W. O'Connell's photography, editing by Reg Browne and other credits are excellent.

Blazing Frontier

(Western)

PRC RELEASE. Producer, Sigmund Neufeld. Director, Sam Newfield. Original story and screenplay, Patricia Harper. Photography, Robert Cline. Film editor, Holbrook N. Todd. Sound engineer, Hans Weeren. Assistant director, Melville DeLay. Production manager, Bert Sternbach.

CAST—Stars Buster Crabbe, Al (Fuzzy) St. John, Marjorie Manners, Milton Kibbee, I. Stanford Jolley, Frank Hagney, Ken Maynard, George Chesebro, Frank Ellis.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, May 24, 1945. Running time: 58 MINS.

"Blazing Frontier" lives up to its title, with guns blazing all over the town of Red Rock and vicinity, although the boys tossed away their artillery whenever the going got hot, and wound up with a good old roughhouse, thereby saving the homesteads of the honest settlers who had been duped by a nasty lawyer named Sharp.

Chief homestead-saver was Buster Crabbe, who played the role of Billy the Kid, assisted by his whiskered pal, Al (Fuzzy) St. John, who had a heart of gold beneath his comical makeup and helped to preserve law and order by blowing off half his beard with a can of blasting powder.

There was consternation in the town of Red Rock when Billy the Kid and his friend Fuzzy arrived on the scene. They pretended they were baddies and joined the nasty lawyer and the crooked railroad detective in their nefarious plot to flimflam the settlers. You could tell right away that Billy and Fuzzy were working in the interests of law and order, but they were so slick that the gangsters did not suspect it. Neither did the blonde, played by Marjorie Manners, who gave Billy a lot of dirty looks before she discovered that he was a perfect gentleman in cowboy raiment.

There was plenty of skullduggery, including a hot poker game with a cold deck, a case of forgery detected by Billy the Kid's eagle eye, two stagecoach holdups, a jailbreak, a lynching bee, eight chases through yonder canyon, a sniping duel in the hills and a final he-man struggle in which Billy flung away both his trusty rods and his 10-gallon hat and vanquished the villain under the Marquis of Queensbury rules. Fuzzy finished the picture in a blaze of comedy by dropping his lighted cigarette into a can of gunpowder.

HEARING BY WMC TUESDAY ON STRIKE JOB REFERRALS

A War Manpower Commission panel, chairmanned by Anthony O'Brien, meets Tuesday to hear arguments on appeals from WMC order banning referral of workers to jobs vacated by studio strikers and refusing availability certificates to strikers. Hearing will open at 11 a.m. in headquarters of the WMC in Los Angeles.

Attorneys Homer Mitchell and Dean Johnson will represent the major producers, with Attorney Frank Pestana, Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, and Ed Mussa, business representative of Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421, appearing for the strikers. The IATSE probably will be represented by Attorney Michael Luddy, with either Prexy Richard Walsh or Roy Brewer, IA international representative, sitting in.

Producers and the IATSE appealed from order prohibiting job referrals being given workers to replace strikers or employes who refuse to cross the picket lines. Strikers appealed from second part of order which prevented them from securing availability slips in order to report on other jobs. Law permits them to work on another job for 26 hours, but availability certificate is necessary to accept other permanent employment.

Wendy Barrie has been the secret bride of David Myers since May 3rd. Then they'll send out an official announcement that they're "at home" to all their friends. . . . When Bette Davis leaves for overseas in August, most GI's will be seeing her for the first time in a stage play. Production, under the auspices of USO, will be rehearsed on the coast. . . . Two week revival of "Carmen Jones" at the City Center broke all records for another of "Butch" LaGuardia's pet projects. . . . Which reminds me that "the banton Barnum," Billy Rose, was a ringside observer at Cafe Society's second anniversary party for Jimmy Savo—to o.o. him as a possibility for your "Continental Varieties," Mr. R.? . . . If Annie Laurie Williams is wearing a perpetual smile these days, it has nothing to do with any new literary coup, but because she's just received word that her husband, Maurice, who has been a prisoner in a concentration camp for the past years, is alive and well. . . . S. J. Perelman and Al Hirshfeld, who went to Hollywood to find a composer to write the score to Ogden Nash's lyrics for their new musical, came back to New York and signed Vernon Duke.

ADD ARRIVALS: Bob Hope, Vera Vague, and Arthur Hornblow, Jr., at the Waldorf. . . . Lisbeth Scott at the Marguery. . . . Helen Ferguson at the Essex House.

CAPSULE CRITICISM: Capt. John Lee Mahin, Oscar Serlin and Capt. Charles Grayson were swapping tales about the art of criticism over the dinner table at Bradley's. Oscar recalled that the most astute comment he remembered was told to him by his grandmother many years ago. In summing up a play she had just attended, she said, "In the first act, she didn't want it and he did. In the second act, he didn't want it and she did. In the third act, they both wanted it. And that was the end of the play!"

USOcko FARE: If there has been any criticism directed at some of the entertainment sent overseas, it certainly is being remedied in the ambitious production schedule of 16 plays now in rehearsal under the aegis of Franklin Heller and Si Gross. Included in the lineup is a roster of plays and players of top notch Broadway calibre. e.g. Mary Boland is directing her former stage success, "MEET THE WIFE," with Betty Garde recreating her original role. Grace George is also in fine fettle, directing Joanna Roos in her former showcase, "Kind Lady." Everett Sloane is putting the "Front Page" company through their paces. Brandon Peters and frau, Alice Thompson, will be the "Mr. and Mrs." of "Junior Miss." And Arthur Hopkins will soon have either "Petrified Forest" or "Tonight Or Never" in rehearsal. Christopher Morley, who was so anxious to play the role of "The Commentator" in "Our Town," was that disappointed when he was turned down for his physical, but he needn't feel too badly, because now "Our Town" has been cancelled out. Mary Morris, another casualty of the medical board, is being replaced by Hilda Vaughan in "Double Door." With a setup like this, the GI's will be seeing shows that are worthier than some of the alleged entertainment currently on Broadway at a $4.80 top!

SOLON PROPOSES FILMSTERS AS EUROPE ADMINISTRATORS

Washington, May 24.—Congressman Joseph Clark Baldwin of New York today proposed the lend-leasing of motion picture personalities to work as administrators in the re-education of peoples who have been under Nazi tyranny. Under this unique plan, Congressman Baldwin advocated that America's personalities, such as Clark Gable, George Brent, Charles Bickford, Spencer Tracy, Chester Morris and Joe E. Brown, would, overnight, be able to do more good in inspiring confidence than Nazi and Fascist-trained educators we contemplate sending abroad.

Baldwin said the morale value of these film personalities would be enormous and they should be given administrative jobs of one year in European countries. He declared: "These men have no political plans or purposes and are remembered as personalities of a peaceful world.

"I am not thinking of personal appearances. Men like Gable, Brent, Bickford, Tracy, Morris and Brown would be my idea of the proper administrative heads in Europe. These men have worked on our War Bond drives and we turn to them to put over any other drive, such as the President's Birthday Ball. I am sure they will gladly contribute even more of their time and their efforts toward making a better post-war world."

RAW FILM OUTLOOK FOR 3RD QUARTER IS BRIGHTER

there should be 342,000,000 feet of 35mm. raw stock left. Of this amount, about 9,000,000 feet would go to the producers of industrial and advertising films.

During the current quarter the Hollywood studios received a total of 261,000,000 feet plus 15,000,000 feet allowed for spoilage. The newsreels were awarded another 53,000,000 feet.

Though Hollywood and the newsreels are in line for an extra 4,000,000 feet in the third quarter, a number of factors could intervene in the next month to change this a little one way or another.

Some experts are guessing that when the scramble is over the industry probably will be allotted just a trifle less than in the second quarter, which is about what Daily Variety predicted more than a month ago.

DRAMATIC, STIRRING MARINE EPIC IN 'IWO JIMA'

Into less than 20 minutes of motion picture time the Navy, Marine and Coast Guard camera crews have compressed a month of hell on the "Hot Rock" of the Pacific, in "To the Shores of Iwo Jima."

Editing of this war documentary short has stressed the spectacular Technicolor possibilities of naval bombardment — especially the pre-invasion night shelling—more than the murderous action in which more than 4,000 Americans met death. Narration and scene selection are a bit too much on the propaganda side, but the picture is still an accurate, gripping record of one of the hardest-fought and most strategically important amphibious operations of the Pacific war.

The battle scenes have a surprising routine-training atmosphere about them, due to the fact that the enemy is at no time in sight. The Japs are hidden in their underground defense positions and their presence is indicated only by the whine of bullets above the slowly advancing troops, the grim, sweat-streaked faces, and the sudden stumbling collapse of men here and there along the line.

Dramatic highlight of the film is the historic flag-raising incident on Mt. Suribachi.

Filming of the action was no picnic in itself. Two photographers were killed, one is missing in action and 12 were wounded.

Picture gets nationwide release through the WAC on June 7.

Russell Unit Booked Into Four Spots

Boston, Cleveland, Columbus and New York yesterday were set as first four spots for first stage unit to be produced by Samuel H. Stiefel, of Mickey Rooney, Inc., starting June 28. Top-lining Andy Russell, unit will include Raymond Scott orchestra, the Pied Pipers and Joe de Rita and Frank Scannell.

Rushing James Through

Harry James' scenes in 20th-Fox's "Kitten On the Keys" are being rushed by Director Gregory Ratoff, so former can wind by June 1. Bandleader is slated to leave following day for New York to open six-week engagement June 8 at Hotel Astor Roof. Film has three weeks of shooting after James completes his stint.

ALL BALLOTS CHALLENGED; 1421 CLAIMS IA DEFEATED

IATSE and Local 1421, and then placed in a safety deposit box. Today Stewart Meacham, regional director for the NLRB here, will notify the board in Washington of the challenges and submit his recommendations.

A hearing probably will be held here, at which time testimony pertaining to the election and qualification of voters will be taken and submitted to Washington. The board then will decide what challenges will be recognized and will order the votes counted. The losing side undoubtedly will petition for reviews or what have you, with the possibility it may be weeks or even months before a final decision is handed down.

ONE VOTE UNCHALLENGED

All but one vote, that of Walter Tilford, was challenged either by the IATSE or representatives of Local 1421. Tilford's vote was challenged by Michael Tamiroff, chief field examiner for the NLRB here, in order to protect the secrecy of the ballot.

The Tilford vote created quite a surprise when his name was certified by the producers as an IA voter. Tilford has been a decorator for 28 years and is one of the rank and file leaders in the current studio controversy. The Local 1421 representatives declined to challenge his vote, although all other IA ballots had been challenged. The IA challenged all Local 1421 votes and were joined by the producers, who endorsed their challenge on the back of the envelope of every ballot challenged by the IA local.

LISTS SHOWN AT LAST MINUTE

The IATSE union refused to submit a list of its eligible voters until the morning of the election, so Local 1421 waited until the last minute to submit an additional list of 14 names, men in military service, etc. Of that number, 10 showed up to vote. Others flying in from Idaho and other Army installations were unable to arrive in time to cast their ballots.

Strike replacements, who were voted by the IATSE, were escorted to NLRB headquarters by IA officials. Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, and Ed Mussa, business representative of Local 1421, claimed a careful check of the voting disclosed that 60 decorators cast their votes for Local 1421, with a strong possibility that at least five of the IA's 50 strike replacements also voted against affiliation with Local 44 of the IA.

Roy Brewer, IA international representative, and C. B. (Cappy) Du-Val, business representative of Local 44, acted as observers for the IATSE, with Fred Pelton and Victor Clarke representing the major producers. Herbert Sorrell and Otto Siegel checked the voting for Local 1421. The NLRB was represented by Chief Field Examiner Michael Tamiroff, Quinton Agren, Benny T. Phoenix and David Bingham.

SORRELL SATISFIED

Sorrell and Mussa expressed complete satisfaction with the election. They declared that even with strike replacements casting ballots, a decided majority had voted in favor of affiliation with Local 1421.

Challenges were made on the following grounds:

"This voter is challenged on the ground that he has not properly identified himself.

"This coter is challenged on the ground that he is not a set decorator by vocation, he is not now employed as a set decorator, and has never been employed as a set decorator.

"This voter is challenged on the ground that he is a temporary employee, placed on the employer's payroll for the scole purpose of participating in this election.

"This voter is challenged on the ground that he was employed in the classification of set decorator in excess of the employer's manpower requirements in that classification.

"This voter is challenged on the ground that he has been illegally hired in contravention of Federal regulations governing manpower stabilization and control for the Southern California area."

Board has authority to recognize any of the challenges it desires or to void the entire election. IA contends striking set decorators were ineligible to vote since their employment had been terminated by the studios after they walked out.

There was little studio strike activity other than a brief flare-up at Goldwyn studio when a picket line of 500 men and women reported outside the studio. Sheriff's deputies were called to clear the streets, which had been blocked by pickets, but expected trouble failed to develop when officers cleared a pathway for workers to enter the gate.

COURTS TO RULE ON IATSE CONTROL OF LOCAL UNIONS

Legal right of the IATSE international to seize control of local unions whose members refuse to follow instructions of national officers is scheduled for argument in Superior court Monday. Hearing is to determine whether temporary restraining order secured by 21 members of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 will be made permanent.

Temporary restraining order prevents the international from proceeding with trial of four members accused of "acting against the best interests of the IATSE," prohibits it from interfering with autonomy of local or from preventing meeting of union. Local 44 executive board asked international to take over on grounds members "were out of control," but general membership has twice voted that it disapproved of action of board.

Takeover was ordered after membership had voted not to work outside its jurisdiction. This was in response to orders from Prexy Richard Walsh that members take over jobs of studio strikers. Since the IATSE has subpoenaed the 21 plaintiffs for depositions, starting Tuesday, indications are that hearing might be postponed.

The IA was reported to have asked for a week's postponement with probability plaintiffs would agree.

RUSS DOING TOP BIZ IN 36 BERLIN HOUSES

Washington, May 27.—Russians, restoring Berlin into a semblance of normalcy, report they now have 36 film theatres operating and playing capacity at all performances. In addition to Soviet films, "selected" German pictures now are being permitted.

The German State Opera orchestra is playing in the Charlottenburg district, least damaged of the city, and the Schiller theatre is slated to open with Friederich Schiller's play, "Die Raeuber." The Light Opera theatre also is planning to reopen.

'WIND' OUTWHISTLES SHELLS

Okinawa (Delayed).—Longest showing of the longest picture was chalked up here with the screen of "Gone With the Wind."

But the 10 hours it took to show the film in this combat zone probably didn't seem as long to the audience as the three hours and 48 minutes regular theatre running time for the show. They were plenty busy—mostly dashing to and from the foxholes.

Jap artillery shells began landing nearby just as the "battle for Atlanta" flashed on the screen. The audience sacrificed realism for safety and took to the foxholes.

Interruptions to the picture were provided about equally by film breaks, reel changes, Jap air raids and artillery shelling.

JOAN DAVIS AIRER NEXT FOR AIR, PIC BOND PREEM

RISKIN WARNS AGAINST GERMAN DIET OF PROPAGANDA FILMS

New York, May 27.—Robert Riskin, retiring chief of OWI Overseas Motion Picture Bureau, today warned against rigid treatment of Germans in using strictly propaganda films. In re-education of the Germans, such films may be okay for a period, but "the time will come when Germans will be allowed to shop around for entertainment, when they won't be forced to see pictures, when pictures will have to attract them."

While Riskin agrees that Germans should be forced to see documentaries now, he stated that eventually entertainment films will have to be used as bait. Any attempt to force propaganda pictures on the Germans won't meet with success, particularly owing to their current psychological frame of mind. Riskin said the Ger-

• HOLLYWOOD INSIDE •

"JANIE GETS MARRIED" company is meeting with plenty of grief on its location in North Hollywood. House was selected as exterior, but when troupe arrived it was discovered everybody on block had some connection with pictures and were up 100% on their rights. One woman next door showed up first day with a long list which she said her assistant director husband had telephoned to her to insist upon, if Warners so much as set foot on their ground. List catalogued prices that would be charged for a light placed in yard, a generator, cable run across lawn, etc.

MARX BROTHERS are going to do a repeat on system with which they tried out gags used in their old Metro comedy, "The Big Store." Within next few weeks they will go on three to four week junket into the hinterlands along the Pacific Coast to try out gags and material they plan to incorporate into their forthcoming comedy, "A Night In Casablanca," which David Loew will produce for United Artists release. Comics want to get popular reaction to routines, and are going to territory where no one picture-wise will cop any of their ideas.

AN astute top independent producer did a fast piece of thinking recently. He had an actor under contract, for fairly heavy coin, who had four weeks to go on a layoff according to his contract. He decided to call him back to work from his layoff, put him on the payroll for one week. Then taking advantage of the strike conditions, the producer exercised the suspension clause of the contract. The actor's attorney was called upon to see what could be done, about this fast one. His decision was "nothing."

LENNEN, WINCHELL TALK PACT RENEWAL

gens, it is understood he prefers to continue to work with people with whom he has been associated in the past, rather than take a chance with a new agency which might bring about complications and headaches when phases of his script are not to the satisfaction of the new sponsor or agency. It even is likely that, should Winchell ask it, the Jergens people would up his weekly stipend on the renewal.

Winchell ends his present contract shortly for his summer vacation, and plans are to again this year have three replacements. Two have been decided upon and the third likely will be chosen today. Those to be replacements are Ray Henley for three to four minutes, with Frank Kingdon, the Winchell choice, instead of Newsweek, whom the sponsor wanted, going on for five minutes of factual talk, with the other two minutes probably going to Louella Parsons for Hollywood gossip. Latter would do this stint preceding her five minutes with Woodbury over the Blue. Plan would be for Miss Parsons to change her routine on the Woodbury show to consist of spot news and a possible interview with a film player. Miss Parsons is said to be agreeable to the routine switch, with Lennen's okay being needed to cement the show.

NY LEGIT OPENING

MEMPHIS BOUND

New York, May 27.—"Memphis Bound," opening at the Broadway theatre with its second act revised from the original in Boston, where the colored-cast musical did well at the box office, despite variance in performances.

Starring Bill Robinson and featuring Avon Long, it's supposed to be a swing version of "Pinafore," but the book veers away from the original perhaps too much for Gilbert and Sullivan fans. "Hollywood Pinafore," due next week at the Alvin, will doubtless be real competition.

As expected, Robinson runs away with the show. His best ditty is the interpolated "Growing Pains." But there are other new numbers and very little of the original score, merely semblances of those songs. One such is "Ruler of the Queen's Navee," with Robinson leading. He also leads one of the best production numbers, "I Am the Monarch of the Sea." Robinson does more hoofing than he has for years and his stairs dance seems as effective as ever.

Ada Brown and the Delta Rhythm Boys score with "I'm Called Little Buttercup." Avon Long gets something with "Fair Moon," with the quartet also figuring. Bill Daniels tenors the melodies, "Nightingale, the Moon and I," and "Old Love and Brand New Love." Ann Robinson does well with "Gilbert and Sullivan Blues."

Show is lively, but chances would be better if it delivered more laughs.

Sterling Chain Adds Three In Northwest

Seattle, May 27.—John Danz, president of Sterling theatre chain, announces acquisition of three new theatres in Kelso and Longview. The houses were formerly operated by Wm. G. Ripley. They are the Columbia, 1,000-seater, and the Columbia, 750, both in Longview, and the Kelso, 900, in Kelso, nearby town. W. T. Allen, Jr., former suburban theatre owner in Tacoma, will be manager of the trio. This expands the Sterling count to 22—two in The Dalles Ore.; the others in Seattle.

SEEK MEMBER OK ON ASCAP TELE RIGHTS

New York, May 27.—Music licensing rights for television probably will be handled by American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, following a resolution passed recently by the Society's board of directors. Publishers on Ascap's board, it is understood, were in favor of retaining the licensing rights to themselves.

However, in view of Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora's decision in the BMI-Marks case, balance swung in favor of the Society retaining the rights. Decision of the board will go to the members shortly for ratification.

CURFEW LIFTING LIKELY HEADACHE FOR BISTROS

Lifting of the midnight curfew in California June 1 on drinking for military and naval personnel as well as civilians has brought mixed reactions among Coast bonifaces, while the rollback of drinking hours until 2 a.m. for both civilians and servicemen has been greeted enthusiastically by the potential late-hour consumers.

Top nitery and hotel men feel they can pick up extra profits, which were denied under the midnight shuttering system. On the Strip, where the curfew has been ignored except during the seven-week period of the Byrnes mandate, there will be no change whatsoever.

MIDNIGHT LID EXTENDED

Hotels and other big niteries around town, which have been observing the midnight liquor lid, will only extend the drinking period. Since the hoisting of the national curfew after V-E Day, these spots resumed their late shows, although liquor was off the tables by the Cinderella hour.

Neither the top niteries nor the hotels are worried about inroads on their liquor stocks, inasmuch as they order months in advance of consumption. They do expect to get more space in their cellars than has been the case since Pearl Harbor. But they are rejoicing over the opportunity to resume business as usual.

SEPIA SPOTS HAPPY

Especially pleased are the proprietors of the sepia spots. Their clientele, which is in the habit of arriving late and staying later, has been more affected by the midnight closing than most other niteries. With the return to 2 a.m. closing many of these places, which went into the red or shuttered altogether, will resume operations on the grand scale of pre-war days.

In the smaller cocktaileries and saloons, however, there is distinct apathy to the longer hours. In the first place, it will mean longer working hours for the bartenders. In many of these places the proprietor tends bar himself or with the help of one other barkeep. With help shortages this longer drinking period presents a rough problem.

LIQUOR SHORTAGE SEEN

Another factor is the imminent shortage of liquor. Smaller spots do not order lavishly, taking a case here and another there, as the rule. With the influx of GI's expected on the Coast as the Pacific war is hypoed, greater slashing of stocks is expected. And most of these saloonkeepers do not think the July distilling holiday will help them, because most of the distilleries are in the east and shipping to the Coast will be difficult.

As it stands, too, there is plenty of not-so-hot rum and brandy in the backrooms of these bars, purchased on package deals when they tried to get bourbons and scotch. They believe the distilleries will force them to liquidate these stocks by holding off shipment for a time.

BIZ BOOM EXPECTED

Among the smaller operators there is only one saving factor. Business, which up to V-E Day was booming, has been very slack. Layoffs of war workers and tightening up of lush coin is reputedly the reason. With a breathing spell of this sort, the smaller spots may be able to squeak through on their supplies. But they still aren't overjoyed at the long hours or the possibility of losing permanent customers because of serving bad hooch.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

Harry W. Flannery is now on his way to distant parts. It's a jaunt he richly deserves. All of us wish him good luck and happy landings. The other day he said in this column that he hoped his trip would enable him to know a little more. I assure you that it will because Harry absorbs information like a sponge takes on water. When he returns we shall discover that the salt has new savor and the meat new strength. As he leaves, a trio of British soldiers have dumped the blanket-wrapped body of Heinrich Himmler into an unmarked grave. All the big shot Nazis are now accounted for except Ribbontrop. So is the German high command and the rump government of Doenitz. And already the Allies are taking the first steps to restore small local government by the Germans themselves in the political and moral wilderness of the late unlamented Third Reich. As more and more Allied power shifts to the Pacific, that war theatre will provide the most spectacular and grimaced headlines. The war hangover in Europe makes for a complex headache that cannot be relieved by aspirin Hence the urgency of a big three meeting. And this meeting may not await the conclusion of the British election because the doughty Churchill has his own ideas as to the best treatment for a hangover headache and he might prefer to have a further hand in administering treatment before having run the uncertain gauntlet of a political campaign, since many run but not all are chosen.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Peggy Wood, who celebrated V-E Day in Paris and clippered back to New York after eight months overseas with the two companies of "Blithe Spirit," is already at work on a book of her experiences—natch! She is tilting it after the name of the jeep she saw parked on the roadside near Nancy, which to her epitomized the red tape everywhere—"Organized Confusion!"

Bea Lillie, who was sent a fat advance check by a publishing house to write her memoirs, flirted with it for five minutes and then sent it back. The thought of being trailed every minute by a "ghost" (writer) was too appalling to contemplate—even at those prices!

When Mrs. Ruth Davis started the biog of her daughter, Bette wanted her to title it, "Pinky To Pinky," a provocative title, because you'd have to read the book to discover it's "inner family" significance. Mrs. Davis preferred her own title, "Shoot If You Must." She submitted both to the publishers and her agent, MCA. They stood pat with her, which explains why a preening parent wired her child, "Mother knows best!"

THE SON ALSO RISES: Harold Winston, visiting his 80-year-old mother in Long Beach, was discussing President Truman's 91-year-old mother's first flight to Washington. "You're a fraidy cat!" kidded Harold. "You'd never have the courage to fly like Mrs. Truman."

Whereupon Mrs. Winston retorted, "My son, when you are the President of the United States, I promise I'll fly to Washington, too!"

"WILL"-ing AND EAGER: Will Glickman, writer on the Beatrice Kaye and Kate Smith etheribes, is taking rhumba lessons only because his wife, Hortense, threatened to divorce him if he didn't.

After the first lesson Will went up to his instructor and asked eagerly, "How soon will it be before I can get a white blouse with flounces!"

ITEMS DROPPED BY THE BROADWAYSIDE: No one was more startled to read that Tallulah Bankhead is being tested for the title role in "Forever Amber" than Tallulah. "How did that Hollywood columnist get such a foolish notion?" groaned Tallu, who has no intension of doing ANY picture until after her Theatre Guild subscription tour in Philip Barry's play, teeing off in September. . . . Jean Hersholt is marking time at the Hampshire House until he receives a priority to return to his native Denmark on a special political mission. . . . Paula Laurence thumbed down the Joan Davis ether replacement because she was honest enough to admit she wasn't for the spot. . . . Louise Lattimer, remembered in Hollywood as the ex-"it" of Erwin Gelsey, who recently received a quiet divorce from Capt. Bill Atkinson, is now the bride of Richard Nolan and lives in Boston. . . . Jeanne Cagney and Kim Spalding will team up for a "Mr. and Mrs." radio serial. . . . Annabella, finally catching up with her family in Paris, found her mother, father and elder brother well, but learned the tragic news that her younger brother had died in the line of duty. . . . Now that Mary Martin's "act of God" has bowed her out of "One Touch of Venus," don't be surprised to hear that Greer Garson is being paged for the role. . . . Dick Arlen is recuperating at Mayo's Clinic—not from "Too Hot For Maneuvers" but from a mastoid op. As soon as he is well enough, he'll check back with Pine and Thomas. . . . Beverly Roberts and Wynn Gibson are now neighbors of Katharine Cornell at Sneeden's Landing, where they've rented Stuart Cheney's house for the summer. . . . Hal Wallis, back to the Hollywoods, leaving his new glamour threat, Lizabeth Scott, to garner reams of advance publicity in anticipation of her auspicious debut in "You Came Along," already skedded to open with a bang on the 4th of July at the New York Paramount. . . .Memo to Jack Warner: advise your story department to concentrate on scripts with a romantic angle for Helmut Dantine. He's the newest crush of the bobby soxers. Such goings-on during his p.a. at the Strand, you'd think it was Sinatra! . . . Spotted in the luncheon mob at "21": Ida Lupino, Howard Strickling, Bernie Fineman, Anne Baxter, Eddie Goulding, Patsy Ruth Miller, Anatole Litvak.

CHI'S CONGRESS TO RUN OWN NITERIES; PROSER NIXED

Chicago, May 27.—Monte Proser's plans for opening a "Copacabana" nitery in the Congress hotel similar to his New York spot, have been blacked out by Dr. Charles Levy and Sam Leeds, officers of the corporation which recently bought the hotel. The latter will run the hotel's three spots themselves.

Shuttered three years ago when the Army took it over for a radio school, the Congress houses the Casino (formerly Josef Urban Room), Pompeiian Room and the Glass Hat. Plans now, Levy and Leeds said, are to reopen the Pompeiian Room and the Casino by July 1 and the Glass Hat by Oct. 1.

Pompeiian Room will be the main dining room; Casino, it is planned, will be run on the order of the Mayfair Room in the Blackstone hotel, with name acts and bands. Glass Hat, opening off Michigan ave., will be a cocktail lounge as before, with a six-piece band.

Overall renovation costs, it is figured, will run in the neighborhood of $1,500,000.

RISKIN WARNS ABOUT GERMAN FILM DIET

mans are wary of propaganda, having been fed on it by Nazi regime for years, and would be skeptical of lessons in films shown by Allied occupation forces.

Best method for re-education of Germans would be also to use films made in Germany under Allied editorial supervision, Riskin suggested. Such a plan, he said, has been informally discussed by the Allied powers, but he foresees confusion until all agree on what should be shown and said.

Retiring overseas film chief has recommended interchange of films and ideas among the major powers occupying Germany. He also has recommended formation of a new picture company subsidized by major companies for production and distribution abroad of documentary and information films picturing the American way of life. Such a corporation would take an initial investment of $500,000 and would be designed for non-theatrical purposes.

LOUIS MAYER NATION'S TOP EARNER WITH $908,000 IN '44

Philadelphia, May 27.—Louis B. Mayer, managing director of production for Loew's, Inc., was paid $908,069.95 last year, according to report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission here. Total represents a wage cut of $228,800 under the preceding year, or $4,400 a week less, but Mayer still remains the highest paid wage-earner in the nation. Of total, $105,000 was his guaranteed weekly salary while $752,069.95 represented bonuses. Year before he received $1,034,492 bonus:

Next highest paid Loew's employe was Nicholas M. Schenck, who received total of $391,860, including a bonus of $261,860. In 1943 Schenck was paid a total of $512,-391.

Other high salaries and bonuses paid were $300,726, including $142,126 bonus, to E. J. Mannix, Metro vice-president; J. Robert Rubin, Loew's vice-prexy, $175,755; David Bernstein, Loew's vice-prexy, $181,906; Sam Katz, Metro vice-prexy, $144,126; Alexander Lichtman, Metro vice-prexy, $122,084, and Benjamin Thau, Metro vice-prexy, $109,144.

MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVANCE EXPECTED TO LIFT SF MEET

San Francisco, May 27.—Showing of "lest we forget" newsreel documentary of devastation visited on Axis-invaded countries was being projected today as highlight of possible United Nations Conference Memorial Day observance. Idea of Mike McDermott, of State Department press relations, is to have the film shown the entire delegation at a special session in the Opera House.

Radio, newsreel and press covering the conference found today an all-time low in excitement. The boys hoped for a chance of something juicy tomorrow from a scheduled press conference with Herbert V. Evatt, Australia's foreign minister. Aside from that the newshawks found what comfort they could in conjecture that General De Gaulle might fly west with President Truman when he comes here to address the final plenary session.

Entertainment for delegates is tapering off sharply, with no civic committee events whatever scheduled after the current week.

Lana Turner created a mild sensation, turning up at the Turkish cocktail clambake at the St. Francis with Turhan Bey.

It isn't news—but the current acid test for cocktailers on the loose is to get them to try and say "Secretary of State Stettinius." If you make it you get another cocktail.

United Nations theatre's nightly showing of major feature and conference newsreels is getting capacity houses.

Seeks Refusal of New License For KRLD

Washington, May 27.—Unusual complaint was lodged with the FCC by Sam Morris, Baptist minister of San Antonio, Tex., who asked the Commission not to renew the license of KRLD in Dallas, CBS affiliate. Morris, who said he represented the National Temperance and Prohibition Council, charged that the station was selling time to beer and wine sponsors, but refused to sell any to dry forces. He charged that the station "flouts the legally established public opinion" of the majority of its listeners who live in a dry area.

Denver, May 27.—Eddie Cantor received the General Maurice Rose Memorial Award for humanitarianism here tonight at the $1,000 Per Plate Dinner," which inaugurated the fund-raising campaign for a General Rose Memorial hospital. Governor John C. Vivian made the presentation. Award was given in the name of the general who commanded the famed "Hell On Wheels" armored division of the 1st Army and who was murdered by the Nazis after his capture.

SPU ASKING CLOSED SHOP DEAL ON MAJOR LOTS

Screen Players Union in announcing its drive for a closed shop agreement in the major studios, claims that ratio of non-union film extras employed in 1943 was 2 to 1 over Guild members. In a communication to SPU members over the weekend. Prexy Larry Williams and Secretary Don Wayson declared:

"The Screen Players Union has signed closed shop agreements with all the independent motion picture producers. Members of the union are being given this protection and are enjoying this condition in the independent field.

"We are in our preliminary stages of negotiations with the major producers with the same aim in view, i.e., closed shop in our jurisdiction and new wages, hours and working conditions. Without a closed shop conditions such as existed in 1943 would be prevalent throughout the industry. In 1943 almost 8,000 non-union extra players were hired for extra work. This was a ratio of almost 2 to 1 over the Guild members' who numbered some 4,000. The SPU is leaving no stone unturned to prevent such conditions in the future."

Members also were advised that in the best interests of the membership initiation fees are being waived for former B members who have not yet affiliated. This will hold until June 14, 1945. Players who already have paid initiation fees will have those amounts credited on their dues.

SPU also explained action of the board of directors in applying to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America for an autonomous charter and for affiliation with the Conference of Studio Unions.

'Pennies To Burn' Nets Author $30,000

"Pennies to Burn," novel by Rose Simon Kohn, has been purchased by Republic in pre-publication deal, at reported figure of $30,000. Property, a suspense story with a New York theatrical background, was handed to Herman Millakowsky to produce as one of studio's high-budget offerings.

PICKFORD DEMURRER TO LA CAVA NIXED

Mary Pickford's demurrer to the $1,653,000 damage suit brought by Gregory La Cava has been overruled by Superior Judge Alfred E. Paonessa and defendant has been given 30 days in which to file an answer. Thirty-day limit on filing of an answer was granted due to additional time needed to prepare a reply because of many ramifications of the action.

La Cava, through his attorney, Thomas D. Mercola, charges Miss Pickford with failing to go through with an oral contract calling for his services as director on "One Touch of Venus," which she is to make for United Artists. In demurrer to action defendant had asserted that damages were speculative and that the statutes of fraud, under which the oral pact falls, had expired. Judge Paonessa held that damages now claimed were necessarily speculative until trial of the case.

TREASURY OKES MCA EMPLOYE PROFIT RETIREMENT PLAN

roactive to 1944. A similar proposal will be made to enable employes of Leland Hayward Agency, New York, and Hayward & Deverich, Beverly Hills, recently merged with MCA Artists, to be included in the plan as of 1945.

Stein has worked on this plan for several years. It provides that the employing Corporation will contribute to a trust 15% of the payroll earnings of each employe, with latter making no contribution. This also includes the employes now in the service of the armed forces.

The provisions of the plan are to pay a retirement benefit to all employes who have reached the age of 55, and have been in the employ of the company six or more years. It also provides that immediate payment be made from the trust to employes who become incapacitated, as well as immediately after death to designated beneficiaries of the employes.

The money paid in by the corporation toward the trust is to be put into diversified investments and enterprises. Stein, Lou Wasserman and Karl Kramer have been named as trustees of the fund.

The retirement age of this trust is the lowest of any setup in the industry of any kind, as most retire their employes upon reaching the age of 60 years.

duct national newspaper and magazine advertising campaign, while a series of special events at the studio and in New York home office will fete the occasion.

Herbert J. Yates, prexy and founder of Republic, engineered merger 10 years ago of four indie companies, Mascot, Liberty, Monogram and Select, to form present company. Republic first concentrated on westerns, starring Gene Autry, later broadening its production scope until now it produces pictures with budgets ranging as high as $1,000,000 and $1,500,000, studio states.

First of these to go will be "Concerto," Frank Borzage production.

Stars now under contract to Republic, both for term tickets and picture commitments, include John Wayne, Constance Moore, Roy Rogers, Ann Dvorak, Joseph Schildkraut, Vera Hruba Ralston, Tito Guizar, Bill Elliott, Victor McLaglen, Edward Ashley, Virginia Bruce, Michael O'Shea, Ona Munson, Al Pearce, Allan Lane, Eugene Pallette, Jane Withers, Walter Catlett, Stuart Hamblen, Don Barry, Stephanie Bachelor, George (Gabby) Hayes, James Lydon, Roy Acuff, Bobby Blake and Sunset Carson.

EVERYBODY HAPPY? ABBOTT-COSTELLO CALL OFF FEUD

That split talk of Abbott and Costello is a thing of the past. They had a conclave Saturday and came to the conclusion that they would be better off as a team than going solo.

Decision was made to sign a new contract with Universal today for another five years until May, 1950, and their first picture under it will be "You Hypnotize Me," starting in September.

Eddie Sherman, who was reputed to be the cause of their alleged estrangement, is in good graces again and will book them for personal appearances in the east starting in July. Coin from tour will go to Lou Costello, Jr., Youth Foundation, which was set up to combat juvenile delinquency. Sherman also will get a participating share in contracts made by the team.

360 NORTH CAMDEN DRIVE BEVERLY HILLS, CALIFORNIA

UNIONS PLAN TO TRY AND HOLD SUPPLIES FROM MAJORS

Plans for a drive to stop lumber and other supplies from reaching the major studios were disclosed at the unionists' meeting last night in Hollywood Legion Stadium by James Skelton, business representative of Studio Carpenters Local 946. Skelton declared that Clarence Todd, attorney for San Francisco carpenters, had drafted a letter to all sawmills, lumber yards, etc., advising them that their agreements with the carpenters did not require them to pass picket lines or to service establishments where strikes are in progress. He said these letters would go to plants throughout California.

It also was brought out that many big international unions now are openly supporting the studio strikers. Skelton read a telegram from William Hutcheson, international president of the carpenters, stating international was sending $30,000 to be added to strike fund, and Roy M. Brown, international vice-president, declared the strikers here "are fighting for the same principles as the American boys are fighting in the Pacific" and that all labor would back the movement.

Attorney Frank Pestana and other speakers discussed the recent National Labor Relations Board election of set decorators. Pestana declared that Local 1421 won the election by a vote of 60 to 50 or perhaps an even larger majority, and that this would be disclosed in a short time when the NLRB passes on the challenges which now are holding up a count of the ballots.

George Stoica, of Local 44, explained how service was obtained on five of the seven members of the IATSE general executive board, requiring their presence at the Superior court injunction hearing set for next Monday. He said the subpoenas were served at the Roosevelt hotel at 1:30 a.m. Friday. One of the IA vice-prexies, thinking the subpoena was a telegram, gave the process server a 50-cent tip. Veepee Brown of the machinists, Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, and other speakers declared the strikers were certain of winning if they ignored the IATSE-producer propaganda and stuck together on the picket lines.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Box office receipts for Mauricio de la Serna's "Twilight" were 300,000 peros during six weeks it played at the Chapultepec. "Las Abandonadas," also drawing crowds now at the same cinema, made almost 30,000 pesos the first night. Stars Dolores del Rio and Pedro Armendariz were convincing in their roles. The character portrayed by Armendariz, that of an improvised general of our revolution (and many of our revolutionary generals were improvised) shows Director-Author Emilio Fernandez's thorough knowledge of that particular type of Mexican: daring, ruthless, hiding an inferiority complex, and revealing unsuspected tenderness and romance. "Las Abandonadas" is one of our really good films, and would have been better without the last slow and unnecessary reels ending with a too-marked "Madame X" flavor.

Columnist of daily Esto, Roberto Blanco Moheno's opinion of the Hollywood film "Brazil" is worth noting Moheno writes: "We feel, on seeing the picture, the sincere desire of the Americans to please the 'Latins,' as they call us. We will not reproach them for their total lack of knowledge of our character and personality, nor the absurd way in which they portray us on the screen. 'Brazil' is full of nonsense and an authentic 'churro.' What is really beyond our understanding is why Tito Guizar, a Mexican, should accept such a part, knowing that he is making himself ridiculous and also ridiculing us."

Theatres in this city remained closed 17 days, due to conflict between the T.E.U.S. (Theatrical Federation) and the S.N.P.C. (screen actors' union headed by Cantinflas). In reality, it is still the same inter-union feud between members of the S.T.I.C. (Cinematographers Union) and the S.N.P.C. President Avila Camacho refused to arbitrate, referring the matter to the Labor Relations Board. An agreement, which we hope will be lasting, was finally reached between the T.E.U.S. and the S.N.P.C. and, theatres were reopened.

Antonio de Salazar, production head at Stahl studios, is preparing his trip to Caracas, where a number of our cinema people will produce pictures for the Venezuelans. The Stahl studios are the smallest in Mexico. Lot zoasts only four sets and films are produced at an approximate cost of 200,000 pesos, whereas the average cost of production in this country is now around 700,000 pesos. One of their stars is the child actress Evita Munoz, who has just been signed by Frank Fouce to play at the California and Mason theatres in Los Angeles.

RKO's "The Master Race" is advertised as spoken in English; so is Columbia's "Together Again," while Paramount's "And Now Tomorrow" is showing at two cinemas in the city, the English version at the Rex and the dubbed version at the Palacio Chino. . . . Fortunio Bonanova insists that dubbed pix have failed in our Spanish-speaking countries.

Hugo del Carril will star in "El Socio," under direction of Roberto Gavaldon. . . . Norman Foster will direct "Prison," starring his sister-in-law's husband, Ricardo Montalban. . . . Antonio Momplet and Mauricio Magdaleno are adapting a Pierre Benoit novel for a Maria Felix starrer. . . . Isabella Corona has proved herself an actress in "The Old Maid's Secret" and "Between Brothers," both lately released.

GRIFFITH ANTI-TRUST SUIT RECESSED UNTIL SEPT. 10

Oklahoma City, May 27. — The government's anti-trust trial here against the Griffith theatre chains of the southwest has recessed until Sept. 10 so that attorneys for both the Department of Justice and defendants could try other cases.

The case was filed six years ago against Griffith Amusement Co. and Consolidated Theatres, Inc., of Oklahoma City, and R. E. Griffith Theatres, Inc., and Westex Theatres, Inc., of Dallas. Trial started here before United States District Judge Edgar S. Vaught on May 7.

The government attorneys spent three weeks in a parade of present and former theatre owners of the southwest to the stand in an effort to prove that the Griffith chains are operating in restraint of free trade, as charged. One of the last witnesses was Benny McKenna, general manager of Griffith Amusement Co. He was put on the stand by the government to present records of various Gfiffith employes over the past 15 or more years.

AVERSION of NBC and CBS to four-network hookups, except in the case of presidential talks, last night cost them the most important broadcast to come out of the United Nations Conference in weeks. All chains were offered the summing up of the accomplishments of UNCIO by Secretary of State Stettinius for a half hour airing last night and when G. W. "Johnny" Johnstone, special events and news head of the Blue, and the Mutual rep accepted there was a demurrer from NBC and CBS. Each would take it exclusive, the State Department was told, but would not share it with each other or the others. Staters firmly told them they could take it or leave it, with NBC watching to see what CBS would do and vice-versa. Neither budged by the time Stettinius went on the air so the plum was gingerly hopped on by the Blue and Mutual, who were not so finicky about who else carried it.

Four days later Harry Einstein (Parkyakarkas) moves into "Comedy Theatre" time on NBC for the summer spell and with the possibility of doing regular duty in the fall for Old Gold cigarets. When agency's purchase of "Name It" was announced, threats of legal action popped up on both coasts so the new title was devised as an escape from actual or nuisance suits.

STUDIO publicity departments wondering why some of their press releases sent by mail to local columnists and drama editors aren't seeing light of day should look to their method of dispatch. Number of said columnists and ends, whenever they receive a letter stamped by meter machine, automatically toss such mail into waste baskets without bothering to look at contents. Good many of them seem to figure that such metered mail is merely routine stuff and goes out all over country. Lately studios have utilized meter-stamping postage for most outgoing mail as a time-saver with result they go on floor.

TRADESHOWN at Ambassador theatre, Los Angeles, May 25, 1945. Running time: 95 MINS.

In "Back To Bataan" RKO has made a quick grab for a chunk of hot history, and has sent it to the screen skillfully moulded into the first film story of the guerrilla fighting on Leyte. Timeliness adds to the picture's exploitation possibilities, but the show could stand on its merits as adventure drama alone.

The picture opens and closes with clips of actual shots of rescued survivors of Bataan, perhaps with the idea of giving documentary dignity to the yarn and emphasizing the history hook-up. But the whole production sticks pretty closely to the facts of the Jap occupation of the Philippines. The exploits of the American and Philippine guerrillas who dared death and torture and endured starvation to harass and prey on the conquering Japs need little fictionizing to make them dramatic.

In fact, the screenplay's ventures into fiction are largely concerned with the injection of the love interest, which is a minor factor in the story.

The film yarn covers the period from the fall of Bataan and Corregidor to the landing of General MacArthur's forces on Leyte. The big scene is the desperate stand of the guerrilla band, led by John Wayne and Anthony Quinn, as Colonel Madden and Andres Bonifacio respectively, to hold off a Jap detachment while the American invasion troops establish a beachhead.

Both Wayne and Quinn give successful portrayals, though they seem to survive the vicissitudes of jungle fighting with a degree of immaculateness that is a little less than realistic.

Beulah Bondi is outstanding as an American school teacher driven out of the Philippine village where she is teaching when the Japs take over. "Ducky" Louie in the role of her favorite Filipino pupil, Maximo, does stellar work. Paul Fix earns special mention in the minor part of an American guerrilla who lightens the miseries of jungle travel with reminiscences of bumming his way around in a happier land. Fely Franquelli makes the most of her opportunities as the sweetheart of Bonifacio who spies for the guerrillas while pretending "collaboration" with the Japs.

Production by Robert Fellows and Theron Warth is skillfully handled to get startling dramatic build-up out of the story's blend of fact and fiction. Smoothness of action and apt stressing of dramatic values characterizes Edward Dmytryk's direction.

Casting is appropriate throughout and each individual player can be given a hand.

TRADESHOWN at 20th-Fox studio, May 23, 1945. Running time: 106 MINS.

This one will help settle the question of whether war films still are box office or whether the public has gone completely escapist in its taste for screen fare. "The Way Ahead" is strictly and unequivocally war. It also is unequivocally British, but that isn't going to hurt its chances to draw in this country.

The simply, quietly told story of the shaping of eight reluctant, disgruntled civilians into a British army platoon might as well be the story of a similar group of Americans. The building of a citizen army presents the same fundamental problems everywhere and at all times.

The film is unfolded naturalistically with skillful employment of the British production trick of picturing war, murder, sudden death, or violent love by indirection and subdued emotion.

The eight Tommies are led through the picture from civilian jobs to army training and on to a final desperate last stand in the African desert.

There's a Kiplingesque flavor to the final scene where the eight, with fixed bayonets, march grimly toward a German position and apparent death.

The one highly spectacular sequence of the picture shows the unsuccessful fight to save a shelled and burning troop transport and the last-minute abandonment of ship when it becomes evident the fire is beyond control.

Story is timed in the period following the retreat from Dunkirk. It is about two-thirds training camp and one-third actual war scenes.

A foreword by Quentin Reynolds, mentioning the Minute Men highly, and bordering closely on hokum and bombast, was probably hooked on with the idea of giving the picture an American slant. It is unnecessary —the resemblances in the training of Tommy and the training of GI Joe being sufficiently apparent in the film itself.

"Nob Hill," despite its high budget and lavishness of Technicolor production, is strictly old hat. Run-of-the-mill Barbary Coast yarn of San Francisco at turn of the century, premise is based on never-the-twain-shall-meet theme, Joan Bennett representing aristocratic Nob Hill and George Raft and Vivian Blaine the lusty Coast. Action is freely sprinkled with tuneful numbers sung charmingly by Miss Blaine, and splash and color of the period atmospherically conceived and beautifully photographed in rich tints, but un-

(CBS News Analyst)

The radio broadcast made by Secretary Stettinius on Monday night from his penthouse atop the Fairmont hotel in San Francisco raises once more the familiar question: What about American foreign policy? His speech was very forthright and offered some answers to this question. As he sees it, there must be a strength and continuity in American foreign policy that has been lacking in the past, and these attributes must be in tune with the realization that this country is not only a part of the whole world but a very, very IMPORTANT part of it. This is no place to discourse on the history of American foreign policy. But in these critical times one thought might not be amiss. It is this. During the past fifty years, American foreign policy has not done so badly as to merit indiscriminate abuse. Its successes have been substantial and numerous enough to engender broad confidence in its direction. But it has not been so good as to have been faultless. And as I see it, its most persistent weakness has been the gap between professions and performance. Two examples: The United States failed to follow up the establishment of a real stake in the Far East and its declaration of the Open Door policy toward China, and payment for the failure was made at Corregidor and on Bataan. President Wilson gave to the world a concept for a League of nations. The concept failed in its application for many reasons, not least of which was the refusal of this country to participate. Here is meat to chew on.

CASHMAN PRODUCES NOBLE SHOW AS FREE LANCER

Ed Cashman's first job as free-lance producer since relinquishing his radio directorship at Foote, Cone & Belding will be as production and script chief of the Ray Noble show, which fills out a five-week segment of the Frank Sinatra cycle for Max Factor, beginning June 6. New type musical idea has been worked out by Cashman for the Noble filler.

Program's "short haul" is by reason of Sinatra's early departure for overseas, leaving five weeks to fill and eight weeks to go before he resumes in the fall. CBS moves a sustainer into the slot as time-marker until Frankie comes marching home from overseas. It was Cashman who first recommended Sinatra for the Hit Parade while he was an "on the house" Columbia feature, and also was instrumental in launching another crooner, Dick Haymes.

In addition to freelancing in production, Cashman also will service eastern agencies which have no Hollywood representation. His name has been linked with several top shows as producer, but beyond the Noble stint he has made no commitments.

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, May 28.—If you are planning to build some new motion picture theatres, your best bet will be in the southeast, southwest and far west, a Department of Commerce survey indicates. Statistics show a high post-war demand for residential and commercial construction and community facilities in the areas as a result of population trends. The banner states for steady growth are listed as Arkansas, Tennessee, Oklahoma, Texas and Kansas.

Latest word here is that J. Arthur Rank does not plan to visit Washington, despite reports to the contrary. He is due in New York June 1 for about two weeks before heading for the Coast where he will settle down for three weeks and shop for production talent. He was to come to Washington to try to pry loose raw stock to print his films in this country, according to recent rumors, but his friends here say there's nothing to it.

Announcement that J. Leonard Reinsch, radio executive, would accompany President Truman to San Francisco for the windup of the United Nations conference brings to mind that the Reinsch influence still is strong in these parts.

When Truman addressed a joint session of Congress the other day, awarding a Congressional Medal of Honor, he had his speech in a notebook. One sentence, and one sentence only, was typed on each page. This is a Reinsch wrinkle to make the President speak more slowly, particularly when broadcasting.

Just to keep you up to date on the joint Anglo-American documentary covering the period from D-Day to V-E Day, the title is "True Glory." It should be in shape for distribution any edition now. General Eisenhower has given it not only his interest and support, but a good deal of personal practical help.

Hundreds of British and American lensers shot the footage which has been whipped into shape by Garson Kanin on our team and Carol Reed for Britain. Reed will be remembered as the producer of "The Stars Look Down," "Young Mr. Pitt" and "Night Train." William Alwyn, of "Desert Victory" fame, did the score. Distributors have not yet been chosen.

Senator Kenneth McKellar (D., Tenn.) told all on a recent local broadcast here about his passion for horse operas. He admitted that each Saturday afternoon he takes one of his clerks to a suburban house specializing in westerns and serials (another secret McKellar vice). At times, he said, he and the clerk have been the only adults in the kid-crowded theatre.

Asked about his favorite stars, he listed Roy Rogers, Gene Autry and Wallace Beery. "Old Beery is mighty near as good-looking as I am," he explained. "Guess that's why I like him so much." McKellar, most powerful individual in the Senate, is 76.

"The Flying Varieties," a better than average service show, which opens a bond selling tour in Chicago tomorrow, is right out of show biz. Originating from the AAF field at Dayton, O., where local critics compared it to the live versions of "TITA" and "Winged Victory," it follows the regular pattern. About 90% of the talent comes from some branch of the theatre.

Cast includes Sgt. Philip Truex, son of Ernest; Sgt. Paul Arnold, protege of John Charles Thomas; Corp. Fred Hearn, formerly with Ted Shawn; Pfc Paul Bohen, NBC pianist; Corp. Jerry Josolow, well known in Broadway niteries, and musicians from name bands too numerous to mention.

There is some speculation here on what type of features are liable to emerge from that coming junket of studio toppers to Germany under the wing of the Army. War Department is hopeful.

Taylor Mills, head of the OWI film bureau, has been receiving requests from exhibitors for a government short on the atrocities. Whether this means there will be much market for features with an atrocity camp twist is uncertain. At any rate, the government has plenty of footage which will be made available to studios which request it.

Latest word is that March of Time is doing a two-reeler on the subject and RKO is said to be planning a feature. War Department has refused to make a short.

By the way, Major Stuart Palmer, ex-Warners scripter, will chaperone the industry big-shots on the trip.

Joe Williams, head of BIS nontheatrical division, leaves New York any day to head the activity in England. Tom Hodge will replace him here. . . . Pat Kirkland, en route to make a film in Hollywood, has had an Alice-in-Wonderland air about her during her few days here. The British find's reaction to her first American menu was an "Oh" of amazement and preasure. (She should have seen our menus when we had meat on them.) And our streets and building lights dazzled her. Gal, who is a beauty, created a very nice impression on all who met her here. . . . After the story which appeared in Daily Variety last week about Violet Gibson, the AP copygirl, who is preparing to make a beachhead in Hollywood, she got a wire from Writer William Rankin saying in part: "Chaplin and Flynn have taken to the hills." WINCHELL DELAYS JERGENS SIGNING TILL N.Y. MEET

Walter Winchell will do nothing about his new contract with Andrew Jergens until he gets back to New York. When that is he isn't sure nor is it definite that Jergens will yield to all the conditions imposed by him on the pact, which would start his 14th year for the lotion client.

When he meets back east with his lawyer and Robert Beucus, ad chief of Jergens, the new contract will get a thorough going-over with autographing ceremony likely to follow. Among terms imposed by Winchell are that the option periods be spaced off yearly and he retain the right to walk on 60 days' notice. Current pact runs out Dec. 1 of this year and new covenant calls for $2,500 weekly raise to $7,500. That to Winchell is a minor item as the per annum increase of $130,000 would yield him only a net of $6,000 after taxes.

Season finale for Winchell is Aug. 1 and his broadcast spot will be split up among Ray Henle, Frank Kingdon and Louella Parsons, the latter merely expanding her present five-minute spot for Woodbury.

Faulty clocking in the new Blue Network studio cost Winchell two minutes of broadcast time Sunday night and Sam Goldwyn a plug for the Danny Kaye picture, "Wonder Man."

Phil Lennen and Bob Orr, execs of Lennen & Mitchell agency, arrived from New York but for official business aside from Winchell contract discussions. His dealings are direct with the sponsor and as in previous seasons he is expected to swap signatures with Beucus when he gets back east.

RKO EXECUTIVE TO AIR TELEVISH AND FILMS AT FORUM

"Film and Television, the Perfect Combination," will be discussed by Ralph B. Austrian, executive vice-president of the RKO Television Corp., at the next series of bi-monthly forums of the Affiliated Committee for Television. In discussing his subject, Austrian declared:

"I am a firm believer that, when all the cards are down, motion picture film will carry from 60% to 70% of all manufactured television entertainment."

The forum will be held at KFWB at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Sgt. Carl Bier, of the AAF First Motion Picture Unit, will spearhead the forum following Austrian's address.

Trade Showing

reeling evokes little more than moderate interest.

Raft plays the Angel, a straightforward proprietor of a joint on the Gold Coast, who falls for the sister of a Nob Hill candidate for district attorney. Going against his own associates, he throws the election to his candidate, then is paid off with a high fee instead of winning a niche he expected on the Hill.

Woven into this skein is a double-barreled romance, Vivian Blaine, star of Raft's place, carrying a mighty torch for her boss, and Raft's courtship of Joan Bennett, who in the climax would like to have Raft but loses him to the Coast singer. Peggy Ann Garner, little Irish girl whom Raft has fathered when she arrives from Ireland to find her uncle dead, is a motivating character in plot, too, bringing about the meeting of her benefactor and the lady on the Hill which results in such repercussions.

Miss Blaine warbles six songs to good effect, three of them new compositions by Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson. These are "I Don't Care Who Knows It," "I Walked In With My Eyes Wide Open" and "Touring San Francisco." Emil Coleman gives out on the piano and Smith and Dale offer a specialty. There are other numbers, too, some with too great footage, catching the spirit of the period.

Two femme stars lend conviction to their roles, Miss Blaine the standout in a more sympathetic characterization, but neither Raft nor Peggy Ann fare any too happily, although they try valiantly. Alan "Falstaff Openshaw" Reed is in for good bit, and balance of cast is up to standard. Henry Hathaway directed this Andre Daven production. Wanda Tuchock and Norman Reilly Raine wrote the screenplay from Eleanore Griffin's original story. Edward Cronjager's photography, art direction by Lyle Wheeler and Russell Spencer, and set decorations by Thomas Little and Walter M. Scott are interesting, with other technical credits stacking up favorably.

FIRST RUN FILM GROSSES HEADED FOR 275 GRAND

Los Angeles first-run grosses are heading for estimated $275,000 on the current week. Hefty trade anticipated for the Memorial Day holiday and stout business being registered by "Diamond Horseshoe" on its second week are major factors in the favorable outlook. "Diamond," playing at the Chinese, Loew's State and Uptown, has prospects for $47,500 on the frame.

Among the new openers, "The Enchanted Cottage" at the Hillstreet and Pantages is catching sturdy business at estimated $46,000. "The Affairs of Susan" at Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramount theatres is coming through with $44,500 or thereabouts and is comparatively stronger in the smaller Hollywood house than downtown.

"Tomorrow the World," heading bill at the Guild, United Artists, Wilshire and Four Star, should hit $33,500 on the week, aided by tomorrow's holiday. It holds for second frame at the Four Star, but makes way for "Flame of the Barbary Coast" and "Earl Carroll's Vanities" at other three spots Thursday.

Lena Horne and Jimmie Lunceford's orchestra closed record-breaking week at the Orpheum theatre last night with estimated $44,000. "The Clock" finished its second week at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz theatres last night with estimated $33,500, being considerably under normal Metro average in the three de luxers. "God Is My Co-Pilot" closes a profitable three-week, five-day stay at Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern tonight with better than $20,000 on the final five days. "Pillow To Post" comes in tomorrow.

SLUR AT S.F. BRAND OF AIR PROGRAMS STIRS UP BEEF

San Francisco, May 28.—Private beef is brewing here as a result of certain remarks passed about Bay City's air entertainment. San Francisco radio folk, who justly claim credit for much pioneering and for providing a springboard to fame for some of radio's brightest lights, are burned to a cinder about remarks reported filtering eastward from quick once-lookers at the United Nations Conference, remarks suggesting that San Francisco is waking up to the need of good variety and dramatic shows and good local programming in place of records.

Those are fighting words here now, and if you want a duel, just voice that sort of opinion to local radio tycoons.

Newsreelers got in one bit of footage today with shots of a press conference by Dr. Herbert Ware Evatt, Australia's Foreign Minister. Evatt has established himself with newsreel, radio and press personnel as one of the biggest minds in the conference, and today's crowded press confab lived right up to the advertising.

Tomorrow will see another little job for the newsreel boys when Guillermo Belt Ramirez, Cuban Ambassador to the U. S. and head of the island's delegation, appears before the lenses briefly. Ramirez is by way of being ex-officio spokesman for Latin-American opinion in many respects, so this may prove an important stint.

The United Nations theatre tonight provided entertainment with a preview of Universal's "That's the Spirit." Two other studio previews are slated for delegates and conference personnel this week—Warners "Christmas In Connecticut" tomorrow night, and RKO's "Back To Bataan" Wednesday evening.

Wednesday also will see a special United Artists theatre feature sponsored by France Forever, in which Orson Welles will preside as underground recordings of great French poets and leaders made before and during the liberation of Paris will be heard. While this is a highly special audience, this is one the entertainment industry might watch with interest, to determine whether the eternally surprising Welles can inject enough theatre to make a collection of foreign records into a thrilling program.

9 MAJOR STUDIOS BRANDED UNFAIR IN UNION ROW

Unfair labor practice charges against the nine major studios were filed with the National Labor Relations Board yesterday by attorneys for Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421. Attorneys Frank Pestana and William B. Esterman claim that 326 studio employes affiliated with the local were discharged because of their union activities.

These union activities assertedly were in connection with action of the members in affiliating the set designers, who formerly were connected with an independent society. Notices of dismissal were received by the members after Local 1421 had called a strike 12 weeks ago, which resulted in machinists, janitors, painters, carpenters and IBEW Local 40 electricians refusing to cross the picket lines.

CENSORING EXPORT FILMS ENDS JUNE 9

tribution. Industry handling of the export problem will be taken by the government as an indication of what may be expected in the way of voluntary cooperation between Hollywood and the State Department.

Rothacker and William Lackye, in charge of the local board of review offices, plan to close them June 15. The New York board also will discontinue operation. Rothacker put out the following statement from Byron Price, director of censorship:

"In deciding to discontinue its present compulsory controls over imported and exported films the office of censorship has been influenced by many considerations, but two of them are dominant.

"The first is that the end of the European war permits a general readjustment of censorship policies, having in mind the lessened risk to our national security and the need for economy in public expenditures.

"The second is the record of the industry itself, which has shown a splendid understanding of censorship principles and an earnest and loyal readiness to cooperate. This record has merited the trust and confidence which must provide the foundation for voluntary censorship.

"In accepting the task of seeing to it that our national security is considered in making every motion picture, the industry will have two special guides. The first will be the security code which it will share with press and radio, both of which also are doing their own censoring. The second will be the motion picture censorship code, which now ceases to be a set of legal regulations, but which should be helpful reference in making voluntary decisions.

"It should now be made clear that in establishing this voluntary arrangement the office of censorship continues to recognize its own responsibility under wartime laws. It does not seek to escape that responsibility by delegating its powers to any private group, or other government agency.

"If experience shows that the film industry still requires the censorship counsel which the boards of review have provided, the problem will be faced when it arises."

JOB AVAILABILITY OF STUDIO MEN EYED BY WMC

The War Manpower Commission meets today to take up questions of job referrals for new employes in the motion picture industry and issuance of availability certificates to strikers and workers who are refusing to cross the picket lines. Hearing before a WMC panel is on appeals for rule that no referrals or availability certificates would be approved.

Strikers claim job referral ruling is being violated by studios hiring a man for specific work and then switching him to job vacated by a striker. Tops claim that under strict interpretation of rule no outsiders can be referred to studio jobs during duration of walkout. It also is insisting availability slips should be issued to men who left jobs in studios since notices of dismissal have been served on them by the various companies.

There was little other strike activity yesterday other than moves by the strike strategy committee in an effort to halt delivery of lumber and other supplies to the lots. Members of the IATSE general executive board, with the exception of Felix Snow, were reported to have left town. Although five of them were subpoenaed to appear at a Superior court injunction hearing next Monday, it is understood they made an agreement with the defendants to give depositions on 10 days' notice at some point in the east.

Taking of depositions from 21 members of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 who secured temporary restraining order prohibiting the IA international from interfering with the autonomy of the local union, is scheduled to start today. Hearing on whether order is to be made permanent has been postponed until next Monday.

SEVEN L.A. THEATRES SET FOR JUNE 25 WAR BOND PREEMS

Seven Los Angeles theatres in the downtown area will stage simultaneous War Bond premieres the night of June 25 as one of a number of special events lined up for the Seventh War Loan drive. Preems, at which a major studio preview will be screened in each theatre, will be for purchasers of War Bonds only and were worked out between theatres and downtown merchants. Single night's premieres will represent a money loss to film theatres of approximately $25,000.

Breakdown of first week's War Bond sales in southern California theatres shows the following record: Fox West Coast theatres, 34,254 bonds for value of $3,425,475; Warner Bros. theatres, 25,734 bonds valued at $2,586,752, and independent theatres, 1,584 bonds with value of $158,489. Theatre sales included in the report were the Paramount Hollywood, $344,300, Paramount Los Angeles, $48,700, and RKO Hillstreet, $13,525.

Los Angeles exchanges sold the following during the first week: 20th-Fox, $16,900; RKO, $8,125; Monogram, $3,825; Metro, $3,750; Republic, $1,450; Universal, $500; Warners, $450; Paramount, $350; PRC, $275; United Artists, $150.

Included in the first week's grand total of 66,202 War Bonds with maturity value of $6,613,016 were two bond premiere amounts. These were $325,000 at the Paramount Hollywood and $2,500,000 for an all-star show at Warners Wiltern.

During the first two weeks of the Seventh War Loan drive, F-WC's Northern California division staged 11 bond premieres, resulting in sale of 29,747 individual "E" bonds with a maturity value of $3,613,247. An additional 36 bond premieres and numerous children's matinees have been scheduled for the division.

Philadelphia, May 28. — Walter Huston, Ralph Bellamy and Ruth Hussey made four appearances here today before a total of 25,000 persons in the interest of the Seventh Loan. Bellamy and Miss Hussey continue in this territory for balance of week before going to Tulsa and Beaumont for city-wide rallies.

DEADLINE ON FILM CHARITIES PLAN VOTING EXTENDED

With only one week remaining before final action must be taken on the proposal to hold a single all-inclusive charity drive in the film industry each year, the Permanent Charities Committee yesterday announced an extension through June 4 of the deadline in the balloting on the plan. At the annual meeting June 5, to be held at the Screen Actors Guild, the proposal is scheduled to be the first item of business for the present board of directors. The seating of the new directorate and the election of officers for the ensuing year will follow.

Campaign headquarters disclosed that only about 3000 ballots on the new plan have been returned to the committee. Edward Arnold, executive veepee, declared that a wider expression of opinion is desired because representatives of union, guilds and other industry groups believed that the proposal should be submitted to all of the individual donors.

OBITUARY

FERDINAND MUNIER

Ferdinand Munier, 55, stage, screen and radio actor, died late Sunday night at home following a heart attack. Munier began his stage career after leaving Stanford University, where he studied law. He appeared in stock and then went into vaudeville, teaming with his wife, Charlotte Treadway. He headed his own stock company, which toured the world, and then came to the Coast to be director for the Henry Duffy Players. In the early 1930's he entered films and had worked both in pictures and in radio for the past 10 years. His last film performance was in "Diamond Horseshoe" and, at the time of his death, he was featured in the radio show, "Count of Monte Cristo." Munier is survived by his widow and a daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Cardwell. No funeral arrangements have been made as yet.

FREE LANCE, DAY PLAYERS TO GET BIG WAGE BOOST

Screen Actors Guild is reported to have received a tentative okay from major producers calling for substantial increases in wage minimums for day players and freelance actors. While proposed new rates are subject to agreements being reached on other demands, it is understood scale for day players would be hiked from $25 to $35 per day.

Currently weekly minimum for freelancers is four times the daily stipend for day players. If present ratio is continued this would mean that minimum for freelance players would be upped to $140 per week. Some executives feel that current ratio calls for too wide a spread between pay for day players and freelancers and may insist this be cut to some extent.

SAG also is seeking to boost the current minimum of $50 to $150 weekly for stock players. Current rate is based on 10 out of 13 weeks, with contracts calling for options every six months in most instances. Guild wants beginning minimum increased to take care of present living costs.

Most of negotiations, being resumed Thursday, center around requests for improved working conditions, although Guild also asks minimum of $15 to $20 daily for singers be raised. Question of revising general contracts for top players to protheir radio, television rights, etc., will be deferred until negotiations next year, since such changes must be incorporated in the new 1947 agreement rather than through amendments to the current Producers-SAG basic agreement.

'Volpone' Opens Tonight At Actors' Lab Theatre

Actors' Lab theatre will present Ben Jonson's "Volpone" starting tonight for a two-week run. Morris Carnovsky has made the free adaptation of the Rennaissance play and David Raskin has composed musical background. Proceeds from the performances will go to the establishment of scholarships for actors returning from GI service.

LABOR STATISTICS SHOW DECLINE IN FILM WORKER PAY

Effect of the current film strike is reflected in the April California Labor Statistics Bulletin. Report shows that wage earners in motion picture production put in longer hours per week at a smaller hourly pay rate than in the month of March. Employment index for the month was 77.9, as compared to 77.7 in March and 101.3 in April, 1944. April's payroll index was 126.2, compared to 120.2 for March and 166.4 for April, 1944.

Wage earners put in average of 44.3 hours a week at $1.626 per hour to collect weekly average of $72.09. This compares to 41.2 hours during March at $1.674 per hour for weekly average of $68.91. In April, 1944, average weekly earnings were $72.76.

Overall employment picture in all California industries continued to show heavy layoffs. Seasonal increase in canning helped to keep the total for the month from showing too big a drop. Employment in California shipyards, excluding government yards, was down 21,400 from March, and aircraft plants showed a loss of 3,600 for the month.

AMUSEMENT ATTENDANCE OFF SLIGHTLY, BUT AHEAD OF '44

Washington, May 28.—Attendance at niteries, theatres and other places of amusement fell off somewhat in March on the basis of admissions tax collections just announced by the Bureau of Internal Revenue. The nation's tax total for the month was $29,076,970, which was below the $30,645,244 of February, although latter is a shorter month. However, the March figures were still high above those of March, 1944, when the cheaper excise rates were in effect. March, 1944, tax take amounted to $14,907,919. About 90% of the amount comes from motion picture theatres.

Broadway, however, reversed the field and jumped in March. Taxes for the Third Revenue District of New York (all of Manhattan above 23rd st.) were $4,774,234 for the month, contrasted with $3,936,078 during the previous month. In March, 1944, the figure was $1,964,279.

STUDIO flacks, held down by the conventions of the Hays office, are currently frothing with annoyance at the lavish and increasing use of cheesecake in the slick magazines. Ad-layout men are cashing in on sexy art to sell everything from fountain pens to hosiery. But the Hays office won't let the movie publicists do likewise. All the latter can do is drool over the examples of sex-appeal art in the magazines. Current issue of Life carries on page 52 a picture of a shapely miss sitting on the edge of a bathtub. There is one on page 70 of a nude stepping into a shower. The film publicists don't ask to go that far but they feel life would be brighter if the Hays office would relax the cheesecake rules a little.

CAST—Features Preston Foster, Gail Patrick and the Wilde Twins (Lee and Lyn), with Richard Gaines, Jean Porter, Marshall Thompson, Jimmy Lydon, Gloria Hope, Ethel Smith at the organ, Douglas Cowan, Warren Mills, Joel Friedkin, Ralph Brooke, Ralph Hoopes, Don Hayden, Tommy Bond.

TRADESHOWN at the Westwood Village theatre, May 18, 1945. Running time: 75 MINS.

"Twice Blessed" is an okay entertainment package for family audiences and will well serve its release intentions as supporting product for the dual bills. The comedy has a youthful, bobby-sock slant, and the exhuberance that goes with it, as scripted by Ethel Hill and directed by Harry Beaumont. Production guidance of Arthur L. Field gives neat showcasing to talents of the Wilde Twins, Lee and Lyn, around whose antics and look-alikeness the plot is built.

The twins, separated early in life by the divorce of their parents, have grown to teen age completely different in everything but looks. Lee Wilde, raised by her father, is a jitterbugging, normal high school belle, while Lyn, under her mother's tutelage, is an intellectual quiz kid whose cranium is crammed with all the answers. Youngsters meet after the long separation and scheme to bring their parents together again. First step is the swapping of identities. This switch is good for many chuckles as the plot unfolds. Their scheme, despite some handicaps, finally succeeds, because the parents want it that way, too, but have just been stubborn.

Heading the adult cast as the parents are Preston Foster and Gail Patrick. They both contribute full share of the amusement. Sparkplugs of the story are the twins, and they grab equal honors. Marshall Thompson and Jimmy Lydon, romantic interests of the Wildes, are excellent. Ethel Smith at the organ is in for one number as an added production touch. Richard Gaines, Gloria Hope, Jean Porter, Douglas Cowan, Warren Mills, Joel Friedkin, Ralph Brooke, Ralph Hoopes, Don Hayden, Tommy Bond are among others in the cast who deliver.

Ray June's photography, David Snell's musical direction, the arrangements by Earl Brent and orchestrations by Wally Heglin and other factors among the technical credits are expert in shaping this one for good reception in its intended bookings.

PREVIEWED at Universal studio, Universal City, May 29, 1945. Running time: 68 MINS.

"Blonde Ransom" is a mildly amusing blend of gangster melodrama, tunes and time-tested gags that will fit neatly into the second half of dual billing. A couple of fights and a touch of gunplay keep the show from slowing down between song-and-dance numbers, there is a fair quota of laughs and the story is the kind that always has been good.

George Barbier as a comedy millionaire uncle centers most of the laugh sequences, with Pinky Lee and Collette Lyons contributing a few chuckles.

Virginia Grey is appealingly ornamental and performs convincingly in the love passages with Donald Cook, whose role is that of a hardboiled but honest and golden-hearted night club proprietor.

Jerome Cowan gives an individual touch to the role of the standard gangland heavy who tries to take over the night club by a combination of crooked poker, gunplay and muscle tactics.

Story is built around the plot of Miss Grey, as Vicki, trying to get $63,000 from her uncle to save the night club from the muscle men.

Play Review

VOLPONE

With the presentation of "Volpone," Actors' Lab proves once more that it is establishing itself as a force to be reckoned with in the annals of American theatre. Any one who has witnessed previous work done at Actors' Lab certainly will return for "Volpone." For those who have not seen former productions, this showiwng of the Ben Johnson play is mandatory.

Morris Carnovsky's adaptation of the cynical comedy is great, but his direction is magnificent. From broad handling to the minute bits of stage business, Carnovsky shows an inspired touch. Staging a play almost 350 years old requires not only considerable imagination but considerable restraint. Carnovsky has them both, plus a feeling for the lustiness of the Rennaissance.

No less superb is the talent working under Carnovsky. If stars must be selected, J. Edward Bromberg, Norman Lloyd and Hugo Haas rate top billing. Bromberg's creation of the title role may be a shade or two vocally underplayed, yet it is replete with deep humor. Norman Lloyd couples the disparate characterization of Danny Kaye with Jose Ferrer and brings forth a Mosca of imposing stature. Hugo Haas, as Corvimo, gives a performance that is classical and nearly walks away with the show.

Rhys Williams, Phoebe Brand, Ruth Nelson, Housely Stevenson, Lloyd Bridges, Ian Wolfe, Lennie Bremen, Al Hammer and the minor players deserved being on Actors' Lab stage—no greater tribute can be paid.

Mordecai Gorelik's settings, masterfully put into being by Phil Brown, were, like the play, the best this small house has offered yet.

If criticism must be leveled at Actors' Lab, then let it be for the fact "Volpone" is scheduled to play only 14 performances.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

Announcement that the Eighth Airforce of the United States, commanded by General Doolittle, is to be moved from Britain to the Pacific theater, following announcement that the American First Army is already on its way there, is but outward evidence of the transfer of allied might from victory in Europe to the pursuit of victory in the Far East. The handwriting is on the wall for Japan to read. Already some of the letters are etched in flame. Six B-29 raids on Tokyo have gutted just over half of that city's area, and only two of these raids were made by air fleets of more than 500 planes. A layman cannot know, of course, the secret plans of the combined allied staffs for the destruction of Japan's military power, but it is interesting to reflect on information labeled as coming from "authoritative sources," that has emanated from Washington during the last ten or twelve months. A year ago or less, the burden of this information suggested that once the Philippines had been brought under allied control (they were invaded just over eight months ago) not only would Japanese power in Malaya and the South China Seas be emasculate, but also the way would be clear for an invasion of China. There victory would provide bases from which operations against the Japanese home islands could be tellingly conducted. Six months ago the burden of information shifted squarely to a position on the fence. Maybe there would be an invasion of the China Coast, maybe there would be a direct assault upon Nippon. Three months ago, the fence was relieved of this burden and up-to-date information asserted that plans called for a direct attack on Japan proper. Recent events corroborate this last interpretation. The logical planning is it would seem to rest on a twin assumption that Japan cannot withstand for long the destructive might of allied airpower and that to knock out the hub of the wheel in Japan proper would loosen the spokes to the point of uselessness, so that the whole wheel would collapse. We shall see—and so will the Japanese.

FILM HOUSES REPORT GOOD GROSSES FOR HOLIDAY

Memorial Day holiday turned a nifty profit for Los Angeles first-run film houses, trade being up from 30% to 40% on the day in majority of theatres. Despite unusually large turnout for the racing at Santa Anita, theatres commanded their share of the holiday coin due to doubtful weather which also turned many would-be beach-goers to film houses for entertainment.

Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern theatres, opening yesterday with "Pillow To Post," registered steady business all day, hitting between $14,000 and $15,000 in the three houses for the opening. Pantages and Hillstreet, with "Enchanted Cottage," grabbed approximately $8,500 between them for the holiday. . . .

Hefty trade at the Los Angeles Paramount improved outlook for "The Affairs of Susan" at that house and it closed first week with estimated $31,500, considerably above original expectations, after hitting better than $5,000 yesterday. Trade also was up at the Hollywood Paramount, which closed first frame with estimated $18,000.

"Diamond Horseshoe," in a second week at the Chinese, State and Uptown, also moved over to the Carthay yesterday to add a fourth house in the run, and proved a strong draw on the day. "Tomorrow the World" was a money-getter at the Four Star, Guild, United Artists and Wilshire and will go above original estimates due to strong holiday business.

STUDIO HEADS WILL VISIT NAZI CAMPS

New York, May 30.—Hollywood studio heads begin to converge on New York toward the end of June preparatory to visiting Nazi concentration camps and other European war centers. Trip is similar to junket made by American newspaper editors recently at the request of General Eisenhower.

Film moguls will have a direct mission to perform for U. S. governmental worldwide strategy, that of producing certain types of pictures to help shape post-war Europe along Allied objectives.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

You won't be hearing Eddie Bracken Sunday on NBC. Instead, if you dial the spot you'll bring in Tommy Dorsey. Compliments of Standard Brands, production by J. Walter Thompson. Last Tuesday morning Bracken's contract with Standard Brands was washed up at his request, nine weeks short of the July 29 expiration. Bracken gave as his reason the desire to get overseas earlier to entertain the boys. That must have been a sudden decision on his part for in a letter to Bill Lewis of Kenyon & Eckhardt last Saturday he wrote that script difficulties would result in "serious and progressive deterioration in the quality of programs which we will be able to present" and "therefore it would be in the best interests of all concerned to terminate the contract." Standard Brands gave Bracken his release over the protest of Lewis, who has strong feeling in the matter, and on the record, of a justifiable nature. No question that Bracken has been a b-a-a-a-d boy since he came to radio as the season's surprise wonder boy. He got jammed up at the outset although given every opportunity to continue his new-found success. Whether he acted like a head-strong kid or took bad advice is immaterial. Fact remains he not only dutched himself but made it very unpleasant for those he had dealings with. He'll probably be back on the air in the fall and unless he has mended his ways by then he'll get a severe letting alone. There are enough headaches inherent in radio to discourage any efforts at inviting them in. For a show so loaded with promise to fall flat on its face was a heart-breaker for Lewis and little wonder he took it so hard. If he's bitter about it you can't blame him. The show had everything and died at the hands of the man who made it—Eddie Bracken.

It wasn't all overcast at Kenyon & Eckhardt for the sun poked through the clouds shortly after the Bracken incident. Agency retrieved half of the "One Man's Family" billing and Borden bought Bill Gernannt's "County Fair" package soon after it was put on wax by Bill Lewis and John Swallow. It goes on the Blue as replacement for the Jerry Wayne sesh with Jack Bailey and Larry Keating emceeing the daffy doin's along the midway. Kickoff is set for July 10 with the show to be heard east and west at 7:30 p. m. "One Man's Family" moves back to NBC July 15, taking the last half of "The Army Hour" on Sunday, that superlative program being trimmed now that there's only war on one front.

STATION BREAKS . . . Tony Stanford produces the Tommy Dorsey show for Standard Brands, which fills the Bracken time on NBC till Fred Allen moves in Oct. 7. . . . Don Lee and Mutual's coast sales chief, Syd Gaynor, east for three weeks of chain biz. . . . Ivan Dittmar, out of the Marines, once again maestroing the Al Pearce show. . . . Death Valley Sheriff" moves back to the Blue June 29 after having been on all nets except Don Lee-Mutual in its 14 years on the air for Pacific Coast Borax. . . . Bill Robson won't get out of Germany in time to produce the first "Saint" programs. . . . Although John Conte has been off Maxwell House for two months his name still is misspelled on the ducats printed by NBC. . . . CBS is reclaiming Hedda Hopper's Monday night time for a Procter & Gamble strip and unless preferable time is cleared the columnist may move her hat boxes at NBC. Whoever comes up with the best time gets the Armour biz. . . . Joan Davis has ideas about Andy Russell that fit in with her fall plans. . . . Cal Kuhl's sesh with Phil Lennen and Bob Orr was dismissed by Orr with "we just wanted him to hear a show." . . . Is Don Wilson being groomed for bigger things than announcing?

Unless Lou Levy, who owns the Andrews Sisters package, and Nash-Kelvinator, who foots the bills on the Blue, can reach a compromise middle ground on whether the gals are singers or comediennes, the whole show may blow up in their collective faces. The client insists he bought the trio as singers. Levy contends their provocative farcreuring should not be discouraged. On that slightly confusing point of order a decision must be reached. Last Sunday the situation became so acute that Levy was served with notice to proceed with the agency-approved script or take the consequences. He grudgingly gave in but returned the notice that next week's program would be more comedy and less song. Show costing N-K $12,500 a week (exclusive of time) has been renewed for next season and the sisters have five weeks to go before packing for their overseas tour but a showdown is certain to come before many more Sundays unless the client's wishes are better respected. If put to a vote of the Andrews following, Levy's holdout for jokes would be slapped down hard.

. . . and the winnah! Frances Langford, we might even add, Bob Hope, but that would be salting the wounds of Charlie Luckman, headman of the Lever Bros. Pepsodent subsidiary. Judge Isaac Pacht, who arbitrated the beef, decided for the singer and, incidentally, Hope's good intentions in okaying the deal for Langford to sing for hospitalized GI's this summer. It would have been a sickening blow to the singer if she were forced to abandon her tour of mercy because of commercial perplexities. And that goes for Hope, too, for if Sir Robert is No. 1 Soldier in Greasepaint—which is freely conceded and indisputable—then Frances Langford is our candidate for the faminine equivalent. She has been almost everywhere he has gone and no other gal can make that claim. If the Langford summer sesh for Chase & Sanborn should adversely affect her autumn status with the Pepsodent people then it would be another manifestation of virtue's reward. She has firm offers to head up her own show in the fall and her defection would be an abrasive blow to the dentifrice gang.

WAR WORKERS ARE 'SOLD' ON BONDS SAYS PIDGEON

"War plant workers throughout the middle west are sold on war bonds as insurance for the future," declared Walter Pidgeon yesterday on his return from a two-week Seventh War Loan tour of industrial centers in Ohio and northern Illinois.

"When the Treasury asked the Hollywood Victory Committee to send out players," he stated, "we were given the impression this drive would be a tough one to put over. But my own experience was that workers in the war plants needed only to have the facts about Series E bonds explained to them. Most of those who were not buying had been approached only on an emotional basis. So I dusted off all the things I used to say to prospective buyers when I was selling industrial bonds in New England, before I became an actor. I asked them to buy as insurance against a rainy day. When they realized they couldn't find a better investment, they bought."

Pidgeon made 16 appearances before a total audience of approximately 325,000, in Cleveland, Canton, Dayton, Martins Ferry and Bellaire, O., and in Chicago and vicinity. Nearly 100,000 gathered for a street rally in Chicago.

Brown Quits Wrigley, Moving To Hollywood

Chicago, May 30.—Bobby Brown, producer of "The First Line" and "Service to the Front," two of the three CBS shows sponsored by Wrigley, has resigned, with Ted Robertson, his assistant, taking over the shows for the present. Brown, one of Chicago's veterans, plans to move to Hollywood to freelance. Wrigley is in the process of dropping "Service" for a revival of the "Scattergood Baines" series, possibly on a five times a week basis. Chicle outfit is casting about for new program ideas and literally being snowed under by all manner of shows, some of which have lain dormant for years.

RANK-NATHANSON FORM CANADIAN DISTRIB SETUP

aimed at the French Canadian market, which represents a third of the population of Canada.

This is the first of a number of announcements of plans resulting from the current visit of the British tycoon and his associates to Canada for the purpose of conferring with Nathanson regarding the future development of the Canadian motion picture industry. The Nathanson partnership gives Rank 110 theatres across Canada and is the forerunner of the round-the-British-Empire chain envisaged by Rank and his associates.

Rank and his party discussed other film matters in Montreal yesterday with D. C. Coleman, president of Canadian Pacific Railways and director of Associated Screen News. He spent today in Ottawa with Hon. Malcolm MacDonald, British high commissioner to Canada. Tomorrow he will be back in Toronto for further conferences with Nathanson, and gets into New York Monday.

He and party will be in Hollywood within the following week to discuss plans with American studio heads. Rank is accompanied by John Davis, managing director of British Odeon circuit; G. I. Woodham Smith, counsel; Barrington Gain, financial adviser, and Jack Lawrence, public relations.

'Ice Follies' Garners $210,000 In Seattle

Seattle, May 30.—"Ice Follies" wound up 18-day stand here with usual big take, $210,000 being the figure this year. Al Wilson and Frank Hixon, impresarios here, also collected about $70,000 in taxes, the city tax being 5% of gross, in addition to the federal tax. Scale was from $3. Although show ended tonight, ticket selling stopped last Monday, with an estimated ten G's turned back on mail orders, due to sellout. Biz was at full capacity every performance. "Follies" goes to Portland next where it plays at the ice arena purchased last year by Hixon, Wilson and the Shipsteads.

Kirkwood Due Tues.

Pat Kirkwood, first star to come over from Metro's London studios on the exchange deal, will arrive here Tuesday to report for work in "No Leave, No Love." Filming begins this summer.

'CHAMBERMAID' PIC POSTPONED

"Diary of a Chambermaid," which Burgess Meredith was to have produced for RKO with Paulette Goddard as star and Jean Renoir directing, has been indefinitely postponed and both Meredith and Renoir have checked off RKO lot.

It is reported that Benedict Bogeaus has made a deal to produce the film with Goddard as a star and Renoir as director.

Miss Goddard, slated to make an overseas trek with the Jack Benny troupe, is due back here about Aug. 10 and must report to Paramount Sept. 1 for her next assignment. Further complications may result in fact Renoir has a directing commitment with David Loew for either late this year or early in 1946.

STRONG FINANCIAL SPOT OF FILM INDUSTRY TOLD

New York, May 30.—Reconversion period to which the government and industrial planners have been alerted, finds the picture industry in what is cosidered by trade analysts as the strongest financial position in its history. But for a possible reversal in the trend of ever-rising b.o. grosses and rentals, the cash position of majors, strengthened by boomtime earnings, will be further bolstered along with other industries by proposed government "relief" measures slated to become effective about Jan. 1, 1946.

Industry leaders, recalling the depression in the early 1930's when the bottom dropped out of the picture business, see no parallel ahead. Industry planners are confronted with an entirely different set of factors. Instead of over-extension there has been a tremendous reduction in funded debt and other debt during the past few years. Interest rates, except for some indie film production, are low. Theatre properties have been written down and off at a rapid clip.

Excess profits taxes alone for the six majors during the war, including the first quarter of 1945, total more than $170,000,000. Any reduction in excess profits taxes figures importantly in calculations for post-war film business profits.

Theodore Bachenheimer Operetta Producer

Theodore Bachenheimer will produce and direct "Music In My Heart," operetta based on the life of Tschaikowsky. Legiter slated to open at the Philharmonic Aug. 20 for a three-week stand. Frederick Jackson wrote the book with lyrics by Forman Brown. Franz Steininger adapted Tschaikowsky's music and will conduct the orchestra. Anton Dolin is creating the choregraphy for the show. Michael Bartlett and Margit Bokor will have the leads. The production will head for Broadway following its Coast bow.

Stander On Way

Lionel Stander is on his way from New York to report for a featured role in Goldwyn's "The Kid From Brooklyn," starring Danny Kaye and directed by Norman Z. McLeod. Stander has been doing comedy on the Danny Kaye radio show.

Allen Due In 3 Weeks

She fakes a kidnaping and tricks her uncle into paying out the money to ransom her. Uncle gets wise to the scheme after the money is handed over. He calls in the police, and not only Vicki, her night club sweetheart and the bad gangsters make the jail, but also uncle and his comic butler (Ian Wolfe). Finale is a double wedding set to music.

Production and direction of William Beaudine are smoothly adequate and the four musical numbers, though not in the hit class, well staged.

PIX BIGS SCANNING COST TREND OF DISTRIBUTION

New York, May 30.—Film distribution executives, with cost of maintaining the national film distribution system ranging from $80 to $125,000 weekly, are scanning current operating costs in relation to boxoffice eccests during the transition from a two-war to a one-war economy and eventually peacetime economy.

Cutbacks in war contracts in the New York area may reduce war orders $3,000,000,000 within the next nine months. Other sectors will be affected. Civilian goods demands may offset war plant cutbacks.

Reconversion is not expected to affect all exchange territories with equal severity and the duration of the reconversion jitters is expected to vary in relation to civilian goods manufacturing potentials.

All-Star Bond Rally Aids Canadian Drive

The Canadian government is making full use of "The All-Star Bond Rally" for its Eighth Victory Loan, according to information received by Hollywood Division of War Activities Committee. Film is being shown in every theatre and every war plant in the Dominion and will be viewed by every uniformed man there and overseas. Finance Minister J. L. Ilsley has sent a letter of appreciation for the picture to Tom Baily, Hollywood coordinator of WAC.

That Man Malone

"That Man Malone," story by Borden Chase, has been purchased from RKO by Republic for the second Frank Borzage production at the valley lot. John Wayne will star. Borzage's initial Republic film, "Concerto," also by Chase, goes before the cameras July 1. It will be Republic's first Technicolor picture.

DIRECTORS' PENSION PROPOSAL TOLD AT MEETING

exploratory stage, with many details yet to be worked out.

The fund to establish unemployment insurance, pensions and death benefits would be derived from an increase of membership dues of the Guild. A special group would be set up to supervise this activity, but would have power to borrow funds from the SDG board of directors to carry out the operations.

The proportion of funds to be allocated probably would depend upon the needs, though this and many other details would have to be worked out in conferences with the Treasury Department, under which such a non-profit organization would come.

The fund would be established immediately, or as soon as approval could be secured from the Treasury, and would become operative at the end of five years. This would give the group sufficient time to accumulate necessary funds, establish smooth working machinery to supervise payments of benefits.

Any member of the Guild would be eligible to these benefits when the fund becomes operative. It is understood no time limit would be required of service in the industry or membership in SDG. In other words, any director or assistant retiring at the end of next five years would be eligible for a pension.

The plan when finally worked out also will call for sick benefits and hospitalization.

The proposed foundation for benevolent and educational purposes would be founded on voluntary contributions, having been suggested by the offer last year of a $75,000 donation by a single individual. Scope of the foundation's activities in the benevolent and educational field would be almost unlimited.

Senior members of SDG, as well as Juniors and members of the board of directors of the Production Managers Guild, attended the dinner meeting at the Roosevelt hotel. John Cromwell, who presided, was considered virtually certain of re-election as Guild president.

PRODUCERS, UNIONS GET TILL JUNE 20TH TO AIR JOBS CASE

Attorneys for various studio unions and producers have been given until June 20 to complete briefs for submission to the War Manpower Commission on question of job referrals and availability certificates for strikers. It was agreed at hearing Tuesday that counsel for the IATSE, producers and Conference of Studio Unions could have until June 15 to serve briefs, with each side being given an additional five days in which to reply.

At the end of that period, WMC panel may elect to hold a hearing if it decides there are certain factual matters it desires aired. If hearing is not ordered, attorneys then will present final arguments for submission to WMC in Washington.

First discussion of WMC ruling was Monday with Attorney Anthony O'Brien. Attorney Michael Luddy appeared for IATSE, with Attorney Frank Pestana representing the Conference.

HAL CRAIG URGES FILM LABOR INQUIRY

Hal Craig, extra and bit player, is asking the War Manpower Commission and California Employment Stabilization Commission to make investigations of unemployment in the motion picture industry. Craig claims that if production schedules are regulated to eliminate peaks in the unemployment curve, additional work will be provided for thousands of extras, bit players and other employes.

In his appeals to the commissions, Craig said registering of hundreds of new employes for extra work will aggravate an already serious labor situation and may prove a hazard to the Unemployment Insurance Fund. He declared that during a certain period last year money paid out of the fund to industry employes ran as high as 50% in relation to all other industries combined.

NEWSREELS, RADIO SET TO RECORD END OF S. F. MEET

San Francisco, May 30.—The newsreels and radio today got something a bit more definite to shoot at for the final fireworks of the United Nations Conference with the closing date tentatively set for June 11 and the two final ceremonies scheduled as definitely as possible.

Formal signing of the world charter, with all the 49 United Nations inking, is set for the Veterans Memorial bldg., where excellent lighting facilities are provided. Speech of President Truman, considered as a possibility for the Civic Auditorium with its 12,000 seating capacity, has been set pretty definitely for the Opera House with its maximum of around 3,200. So radio and newsreel crews are eager and are pointing definitely toward the twin climaxes.

The grapevine here says that President Truman has had the benefit of about the best advice obtainable for his microphone and newsreel appearance here. Story is that Lieut. Col. Albert E. Holland, attached to the Motion Picture Division of the Office of Inter-American Affairs, planed back to Washington with Stettinius. An old friend of Truman's, he called on the President and discussed plans for Truman's visit here, with special attention to the details that concern show business. Only show business in this instance is business of state, it being imperative that the President appear to best advantage to his radio and video millions. Don't sell this short—this Truman opus could be historic, and the cinema people here feel that it is definitely a cinema show demanding the highest technical skills and brilliance.

The dividend at the box office, in this instance, is the peace of the world.

The newsreels made some footage today of the commission meeting in the Veterans bldg., but it was nothing to get excited about. The whole show is pointing toward the arrival of Truman, and capable Jack Connolly, motion picture mogul with the international secretariat, says a platoon of newsreels will trek out here with Truman from Washington.

The beginning of the end is definitely in sight, and with it the feeling that the cobwebs will be brushed away in these dull halls. One thing is becoming clear—the end of this conference is just the beginning of another multiple job—the camera and radio coverage of the actual functioning of the organization being planned here. The first inkling came from the Chinese and Brazilian delegations, who asked that a general world conference be called within the next few months to establish a world health organization, what with disease and starvation rampant in much of the world, and with drastic immediate action necessary. This instantly brings up the possibility of a cinema job covering the first sessions of the new world organization, and the vastly larger job of following up the intense, large-scale dramas, both in documentaries and in scenario patterns, of the popular "man against death" theme—hunger fighters, plague fighters, malaria fighters and what-not developing the "medicine is a weapon" idea.

Don Terry Will Resume Screen Work June 6

Don Terry has been mustered out of Navy on medical discharge and resumes his screen career, arriving here June 6. Spruance for heroism as a volunteer landing boat officer with 5th Amphibious force. Actor since March has been with Civil Affairs Near Eastern Division of Navy.

Rowland Assigned

Roy Rowland has been assigned to direct Metro's "Alley Cowboys" and leaves today with Robert Sisk, producer, for Amarillo, Texas, where they will visit the "Boys' Ranch" established by Cal Farley, around which story is laid. Skippy Homeier will star and production starts July 1.

Universal will put three top-budget films in front of lenses Monday, bringing total of pictures shooting to five. Taking off will be "Once Upon a Dream," "Alibi in Ermine" and "As It Was Before." Continuing on the production schedule are "Frontier Gal" and "Uncle Harry."

IATSE Rescinding Charters, Report

Conferences of Studio Union tops were advised yesterday that word had been received from William Hutcheson, international prexy of the Carpenters, that the IATSE was rescinding studio charters it had issued for Carpenters, Painters and Machinists. No announcement to that effect, however, has been made here by Prexy Richard Walsh or other IA leaders, who have been directing efforts to keep production going during current strike.

AFL PREXY GREEN RAPS GROUP FOR ATTACK ON STARS

Following protests from the Screen Actors Guild, William Green, prexy of the American Federation of Labor, has denounced action of Pomona Valley Central Labor Council in ordering certain stars placed on the unfair list and demanded action be rescinded. It is understood action was rescinded on order of Green and that a letter to that effect is being sent to SAG Executive Secretary Jack Dales by Edwin M. Greenwald, Pomona secretary.

In his telegram to Secretary Greenwald, Prexy Green stated:

"Pomona Central Labor Council made a grave mistake when it instructed you to send letter such as you sent to members of the Screen Actors Guild recently. I officially and personally repudiate your letter and action of your central body in sponsoring it. No authority is conferred upon a central body to take sides in a jurisdictional dispute. Your action is unjustifiable and indefensible. I respectfully demand your central body make public retraction of your action and withdraw letter you sent to members of the Screen Actors Guild immediately."

Greenwald had written letters to several stars, stating by action of the Pomona Council that player's name had been placed on an "unfair list" and assertedly indicating that pictures in which the players appeared would be boycotted. It is reported action was requested by tops directing current studio strike because players were crossing the studio picket lines.

Hearing On Restraining Order Postponed

Hearing on temporary restraining order preventing the IATSE from interfering with meeting of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 or proceeding with trial of four of its members has been postponed until week from today. IA attorneys requested postponement in order to secure depositions from 21 studio workers who secured the temporary injunction. Taking of depositions will start tomorrow.

block booking must be eliminated to give a further break to the indies.

Biddle said there would be no change in the plans to take the Big Five case to trial in New York in October, as a result of the failure of the companies to work out with the Justice Department an equitable settlement.

Biddle and his successor, Tom C. Clark, who also was present, agreed there would be no slowdown in the work of the anti-trust division after the war. While Clark did not comment on the motion picture anti-trust suits, the inference was that no punches would be pulled after he took office.

COWAN BLASTED ON DIVORCEMENT VIEW

New York, May 31.—Allied States Association has issued blast against Lester Cowan for statements anent theatre divorcement last week. Cowan said he didn't favor joining the independent organization because the latter appeared mainly interested in running to the Department of Justice on divorcement.

Allied States charges that "apparently Cowan has heard little and cares less about the mounting popular prejudice against trusts and cartels, or the avowed policy of the government to encourage and protect little business."

CURFEW WON'T RING TONIGHT; BARS BACK ON OLD HOURS

Both civilian and GI drinking hours go back to the 6 a.m. to 2 a.m. borders today, although there is a strong possibility that few bars and package goods dispensers will keep open for the time allotted. Board of Equalization members have not rescinded their ruling that bars must close at midnight, but the ruling of the military chiefs plus the victory won by the Strip spots in their court battle makes the B of E ruling invalid.

However, Southern California Tavern Owners' Association sent a bulletin to its members suggesting they shutter on the midnight hour because of the liquor shortage. It is entirely up to the individual bonifaces as to what hours they wish to keep within the confines of the state law.

OTTO PREMINGER claims to be cutting down shooting time on "Fallen Angel" at 20th-Fox by rehearsing both camera and players in every sequence. By taking the camera through rehearsal on mobile crane Preminger eliminates multiple set-ups and numerous takes. He contends that camera rehearsal is also a factor in achieving naturally rythmic pace in each scene. Yesterday, with one-take collaboration of Alice Faye and Dana Andrews, "Fallen Angel" stars, Preminger and his cameraman, Joseph LaShelle, filmed four solid pages of the longest and most important scene in the script, including 160 lines of dialog and 16 different moves within one room for players, in three minutes and 40 seconds.

WITHIN another five weeks it is expected the War Department will reduce the minimum of points to men getting out of the Army from 85 to around 76. It has been figured by the Army that the allotment of discharges on 85 points and over, is in excess of the number of men who can conform to the necessary requirements. It is believed the amount will be close to one-half million less than the 1,300,000 figured on. In the event that the reducing of points takes place, quite a number of men who have been in the picture and theatre business, prior to induction, and are now in this country, will be qualified for immediate discharge.

"THE POSTMAN ALWAYS RINGS TWICE," being made by Metro, was purchased ten years ago by that company. It was bought from James Caine, the author, and screen treatment was made which did not meet the approval of Joe Breen in the Hays office. Studio put various writers on the script, at different times, but Breen always nixed them claiming the characterizations and treatment would not pass muster. Finally Metro got writers, who after conferring with Breen, changed the treatment to a higher elevation of the social sphere, that the story was written around, with Breen giving his assent for the "green light" on it several months ago.

"THIS STRANGE ADVENTURE," Metro's Clark Gable-Greer Garson starrer, may be an adventure story to the producer, but it is strictly a problem play to Cameraman Joseph Ruttenberg. According to Ruttenberg, shooting this one involves about all the headachey camera problems there are. Among the scenes that present photographic difficulties are submarine shots, fog enveloped backgrounds, downpours of rain, crowded city street exteriors, a torpedoed ship, a raft on a raging sea, animal-filled farm acreage, airplane stuff and a few cramped home interiors.

LOUIS HAYWARD has an ambitious setup for the future. As soon as he winds up his role in Hunt Stromberg's "Young Widow," opposite Jane Russell, he goes to Mexico City to try to line up a picture down there. He is slated then to return to Hollywood for start of Edward Small's "Return of Monte Cristo," and after that he has a commitment to make a picture for Rene Clair in France. While in France, he hopes to hop across English Channel for a British picture before coming back to Hollywood for either another film or the Mexican film.

He also is trying to correct a technical defect, which would allow bars to operate 24 hours per day when the war ends.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Along the canyon trail they rode,
the cowboys true and tried,
Who shot their trusty six-guns all around the countryside.
The sheriff was a marksman and his draw was fast and slick
And every cowboy in his crew could shoot like Dead-Eye Dick.
And when they trailed the bandits to their lair in yonder hills
The scenery was punctured by a storm of leaden pills.
And suddenly the marksmen all forgot about their gats
And mingled with the bandit crew and slugged them in the slats.
The hero is an expert with his trusty roscoe—but
He foils the villain with a good old-fashioned uppercut.

The Lone Texas Ranger

(Western)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate producer, Louis Gray. Executive producer, William J. O'Sullivan. Director, Spencer Bennet. Screenplay by Bob Williams, based on Fred Harman's NEA comic strip, by special arrangement with Stephen Slesinger. Photography, Bud Thackery. Sound, Ed Borschell. Film editor, Charles Craft. Art director, Russell Kimball. Musical director, Richard Cherwin. Set decorations, George Milo. Makeup, Bob Mark.

CAST—Stars Wild Bill Elliott, with Bobby Blake, Allee Fleming, Roy Barcroft, Tom Chatterton, Jack McClendon, Helen Talbot, Bud Geary, Budd Buster, Nelson McDowell, Larry Olsen, Rex Lease, Jack Kirk.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post, May 31, 1945. Running time: 58 MINS.

Red Ryder, played by Wild Bill Elliott, cleans up a difficult mess with his customary aplomb in "The Lone Texas Ranger," although he didn't do it all alone. He was ably sustained in his zeal for law and order by Little Beaver and a talking crow which turned stool pigeon at the psychological moment and frustrated the nefarious plot just as Red was about to be tossed into the calaboose for murder.

Leader of the gang robbing the silver mine was the sheriff, played by Tom Chatterton, highly respected in the community but a baddie at heart, although he had a noble son who had just been graduated from college and arrived in time to attend his old man's funeral. The old man had been caught robbing the stage coach and bumped off by Red Ryder in the course of duty, but the colleger did not know it until a couple of reels later. The kid was elected sheriff and swore to kill the man who polished off his father, which put Red Ryder in a tough spot.

After a series of chases, punctuated by a couple of stickups, a few cold-blooded murders and a powder explosion which practically ruined Helen Talbot's silver mine, the climax arrived in a horseshoe shop owned by a dishonest blacksmith who used his shop for a gangsters' hideout and kept the stolen silver hidden in a vault beneath his anvil.

Red had rounded up the culprits in the blacksmith shop and was ready to put the law on them when the young but honest sheriff butted in and accused the Ranger of shooting his old man. It looked bad for Red until Little Beaver, played by Bobby Blake, bopped one of the baddies with a blacksmith's hammer. Then the talking crow, which was hiding in the secret vault, cut loose with his line of talk, disclosing the stolen silver and causing a roughhouse which wound up with justice triumphant and the young sheriff engaged to marry the silver mine owner.

Play Review

MARINKA

New Haven, May 31.—Carrying a lilting score and a plentitude of top flight dance numbers, "Marinka" premiered encouragingly at Schubert tonight as the musicalized version of "Mayerling." Book has circumvented the tragic ending of the film with a modernized finale that leaves a lighter outgoing reaction. Main story follows the pattern of the Prince and the commoner romance of a generation ago. For pix, production could be a technicolor field day.

Joan Roberts repeats her personality and vocalability click of "Oklahoma" in a different type of role, Jerry Wayne is somewhat weak on singing chore and requires plenty assistance from amplifiers. Luba Maline adds zest to the cast and Romo Vincent is well received. Reinhold Schunzel does a fine piece of straight acting. Ronnie Cunningham and Jack Gansert lead the terps parade, which is overall outstanding. Production gives evidence of substantial bankrolling, sets and costumes being on the gorgeous side. Typical Hassard Short staging is likewise apparent.

players, while writers are made to seem the lowliest denizens on lot. Romantic intrigue has William Gaxton as agent threatening Ann Mary Dickey, the films star, onto stage where she will have to act, also read what critics really think about her ability.

Comic highlight is alleged story conference when Victor Moore as studio head is bulled into making picture about himself. It is prestige film sure to lose money, but firm will be able to make money on all mediocre pictures, referred to in uncouth terms.

Moore and Gaxton are amusing as studio bigshot and agent, latter suggesting buying rights to a Broadway play sure to lose money as a builder-upper of studio's standing.

Shirley Booth scores as composite chatter writer and puts over lyrics very well. Viola Essen wins evening's strongest applause score in extended ballet with music indicated to be interpolated. Miss Dickey, formerly of Metropolitan, is splendid soprano. Gilbert Russell is very good as downtrodden writer who eventually becomes studio's bigshot. This "Pinafore" is musical stunt with humor, pretty girls and familiar melodies well handled.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

Current crisis in Syria and the Lebanon is of transcending and symbolic importance. Here is a case that tests several of the high hopes expressed for a better world. It is a well-known fact that the great land bridge of which Syria and Lebanon are a part is rich in oil. That makes it attractive to the great industrial powers, that is, the great powers. French economic interests in this area are of long standing—they antedate the days when oil became of strategic industrial importance. During the past war, Britain and France signed a secret treaty—the Sykes-Picot agreement. By this, France was to have special interests in the area generally occupied by Syria and the Lebanon. At the end of the war, the development of these French interests was somewhat circumscribed by the placing of these two countries under Mandate. They were "A" mandates, which meant that they were considered capable of attaining their independence in due course, and France as a mandatory power had the legal obligation to aid them in this attainment. The tardiness, even reluctance of French action to this end, is now a matter of record. More than once there were violent disturbances between French and Syrians, notably in 1926. French interests in this area have not abated with the passing of time, but Syrian and Lebanese' ambition for complete independence has grown with the years. The test now is whether the legitimate ambitions of these native peoples are to be thwarted by great power economic interests or aided by great power performance of principles they have professed. In San Francisco, where the Security Charter is taking shape, committees are coming to grips with the matter that constitutes the core of the security problem. That matter is the voting procedure in the proposed Security Council, or, in other words, how extensive shall be the veto rights of the Big Five powers holding permanent seats on that body. Decision on this voting procedure was reached at the Crimean Conference early this year, and that decision was passed on to the San Francisco Conference as a series of recommendations. According to the voting procedure agreed to at Yalta, any of the five big powers could veto the following decisions. One to take action against itself; 2, to take any sort of enforcement action against any country; 3, to recommend measures for the pacific settlement of disputes. The smaller powers at San Francisco concede points 1 and 2, but have been fighting against point 3. Agreement is not yet in sight, largely because big power representatives here have referred the issue of point 3 back to their respective governments for advice. But notice how this voting procedure, if it stands as is, would apply to the Syrian crisis: France, as one of the Big Five, could veto not only enforcement action but also a recommendation of measures designed to achieve a pacific settlement of the dispute. It is of extreme interest that a dispute involving a great power, France, and a smaller power, Syria, should break into the open just at a time when the World Security Conference is grappling with the problem of how just such a dispute should be handled.

Shooting on "The Harvey Girls" will be completed this week by Producer Art Freed and George Sidney—with a sigh of relief from them and from John Hodiak. About everything that can happen to one leading man in one picture has happened to Hodiak since he started work in "The Harvey Girls." He suffered two broken ribs in a fight scene. Then had to lay off briefly because of a sty and finally was off the job for days while he suffered from the mumps.

CORPORAL NORMAN GEIGER, according to advices just received here, awakened a flock of fellow G. I.'s in a cold, gray China dawn by singing "Oh, What a Beautiful Morning"—and lived through it. He figured it would cause heavy deluge of heavy G. I. shoes, and it did, some of which he managed to dodge. The idea was a publicity gag to exploit GI version of "Oklahoma," which Geiger, veteran Metro flack before entering the Army, was press agenting. . . . Rapid rise note: Within the period of one week Robert Farnham, former employe of the Selznick Culver City studio, was promoted from captain to major and received the bronze star for meritorious achievement as signal officer. BROADWAY RUNAROUND

Ethel Waters, Paul Robeson, Bill Robinson and Avon Long came back to Broadway this week to illuminate the theatre with their "colorful" personalities. Miss Waters, unfortunately, has an unworthy showcase in "Blue Holiday," a second rate musical melange. And some close friend ought to tip her off that she isn't the type to wear a long bob with orchids in her hair—also that she is at her incomparable best when she is singing of "Stormy Weather" and "Little Joe," not when she is trying to be coy in off-color numbers. Paul Robeson's "Othello" has matured in stature to match his own, and his return engagement at the City Center at popular prices has already brought out the SRO to such response, that the run already has been extended. As for Bill Robinson in "Memphis Bound," his 67 years young dancing feet are more nimble than ever. And Avon Long is another reason why this jived up "Pinafore" is worth a trip to the Broadway. Incidently, producer "Booker T." Wildberg is so filthy rich these days that he invited all the Boston critics to the New York opening—to see a show they had already covered in Boston during its two weeks engagement.

DISA AND DATA: Garbo has rented a shack on Fire Island for the summer. Wonder if she'll post a sign for her neighbors—"Beware, Garbo on the premises!" . . . According to a letter Marlene Dietrich has just written her daughter, Maria Manton, she is going to remain in Paris and make French movies with Jean Gabin as co-star—mais out! . . . And speaking of Maria, as soon as "Foolish Notion" closes, she is hoping to catch up with her mother, when she goes overseas with the U. S. O. unit of "The Front Page." . . . Although no contracts have as yet been signed, Herman Shumlin in all probability will produce Sam and Bella Spewack's new play, which is going to embarrass a lot of political bigwigs—but plenty! . . . Add Seymour Gross to the inexhaustible list of budding authors writing of their overseas experiences. Back from six months with the U. S. O. company of "Nothing But the Truth," he is "telling all" in a three acter called "Backlog." . . . Anne Baxter, a student at the Theodora Irvine School when she was 11 years old, was invited back the other night as Exhibit-A of "look what this school has done for me." . . . Martha Scott's medicos have advised Rose Franken that Martha is in no physical condition to road tour in "Soldier's Wife" next fall. If this Franken refuses to release her from her contract, the matter may come up before Equity.

FOR CRYING OUT LOUD: Ida Lupino tells of an amusing story that happened to her, enroute to New York. Just before she boarded the Century in Chi, she was handed the radio script of "Wrong Number," which she was to do on the Kate Smith show the following day. Her secretary was cueing her on her lines of this very intense dramatic yarn and she was ranting away, sobbing hysterically, "Get out of here—you're driving me crazy, I'm going to call the police," when suddenly there was a knock on the door. When she opened it there stood a trembling porter completely surrounded by the rest of the passengers in the car who thought a murder was being committed and had come to rescue her!

EXCLUSIVELY YOURS: If Paul Muni is looking for a vehicle to bring him back to Broadway, a script just arrived from London by Dorian Herbert, based on the life of Beethoven, is in the Gilbert Miller office, waiting to be sent to his Hotel Dorset suite. . . . When Virginia Gillmore leaves the cast of "Dear Ruth," to resume her Hollywood career, she will be replaced by Augusta Dabney, of the Chi company. . . . Raoul Pene DuBois has burned his Broadway bridges behind him. As soon as he finishes wardrobing "Blue Skies," he checks in at Columbia under a long termer as art director, with a future eye on an eventual producer's berth. . . . Anne Nichols has a new radio serial all ready to tee-off, revolving around a character named "Herbie"—a composite of "Topper" and "Harvey." . . . In between his Signal Corps duties Capt. Charles Grayson has found time to edit "Half-A-Hundred," tales by great American writers, which hits the book stalls June 4th. . . . Louis Schurr, escorting Virginia Field to the preem of "Memphis Bound," told her that Paramount wants her for a picture with Ray Milland and Ida Lupino, starting in August. . . . Should Patsy Kelly get the best room service at the Waldorf Astoria, it's because the bell hop on her floor is her brother, Willie!

MASS PICKET LINES STILL CENTERED ON GOLDWYN LOT

Mass picket lines still are being centered on Samuel Goldwyn studio, with sound truck visiting other lots and urging all pickets not needed there to join lines marching at Goldwyn. Several producers scheduled to start new pictures with technicians to be employed under new studio union charters are reported to have deferred shooting following reports that Prexy Richard Walsh of the IATSE had complied with orders of the American Federation of Labor executive council to revoke charters he had issued for carpenters, machinists and painters.

Walsh has made no announcement on charters, but William Hutcheson, international prexy of the carpenters, advised tops in the Conference of Studio Unions that word had been received from the council that Walsh was scuttling the charters. With little strike activity, other than mass picket lines at Goldwyn, interest in studio walkout switches to Superior court Monday, where IA tops must defend their action in seizing control of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 because members of that union voted not to work outside their jurisdiction. A group of 21 members secured a temporary restraining order preventing the IA international from interfering with the autonomy of the local or proceeding with trial of four members accused of "acting against the best interests of the IATSE." Hearing Monday is to determine whether restraining order will be made permanent.

LABOR COUNCIL RESCINDS ORDER AGAINST ACTORS

Edwin M. Greenwald, secretary of Pomona Valley Central Labor Council, in a letter to the Screen Actors Guild, said technicalities were preventing that organization from placing actors who are crossing studio picket lines on the unfair list, and at the same time advised the Guild he had just received a request from L. P. Lindeloff, international prexy of the painters, asking unionists not to patronize theatres where "any of the unfair producers' pictures are being shown." In a letter technically complying with demand of William Green, prexy of the American Federation of Labor, that action of the Council in placing actors on the unfair list be rescinded, but at the same time verbally spanking the actors for their action, Greenwald stated in part:

"As good unionists we simply complied with the request of the American Federation of Labor union by whom we were addressed in respect to what we believed at that time to be the individual actions of those who were breaking the strike and the picket lines. We did not comprehend nor anticipate that such strike-breaking activities were taken with the support of any labor organization of the AF of L, on the contrary we believed that such actions were being taken in line with certain foreign political philosophies with which we are not in agreement.

"Had we known at the time that your organization was back of and supporting the actions of these persons we would most certainly have communicated with you directly before addressing said persons or taking any action against them as individuals.

"Yet you have the effrontery to call us irresponsible while at the same time resorting to threats against us over the telephone, which threats are very similar to the old Bioff regime procedures. You are to be assured that we have not and will not take one or the other side in any of your Hollywood quarrels nor jurisdictional disputes, nor do we in any way condone nor approve of the cause and circumstances which force one union to be pitted against another in the course of the struggle for economic security.

"Under demand from William Green, president of the AF of L, we are hereby recognizing the technicalities which prevent us from placing said actors and actresses upon our official unfair list and we are declaring our previous action as being null and void. Nothing in any of our previous actions nor in the revocation of same is to be construed as a declaration by us that we in any way approve of the procedures or circumstances which cause one union brother breaking union's membership strike action. You are to consider our letters as previously addressed to some of your members as being now withdrawn as not being properly within our prerogatives or action."

Letter, signed by Secretary Greenwald, was addressed to John Dales, Jr., executive secretary of SAG.

RAW STOCK UPPED 10 MILLION FEET FOR INDUSTRY

film situation would be eased somewhat, although new total still is under allotment for the last quarter of 1944. Every company receives boosts in raw stock, but the newsreels, including March of Time, are given the largest jump, going from the second quarter total of 53,000,000 to 55,860,219 in the third, an increase of 2,860,219. Reels had received no increase in second quarter allocations over the first quarter.

Independent producers' pool benefits by more than 1,000,000 feet in the new schedule, being allocated 29,408,000 as against 28,323,720 in the second quarter. This will particularly aid producers releasing through United Artists, who have been hard hit by past allocations.

Metro, in addition to receiving the largest allocation, also is given greatest increase over the second quarter, jumping up more than 1,500,000 feet. Independent companies like Monogram and PRC draw only small amount of additional footage. Former increases by nearly 300,000 feet while latter will be given just under 200,000 more for the third quarter.

Warners, 20th-Fox, Columbia and Paramount all receive increases of more than 1,000,000. Universal's total jumps up just short of 1,000,000 more than the second quarter. RKO gains by almost 825,000 feet, while Republic benefits by more than 650,000 feet in the new quarter.

Newsreel total of 55,860,219 feet will be distributed as follows: Movietone News, 13,318,000; News of the Day, 12,129,000; Paramount, 12,392,000; Pathe, 9,574,000; Universal, 7,127,000, and March of Time, 2,318,000.

Class C producers, those whose consumption is below 1,000,000 feet and who turn out only shorts and special subjects, will be given pool total of 8,100,000 feet. WPB has allocated 15,570,000 feet for factual pictures and 6,300,000 feet for special subjects.

Army and Navy credits are 74,100,000 feet, credits remaining on the same percentages as in past quarters.

MCA DEMANDS TRUST SUIT DISMISSAL

Comparing musicians to baseball players, Music Corporation of America's attorneys, Pacht, Pelton, Warne, Ross & Bernhard, filed a motion to dismiss the $3,000,000 suit brought by Larry Finley against MCA, charging violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

In the memorandum filed in support of the motion MCA's attorneys pointed to the decision of Justice Holmes of the U. S. Supreme court in the Federal baseball club case. Justice Holmes rendered the decision that specifically held there was neither commerce nor interstate commerce involved in professional baseball exhibition. MCA's lawyers argue that musicians and entertainers are hired to perform labor or personal service the same way as a professional baseball player is employed. They further argue that the anti-trust act specifically states that the labor of human beings is not a commodity or article of commerce.

It is added in the memorandum that the complaint of Finley does not state a valid claim, which constitutes violation of the act. It is claimed that the facts which Finley sets up, namely the hiring of musicians for his San Diego ballroom, does not constitute in any sense interstate commerce or otherwise.

Motion goes on to state that the courts have held there is nothing unlawful in "exclusive contracts" for the sale of goods or the rendition of services where there is and can be no monopoly. And it is claimed that Finley's complaint clearly indicates that MCA has no monopoly on the band business.

Court will hold a hearing on the petition June 11 before Judge J. F. T. O'Connor of the local Federal District court.

PAR'S CELEB PLANS FOR 33RD ANNI ANNOUNCED

July) by a One-third of a Century sales drive from Aug. 26 to Sept. 29. There will be no special fanfare, but advertising in connection with the drive will be keynoted on what Paramount has contributed to the film industry during its 33 years of serving entertainment to the public.

Two or three broadcasts are being arranged as kickoff on pictures that will be released during the celebration period. The pictures are "Incendiary Blonde," "You Came Along" and "Out of This World." There will also be two reissues: "Northwest Mounted Police" and "This Gun For Hire," Reagan announced.

A special trailer is being built around the various awards given Paramount last year, such as the Academy and others voted "Going My Way," and on picture that will be set for release for four or five months to come.

Allen Usher, Paramount's Chicago district sales manager, will tour the eastern part of the country, starting this month, to lay plans for the Third of a Century celebration. M. R. (Duke) Clark, Dallas district manager, will do the same for the west.

Start of the company was in July, 1912 when Adolph Zukor brought to America from France a four-reeler, "Queen Elizabeth," starring Sarah Bernhardt, and formed Famous Players to sell it. Four years later this company merged with Jesse Lasky Picture Play Co. to form Famous Players-Lasky. In later years, when Paramount expanded by going into the exhibition field, Paramount-Publix was set up. Following bankruptcy in the early 30's the company took its present title of Paramount Pictures, Inc.

AMERICAN FILMS DEBUNK AXIS PROPAGANDA

Washington, May 31.—American films have scaled every barrier existing between the people of the western hemisphere, Foreign Commerce Weekly, official publication of the Department of Commerce, will say in the issue out this Saturday.

Piece, by Jean Miller and Chauncey Rowe, of OIAA Motion Picture Division, stresses the widespread Axis influence in Latin-America at the outbreak of the war, and tells how the U. S. counteracted this by a factual presentation of the truth to promote unity of purpose and better understanding.

Fundamental objective was to tell the American republics about each other through theatrical and non-theatrical films, a task handled by OIAA.

Features of the work included production of shorts, documentaries, entertainment films and newsreels in the U. S. for screening below the Rio Grande, and the elimination of Axis-sponsored and produced films from the market today, it is explained. About 16,000,000 Latin-Americans see American newsreels released through the pool, and more than 2,000,000 see the same subjects through the OIAA non-theatrical outlets.

De Toth Released From Stromberg

Andre De Toth was released yesterday from his directing contract with Hunt Stromberg Productions. He announced that from now on he is free-lancing and already is negotiating a one-picture deal with Hal Wallis. The De Toth-Stromberg pact was terminated on terms satisfactory to both. The director left for Palm Springs, with his wife, Veronica Lake, to recover from an attack of strep throat.

2 'NEWCOMERS' TO S.F. MEET GIVE NEWSREELERS CHORE

San Francisco, May 31.—The bankroll boys—two sharp midwest Congressmen who have the say-so on putting out much of the expense money for the United Nations Conference—landed here today. One is Karl Stefan, Nebraska Republican, onetime radio news commentator, member of the House appropriations committee on State Department. The other is Louis Charles Rabaut, Michigan Democrat, chairman of the appropriations committee that puts the snafu or the okay on the State Department's spendings.

The two provided the only chore for the newsreelers today. On the basis of impromptu mike work of Rabaut and Stefan the newsreel boys have them tagged as real comers.

Rabaut is much at home here, having inspected foreign service offices in 17 countries of South and Central America, as well as in Scandinavia, and has won honors for distinguished contributions to world trade.

Conference closing is indicated for some time between June 11 and 15. There is a chance that the 49 nations will expand to 50. The new addition would be Denmark, and three members of the Danish delegation were expected here today.

T. V. Soong's big Colonial ballroom party at the St. Francis was so neatly timed that there must have been something psychic about it. Bids came out nearly a week ago, but on the very day of the party came the announcement that Chiang Kai-Shek had resigned as premier in favor of Soong, his brother-in-law.

Soong's importance as a newsreel and radio figure here zoomed higher, since he now is the likely man to sit in on the Big Five sessions and possibly stage conversations with Marshal Stalin in Moscow, possibly even on his way home from San Francisco.

Glenn Miller Night, June 5 at the Paramount theatre in New York, will be aired by the Blue dfrom 10:30 to 11 p. m. EWT, and by the Mutual from 11:30 to 11:55 p. m. EWT.

Dear Miss Parsons:

Your production of "The Enchanted Cottage" was shown here at Long Beach Naval Hospital tonight. It is excellent... story, direction, photography, cast, everything.

But I'm writing to thank you for what your effort has meant to a friend here, who really needed the inspiration and courage to speak about his own misfortune, and consequently seems happy and relieved for the first time since I've known him.

Gratefully,

NY LEGIT OPENING

CONCERT VARIETIES

New York, June 3.—Producer Billy Rose has captioned his summer stop-gap show at the Ziegfeld theatre "Concert Varieties." It's a blend of a Palace two-a-day show and concert, with accent on the ballet and makes for fair divertissement. Lacking is a sock name, which Rose knew when he dickered with Al Jolson to head up the entire show. And, of course, Jolson, with or without the following galaxy, would have made it a good three dollars' worth. Now its best chance is $1.50 or $2, and not the $3.50 top now scaled.

DISTINCT departure in press book routine is to be tried out by Warners on "Conflict," Humphrey Bogart starrer. Instead of usual type of press book offering, company will put on several advance campaigns in varied key city situations, and offer results to exhibitors as a laboratory-tested and proven campaign. These cities will be New York, Memphis, Sioux City, Ia., and Cuyahoga Falls, O. These situations, company feels, cover every type of exhibitor problem. Warners top field exploiteers will move into towns and stage campaign, after which reverse campaign will be put on in situations of similar stature. Two campaigns will be checked and final results tabulated and sent to exhibs throughout country, with complete details of one which proved more successful. Previously, exhibs have complained that campaigns were written by office men who knew none of the problems of the exhib. Company now is out to show exhibs just what can be done with a campaign by proper exploitation, with dollars and cents their talking point.

REPUBLIC isn't hiring any more writers to work on scripts until the strike is over. Writers currently at work on screenplays, previously brought in, will complete their assignments and the few contract scripters will do number of polish jobs, but studio plans to lay off preparation of any more pictures until it sees how the wind blows. Company figures that too many completed screenplays may lead to later loss, due to fact trends or cycles may change before they are used up, or by working too far ahead pictures of other studios may embody same material.

METRO producers already have seen 3000 feet in black and white of Navy footage filmed of aircraft carrier Franklin's heroic fight for survival, for purpose of getting material for studio's proposed flattop picture, with unknown number of feet still to be delivered by Navy. New film will be in 16 mm. Kodachrome, and studio heads expect several thousand feet at least of this thrilling exposure, filmed by careramen on other craft near ill-fated carrier.

to the assistance of the writers when they were attacked by the Motion Picture Alliance, but that the writers now didn't have the nerve to return that assistance.

James Skelton, business representative of Studio Carpenters Local 946, reported that men out of work as of March 12 would receive unemployment insurance. He also reported that two representatives had been sent to Kanab, Utah, to head off a 20th-Fox location company. He stated that the strikers intended to camp on every location even if representatives had to be sent to Alaska.

D. T. Wayne, business representative of the machinists, said he had been advised that the IATSE had been trying to recruit machinists from the CIO. He said an agent of an aircraft local had been approached for toolers, but when he was advised the studios were a struck job he announced his men would be called out that night.

Speakers revealed that some strikers had returned to work at Metro, but Skelton and other leaders declared they would never be permitted to again work on union jobs. Sorrell told the audience he was writing the Screen Actors Guild tomorrow that it would be given a week in which to decide to observe the picket lines.

TEN LITTLE INDIANS

First-nighters at the Biltmore lapped up "Ten Little Indians" last night because it was a highly theatrical blood-and-thunder melodrama. Written, directed, produced and acted on a ten-twent-thirt scale, "Indians" undoubtedly owes its success to the fact that psychological murder mystery is a drug on the market. However, the show is contrived, written in cliches and hammed up heavily by stock players. Robert Warwick is the possible exception to this and even he succumbs at times to the grand style of the Francis X. Bushman period. "Indians" will sell well despite the fact it and the characters are wooden.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

General De Gaulle's charge that the British have incited the Syrian population to stand up against the French in the Near East is interesting. The French claim to have special evidence against the British in this connection. They may well have, but the evidence has not been made public and therefore is open to question. The French are on the spot and should be intelligent enough to know it. All the more reason then for them to come clean with any evidence they may have which would justify their stand. They have not done so, and that fact weakened the French charge against the British. The British have recently encouraged Arab unity. In May, 1941, Mr. Eden said publicly that the British Government would support the creation of such unity, and two years later he said the same thing, but added that the initiative would have to come from the Arabs themselves. The Arabs then swung into action and early this year in Cairo arranged for an Arab league. In offering this encouragement to the Arab states the British are not blind to the fact that it is the sort of public relations job that may pay dividends. But if the French see in it connivance at Arab agitation, then let them make the most of it, but they will have to come into the open to do so.

PREVIEWED at General Service Studios, Hollywood, June 1, 1945. Running time: 96 MINS.

"The Great John L." provides a generous measure of entertainment in a nostalgic revival of what might be called the "Corn Age"—that period of paradoxically mixed naive sentimentality and gay sophistication from the late 80's to the late 90's. The picture is a more faithful and accurate reproduction of the times than most that have been screened. It is surprisingly successful in getting high dramatic effect out of a script that follows pretty closely the career of the famous John L. Sullivan.

Some of the young members of the audiences may greet the show with the epithet "corny." But they'll get their laughs and weeps out of it just the same. They'll be laying their admission money down at the box office along with the remaining old-timers (if any) who repeat the line that was once the gag-boast of the nation: "I shook the hand that shook the hand of John L. Sullivan."

Production by Frank Mastroly and James Edward Grant is on the theatrical and stagy side, but that is due largely to the fact it portrays a sporting world that was plenty stagy and theatrical in its daily work and play.

Director Frank Tuttle has done a good job of keeping cast and action in the elusive mood and atmosphere of the gaslight and hansom cab era. And James Edward Grant's screenplay is successful in keeping up the suspense and interest in a story that is a string of episodes rather than tightly plotted drama.

The fight scenes, including the historic battle with "Gentleman Jim" Corbett in which Sullivan lost the title to the former San Francisco bank clerk, are held to brief footage and, perhaps for that reason, are packed with thrills.

The story carries the "Boston strong boy" through his career to the championship, and unhappy romance, his failure to defeat Charley Mitchell in England and final loss of the championship to Corbett. Also, the champ's numerous losing bouts with Demon Rum and his eventual victory over him are strongly stressed.

Greg McClure is a slightly idealized John L., but has the face, muscular development and acting to get the femmes in the audience gasping a bit. Linda Darnell as the girl who married him and later left him puts plenty of romance and glamor into her performance. Barbara Britton is good as the girl who turns him down at first and marries him at the end.

LEGIT OPENING

THE WIND IS NINETY

Boston, June 3.—Based on just about as delicate a theme as could be produced in the theatre today—the return to his family of the spirit of a soldier killed in action—this Ralph Nelson play has plenty of heart-throbs and would be accepted beyond doubt a year after V-E Day. The play, which opened at the Colonial theatre here, is well written, well acted and highly significant.

As it is, however, most of the audience was in tears over the poignant theme, although most stayed through to the end and gave it an ovation.

Story starts with a typical American family wondering about a boy in the Air Force overseas. On the lawn of a fine set, depicting an old suburban home, Dan Ritchie, played masterfully by Wendell Corey, appears. He is accompanied by an unknown soldier, victim of the last war, played by Kirk Douglas. Both are dead, with the older veteran guiding the other back for a last glimpse of his loved ones.

A telegram arrives and, despite the efforts of Dan, is delivered to his wife, Jean (Frances Reid), and his parents, Doc Ritchie (Bert Lytell) and Nana (Blanche Yurka). Dan's two children, Joan (Joyce Van Patten) and Chris (Donald Devlin) break down with their elders.

As Dan tries to comfort them, but fails to reach them, a series of tableaux re-enacts the family's memories of the past. He is seen as a boy, a youth, a young man wooing Jean, and as a second lieutenant, full of ideals, going off to war. Denouement comes when Dan discovers he can play on these memories, comforting loved ones with the thought that his spirit lives on.

With lesser direction than that given by co-producer Albert de Courville and lesser action, this play would become makish and maudlin. As it is, through some mild comedy lines tied up with the futility of war and valient efforts of the principals, it holds up well.

Only serious flaw is the timeliness of such a piece in a period when so many Americans remember the million dead and the thousands about to die. Moral that memories of the departed fill the void does not quite suffice.

adequate but not socko. Imogene Coca is good. These three are from niteries which also spawned boogie-woogie pianists Albert Ammons and Peter Johnson, teamed with crack drummer Sidney Catlett.

Katherine Dunham toplines and, with her dusky troupe of ballet dancers, she's the show's outstander. Rosario and Antonio do their characteristic Spanish terps authoritatively.

Salicis Puppets are a crack act, Jerome Robbins and company shine in a new ballet by Morton Gould (with Dunham, that's two ballet troupes), and Nestor Chayres, Mexican tenor, chirps.

Deems Taylor is no Berle, Fay or Holtz as an emcee, being as polite as the rest of the show, whereas a socko conferencier would have buoyed everything.

HOLLYWOOD got the ribbing of its life when Sheig Hafidh Nl-Kadi, secretary of Chamber of Commerce of Bagdad and in Arabian delegation to San Francisco Conference, visited couple of sets at Metro. Arrayed in his colorful attire, down to jeweled dagger, he tried to live up to what Hollywood imagined a sheik would really be like, and on set of "A Letter for Evie" told Lynn Whitney he had 37 wives, after nearly prostrating her by telling her what it meant in his country when a woman touched a man's robes. By time he got around to meeting June Allyson, on "For Better, For Worse" set, he had 98 wives in his harem. Sheik was a huge success, with him enjoying his kidding as much as those he ribbed. . . . From what they tell us now, the United Nations Conference on International Organization, in San Francisco, which had a deadline for windup on June 12, is likely to run the balance of this month. So don't figure on President Harry Truman getting out this way until the last week of the month.

It crops out early in all of them, apparently—Jacqueline and Judith Moore, the identical twins playing in Republic's "Love, Honor and Obey," young as they are, already are bragging to each other—"I did it with only one retake and you needed three."

IF this is what it sounds like we can hardly wait—Dorothy Lamour has hooked up with Drew Tetrick, fashion designer for Mutual's "Pardon My Past," and Designer Edith Head to merchandise "Dorothy Lamour Sarong Fashions." Press agents promise that "clothes will run gamut of feminine wardrobe, all modeled along sarong lines." . . . 20th-Fox actress, Majorie Holliday, will wed Michael St. Angel, RKO contract player, this afternoon. Due back at their respective studios tomorrow morning, there will be no honeymoon for the present. . . . Dick Erdman celebrated his 20th birthday on the set of "Janie Gets Married." . . . Mary Treen was notified by the War Department that her husband, Pfc. Herbert Pearson, has rejoined our forces after being freed from German imprisonment. . . . Gene Krupa fans can now get a paper covered book with his life story and 62 pictures of the drummer for 25 cents if they're interested.

Like a lot of other guys, Arthur Walsh can't seem to get out of uniform. He finished a role in "They Were Expendable" last week and was assigned to a comedy role in "A Letter for Evie" by Metro. This will be his seventh role in uniform.

THREE G. I.'s from Los Angeles have just found out how the picture they were seeing in Italy more than eight months ago ends. Master Sgt. Merle G. Harding, 1st Sgt. Hill C. Higdon, and Corp. John T. Recently discharged under the point system, they got in touch with Bogart who fixed up a special showing at the studio.

KATE SMITH BLOWUP HINTED IN SHOW SHOPPING BY GF

General Foods is reported shopping around for two half-hour shows, which is taken in the trade to mean that the blow-up finally has come in the Kate Smith-GF setto, long simmering since the singer was moved out of her Friday night spot in competition with Jack Benny. The blame is being bandied back and forth, with Ted Collins, owner of the Smith package, pinning the role of heavy on the food packers and their radio masterminds.

Motive behind the K. Smith move has been long speculated, with GF forced to issue a statement contradicting reports that it was prompted in a spirit of vindictiveness resulting from Benny's defection from GF and shift to American Tobacco in the time "gifted" by NBC to the comedian. Collins asserted has charged that GF practically sabotaged the Smith show by spotting it opposite Benny, bringing the rejoinder that Smith wilted in the face of competition. This exchange of charges is said to have widened the earlier breach and brought about an almost complete rupture of relations. Believed in the trade that there can be only one solution to the controversy —a settlement of the contract.

Latest Hooperating shows Smith trailing Benny badly and off the pace of her other competitors. Benny is clocked at 15.7, Drew Pearson 7.5, Fitch Bandwagon 9.8, Quiz Kids 8.1 and K. Smith 6.3. Collins is said to have served notice on GF he would not go through another season opposite Benny, the GF equally determined to hold the CBS hour on Sunday. There was some talk that the Smith period would be shortened to half hour, taking the 4:30 to 5 slot and thereby avoiding the Benny competish. Collins, however, is said to be holding out for an hour show in another time bracket. The bad feeling between Collins and GF execs is said to have reached such a pass that a complete severance of relations would not be surprising to the trade's inner circle.

Paul Brines Named Ass't Mgr. of WGN

Chicago, June 3.—In addition to handling publicity and promotion for station WGN, Paul C. Brines has has been named assistant station manager under Frank P. Schreiber. Brines, who joined WGN in January of this year as successor to Dale O'Brien, now with Encyclopedia Britannica, was public relations director of George S. May Co., Chicago, for four years, and previous to that was radio trade paper reporter.

Haymes, Helen Forrest Going To NY Roxy

Dick Haymes and Helen Forrest leave for the East after June 26 broadcast for two weeks of personals at the Roxy and three broadcasts from New York. While they're touring hospitals this summer, Gordon Jenkins, with an orchestra of 31 and 20 mixed voices, will fill the hiatus period for Auto-Lite.

Hal Wallis Emcee

Hal Wallis gets his chance at emceeing Lux Radio Theatre this evening, which dramatizes "Intermezzo" as co-starring vehicle for Ingrid Bergman and Joseph Cotten.

By JACK HELLMAN

At the risk of having our throat jumped down with cries of, "We're being pillar-ied," this two-fingered Underwood athlete will proceed with the business of probing a tender spot. It has to do with radio writers and whether we're gilding the Guild or peeling the varnish is of small consequence. There are abuses to be cleaned up and knitting attended to, and if that falls into the lap of the Radio Writers Guild its work is cut out and the pattern laid. It just so happened that in the week's wash there were numerous pieces of soiled linens with the writers laundry mark. Let's take them singly. A big network production exec wants to know what's wrong with the Guild, that he wanted to hire a few writers but couldn't find out who was available, who was in town or out, and when he pressed the matter was told rather testily, "we're not agents." That's what the man said, Sam, so climb down off'n us. Then came le affaire Bracken, which some of the tradesmen construe as a sad commentary on the writer situash when a show has to quit cold because of lack of journeymen scripters. To complete the cycle of beefs there was the suit filed by writers to collect alleged back pay and another coming up. Those things should never reach the courts, say the critics, when the device of arbitration can accomplish the same and without the messy details. That would have been enough for one week even if a scribe hadn't shouted into our open doorway, "when are we going to get writer credit on the air?" For a young organization we must add, in all fairness, Radio Writers Guild has done a commendable job and there's nothing so radically wrong that can't be fixed up with a little bailing wire and some calling cards.

This paragraph might be tagged, "come home, all is forgiven," but mebbe it's best to treat it impersonal, the guy probably will be twitted enough. It concerns the sale of Ilka Chase to Berkshire Knitting Mills by Joe Rines, an independent agent, for a weekly sesh on the Don Lee-Mutual network. The rub, and what makes it a trade rib, is that Miss Chase's husband is Bill Murray, whose job it is to sell clients of the William Morris agency for radio. Miss Chase IS on the Morris list but the firm will collect only 5 per cent of her weekly stipend, the other five going to Rines on the split-commission arrangement.

STATION BREAKS . . . The story goes that NBC would like to have "Life of Riley" on the net and let Fitch know that it would be happy indeed if a change were made. It was brushed off like so much dandruff; not that they don't like the show but they resented the dictation. . . . Blue net's "Blind Date" moves here June 18 for five broadcasts. . . . Treasury department liked Danny Thomas' War Bond song on last Sunday's broadcast so well they wired for a copy. It was written by Jerry Seelen and Carmen Dragon. . . . Lum and Abner air from 8:15 to 8:30 beginning July 5. . . . Final quarter hour of Don McNeill's "Breakfast Club" will be cliented by Philco starting in September. . . . Mary McLain resigned as secretary to Nate Tufts at Ruthrauff & Ryan for housewifely duties as Mrs. Bob Ballin. . . . Fred Ibbett, one-time producer of "Hollywood Hotel," back in town to set up his own radio biz. He did his second war hitch as a flyer and is on retirement from Royal Canadian Air Force, having served as radar specialist.

Those who can smell a trend in a single whiff might make something out of U. S. Steel's buy of a full hour spread on the Blue network for Theatre Guild dramatics. Is there enough there to go on to forsee a second honeymoon for hour shows? Of the long hauls now on the nets only Lux Radio Theatre has eked out exceptional success. What happens to Kate Smith next season is anyone's guess and there has been some tall guessing. Theatre Guild dramatics will be done with the casts, where possible, of the original Broadway stagings, but will not be confined to Guild productions. Series gets away Sept. 9 and will be heard locally from 7 to 8 p. m. on KECA. That slots it opposite the two Phils-Baker and Spitalny—so the rating potential is not too encouraging. Production will be handled by Batten, Barton, Durstine and Osborn.

DICK POWELL GETS SPOT FOR FITCH SUMMER SHOW

Chicago, June 3.—Rumors that L. W. Fitch Co. will replace its "Bandwagon" with "Life of Riley" in the fall were spiked by E. G. Naeckel, in charge of account in L. W. Ramsey office, Davenport, Ia., who announced Fitch has bypassed "Riley." Meantime band series will be replaced during the summer by weekly mystery show starring Dick Powell, as previously announced, teeing off either June 17 or 24.

Fitch move knocks all the wild guesses making the rounds of the trade into a cocked hat, of course, and also winds up one of the most potent attempts to swing a sale that's come to light this season.

When it became known "Riley" was available, having been dropped from the Blue by American Meat Institute, Niles Trammell, NBC boss, threw everything in the book at Fitch in an effort to bring show to NBC as a replacement for band series. Reed White, radio director of William Morris agency, who owns the package, came to Chicago for several days to be close to Fitch and to Ramsey Co., in case anything developed.

Asking price of "Riley" is $8,500, with options calling for $1,000 yearly increases. AMI was paying $6,750, but new contract would have been set at $8,500 had organization continued sponsoring it starting in the fall.

Pay-Shy Charged By Andrews Scripters

Suit to recover asserted back pay of $5,400 was instituted in Superior Court by Alexander Singer and Robert Phillips against the Andrews Sisters. They charge that in their employment as writers for the trio's radio show they were to be paid a total salary of $11,500 for 16 weeks but received only $6,150.

Canteen Call

Call for enlargement of quarters and the recruiting of new volunteer workers for Hollywood Guild Canteen was issued yesterday by Anne Lehr, Canteen president. Heavy rush of troops to the South Pacific has caused taxing of present facilities and the Canteen needs more space and workers.

Those expected to go from Hollywood include Eddie Mannix, Jack L. Warner, Cliff Work, Harry Cohn, Sidney Buchman, Charles Koerner and Sol Lesser. Latter also will make arrangements for the production of "Paris Canteen."

How many Bette Davises?

For millions of movie-goers, there are as many different Bette Davises as there are Bette Davis-starring pictures!

That's part of Miss Davis' greatness: the ability to make each character she plays stand by itself, a distinct and memorable triumph of screen acting.

And since coming to Warner Bros., Bette has starred in nearly fifty pictures, won two Academy Awards, and been universally acclaimed The Screen's First Lady!

In our newest production, "THE CORN IS GREEN", you'll see Bette Davis in one of the finest of her many fine achievements... as a woman so splendidly stubborn that she makes a daring dream come true.

You'll see, too, how Warner Bros. so brilliantly combines "good picture-making with good citizenship." For "THE CORN IS GREEN" is not only wonderfully entertaining... it also makes a very pertinent point about the world we live in.

Be sure to see it when it comes your way!

HOLLYWOOD GROUP SET TO STEM NEW CURFEW BILL

tendered resignations to the Southern California Tavern Owners Association, charging that Ray Adams, executive secretary of the Tavern Owners Association, was supporting the bill. In a letter sent to the Association, bonifaces stated "Mr. Adams has broken faith; further, we are confident that he did not represent the views of the licensees in this state."

The letter was signed by Joe Bart, Frank Bruni, Billy Berg, H. R. Moubis, Earl Carroll, Billy Gray-Max Gold, Earl Volmer, H. D. Hover, Charlie Foy, George Goldie, Charles Morrison and Albert Vilidy.

At the meeting, Max Sisenwein was instructed by Hollywood club owners to attend the meeting of the downtown Association held Friday. At this second meeting contact was made by phone with Ray Adams in New York. Adams repudiated the statement attributed to him that he was in support of the bill. He further issued a statement that he would do all he could legally to oppose its passage.

Adams' action was taken as a signal by the downtowners not to withdraw from the Association as yet. However, they are sending Sisenwein to represent them in Sacramento Tuesday. Besides Carroll, latter's attorneys, Judge Leonard Wilson and Sam Wolf, will make the trip north. It is also expected several other bonifaces will go to the state capital for the hearing.

Radio Network Plugs

Top plug tunes of the week, as logged over the major networks, NBC, CBS, Blue and Mutual, are being LISTED ALPHABETICALLY, not numerically, under a new accord between the music publishers and song pluggers union, as a means to curb the payola evil. Thus, it is figured, the normal competitive methods, sans artificial stimulation to get on top will tend to eliminate some of the petty bribery, etc

SCREEN PUBLICISTS' DEMANDS NIXED BY WLB PANEL

Virtually all important contract demands of Screen Publicists Guild have been nixed by the War Labor Board panel which heard case after flacks were unable to agree with the major producers. Board denied the Guild's demand for classification of Seniors, and ruled WLB had jurisdiction over all increases except on over-scale people who come under the Treasury Department jurisdiction.

WLB vetoed SPG's demand for a 40-hour week, but reduced current minimum of 54 to 48 hours. Request for overtime after 6 p.m. and to file grievances and arbitrate merit increases also were tossed out. Minimum calls for Juniors and Seniors was fixed at six hours, and four hours for apprentices. Minimum for Seniors was fixed at $120.64 weekly, which producers had offered.

The WLB set four brackets for automatic increases for Juniors. The Guild had requested three and producers had suggested five. Junior brackets call for minimums of $65, $73.32, $81.64 and $89.96. Minimum for apprentices is $40 for 40-hour week.

Hours on distant location were reduced from 84 to 75 and minimum fixed at 120% of studio scale, as offered by producers. Existing practices continue as to sick leave, with dismissal pay approved unless flack is discharged for cause. Currently producers have choice between dismissal pay and notice.

Other SPG demands turned down by the WLB include award of pay to overscale publicists, holiday demands, arbitration of discharges, severance pay when discharged for cause or resignation, dismissal pay in case of death, request union be notified in advance on discharges, request for sub-contract clause, bonus for limited term assignment.

Guild had sought to set up new classification of Seniors in order to give union control of overscale flacks.

After grossing $630,000 in its 39-day stay here at the Pan-Pacific Auditorium, "Ice-Capades" closed last night. Gross exceeded last year's mark by $100,000 and played the same number of days, although giving two less performances this time. Show came in with a $107,000 advance April 26.

Troupe will remain here through July 6, rehearsing the new show, which will bow in Seattle July 11. Company then goes to Portland July 24 and plays through Aug. 12. After closing in Portland, troupe will vacation for four weeks, resuming rehearsals in Pittsburgh Sept. 12 for one week and opening in Cleveland Sept. 19. From there the tour extends along the eastern seaboard and into Canada, skirting New York because of lack of time.

Show will trek out of Washington, heading west, Feb. 17, and will swing through the middle west and south, finaling in Los Angeles from April 25 through June 2, 1946.

Prior to leaving here "Ice-Capades of 1946" will be presented for one performance to wounded GI's on July 1.

At a meeting of the Arena Managers Association in New York Aug. 16, John Harris, prexy of the Association and also of the "Ice-Capades" will bring his recommendations for the replacement of George Tyson, general manager of the Association, who recently resigned. Tyson has continued on in his post and will leave when Harris returns. Former is leaving to go with the Skating Vanities, roller-skating show, as general manager.

10,000 THEATRES BACKING FREE MOVIE DAY JUNE 6

New York, June 3.—A record number of more than 10,000 theatres are expected to participate in national Free Movie Day June 6, according to indications in a supplementary report by Samuel Pinanski, national chairman. Event is expected to result in largest single day's sale of bonds since the inception of War Loan drives.

Barrage of Free Movie Day advertising and publicity will blanket the country Monday and Tuesday. Newspapers, radio, lobby and outside displays, screen trailers and other media will be used to impress the public that by buying bonds on June 6 they can not only see a show without charge but help signalize the anniversary of D-Day, the start of the greatest invasion in military history.

In several states attention is being focused on Free Movie Day by special celebrations. In Wisconsin "Ernie Pyle Day" has been proclaimed by special act of Legislature, and District of Columbia theatres also will honor the memory of "the best friend the GI's had." In the southern California exchange area Free Movie Day will be known as "On To Tokyo Day" in 650 theatres and is expected to result in sale of more than $1,000,000 in "E" bonds.

BOGEAUS FORMS TOP PERSONALITY FILM UNIT

Papers were drawn up over weekend for new producing organization to be headed by Benedict Bogeaus, Lewis Milestone, Paulette Goddard, Burgess Meredith and Jean Renoir, with articles of incorporation to be filed in Sacramento later this week.

This augments deal between Bogeaus, Miss Goddard, Meredith and Renoir, entered into last week, for Bogeaus' production of "Diary of a Chambermaid." "Diary" will be first picture to go under new banner, with actress starred, Meredith co-producing with Bogeaus as well as featured in film, and Renoir directing.

Both Milestone and Miss Goddard have other studio commitments, director with 20th-Fox and actress with Paramount, but they plan to associate themselves exclusively with new company as soon as their contracts are washed up.

New deal was set in Palm Springs, where five principals have been for last few days. Bogeaus declared yesterday that new company, tag yet to be settled, will announce title of second picture shortly. "Diary" is slated to roll middle or latter part of June.

IA INJUNCTION SUIT HEARING STARTING

Question of how far a parent international union may go in exercising control over its chartered locals will be at stake in Superior court hearing starting today, in injunction suit against the IATSE. A group of 21 members of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44 secured a temporary order restraining the international from interfering with the autonomy of the local and now are seeking to have the order made permanent.

Control of local was seized by the international after the membership voted to confine work of its members to own jurisdiction. Four members were ordered to trial by the international, charged with "acting against the best interests of the IATSE." International also postponed election of officers and directed no membership meeting be held.

Temporary restraining order halted trial of four members and gave the membership the right to assemble pending final adjudication of the controversy.

OWI COIN SLASH TO HIT FILM, RADIO FARE

only $35,000,000. OIAA has been recommended for $14,000,000. It asked for $15,880,000, and is spending $17,693,000 in current year.

One unit which has received a wallop is Domestic OWI Film Rereau which works with WAC. Taylor Mills, bureau chief, asked $44,208 and was slashed to ceiling of $36,840. While other units in domestic branch may juggle their funds between themselves, the film bureau is prohibited from receiving any more than ceiling specified.

In its report on the bill, finance committee included a significant statement that Congress is coming awake to belief that this country will have to maintain a strong postwar information service abroad. This is something in which films and radio will undoubtedly play a part.

Committee also disclosed testimony given by officials of the two agencies. Francis Alstock, director of Motion Picture Division of OIAA, said that as a result of work of Motion Picture Society for the Americas, motion picture industry had been encouraged to spend well over $100,000,000 on films suitable for Latin-American distribution, which in turn is increasing the attendance in the other Americas.

"It has increased already from 13,000,000 people monthly, at the time our activities began, up to around 25,000,000 people," Alstock testified. He also declared that in fiscal year beginning July 1, OIAA will turn out 332 reels as against 440 being completed in current fiscal year. Next fiscal year schedule includes 52 newsreels, 200 adaptations and 45 original productions, plus carry-over of 35 reels uncompleted in current 12-month period.

Testimony also brought out that OWI and OIAA together are paying total of $2,660,238 annually for use and operation of shortwave transmitter facilities. For next year, 36 transmitters will be in operation, OWI paying two-thirds of total with OIAA carrying remainder, and they split time on stations.

Elmer Davis, OWI director, told a powerful new medium-wave station located on Saipan now is blanketing Japan with propaganda. He said OWI plans a propaganda and information service in Europe for a considerable period, and transmitting will be done in American-controlled areas of Germany. OWI head also stated the Germans owned 15,812,000 radio receivers in 1942, but present number in working order is unknown. Japan is estimated to have had about 5,500,000 radio receivers when war began; again present number is not known.

OWI, which had 109 people in its Overseas Motion Picture Bureau, asked 65 for coming year. This may have to be shaved a little because of the budget slash.

PASCAL, SOSKIN TOO EXPENSIVE FOR RANK'S TASTE

London, June 3. — The sudden resignation of Gabriel Pascal and Paul Soskin, from Independent Producers Limited, an affiliate of the Rank film enterprises, was no surprise to the film trade here. Pascal's latest production effort, "Caesar and Cleopatra," will cost $4,000,000 when completed, while Soskin has made no picture for the company since "Dear Octopus" two years ago.

Obviously the boys were a little too expensive for Rank's production tastes.

Cagney Starrer Grosses $72,000 in Four Weeks

San Francisco, June 3.—"Blood on the Sun," the Bill Cagney production starring James Cagney, is in its fifth week at the United Artists theatre, and during its first four weeks garnered a gross of close to $72,000. Also during that period it was above the regular percentage take of most of the attractions playing the house and brought the producer 50 per cent of the net. On strength of this biz picture was booked into the Capitol, New York, where it opens June 28. James Cagney will be in Manhattan doing several radio shows prior to the picture opening.

New York, June 3.—Paramount has taken a new stride in its move toward a strong financial position by authorizing immediate prepayment of money necessary to effect the present retirement of $1,250,000 of outstanding 3% debentures, due from 1952 to 1958. Prepayment is in anticipation of future sinking fund obligations.

Based on 1944 earnings, sinking fund paid May 15 this year was $475,000. It is estimated this prepayment will cover sinking fund obligations payable in 1946 and part of the 1948 obligation.

COURT UPHOLDS SEIZURE IATSE LOCAL BY WALSH

Prexy Richard Walsh and the IATSE international scored a sweeping victory in Superior court yesterday when Judge Emmet Wilson dissolved the temporary order restraining the international officers from interfering with autonomy of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44. Waving aside any argument by Michael Luddy, IA counsel, as unnecessary, Judge Wilson held that the emergency under which the international seized control of the union was properly executed and that Walsh had complied with all terms of the constitution.

Judge Wilson held that Walsh had full authority to issue the takeover order, that members of Local 44 had passed an order in disobedience of the international, and that WINDUP of "The Harvey Girls" and "For Better, For Worse" at Metro and "Tomorrow Is Forever" at International, over weekend, all behind schedule, emphasizes how many recent pictures have been forced to call off shooting for 10 days or more due to illness. John Hodiak's mumps held up "Girls" for six days, with Robert Walker's hand injury causing stoppage of filming "Better" three days. "Tomorrow" fared even worse, due to Claudette Colbert's flu attack, picture halting twice for total of seven days for actress and one day because of Orson Welles. Deanna Durbin's laryngitis, followed by flu, caused Universal to lose nine days on "Lady On a Train," completed week ago. Warners lost considerable time because of various players, including director Robert Florey, taking time out for sickness, in its "Danger Signal" troupe, and not only Bette Davis but other members of acst of "A Stolen Life" held up shooting on this picture for same reason. Com. John Ford, directing Metro's "They Were Expendable," fell off camera stand and fractured his leg three weeks ago, but Robert Montgomery immediately took over and company lost no time. Same happened when Lester White, cameraman on same studio's "A Letter For Evie," suffered heart attack on set first day of shooting, with Charles Rosher immediately taking over cameras without so much as an hour's loss of shooting time.

FILM producers, especially the indies, are facing a stage shortage. Only thing that saves the situation from being acute right at the moment is the skimpy allotment of raw film and such curtailment of production as may be due to the strike. At the California Studios they are turning down would-be renters of both office and stage facilities. David O. Selznick is reported paying penalties to hold stage space there so that it will be available when he resumes shooting on "Duel In the Sun," halted by the strike. And recent deal for offices by Paramount sews up most of the office space at the studio. Two companies are shooting at General Service and Andrew Stone Productions is held up on the shooting of "Petticoat Lane" not only by lack of film but because of previous commitments of General Studio stage space. Major studios are doing all right currently but probably would find themselves cramped by a full production schedule. For them, postwar studio expansion is already indicated as a necessity.

HAROLD LLOYD CORP. will shortly file a new suit against Universal to replace the one dismissed without prejudice last week. Reason for Lloyd's attorney, Harold Fendler, seeking dismissal was to permit clearing up an error in copyright registration on the old Lloyd film, "Welcome Danger." Latter was erroneously registered to Paramount years ago in Washington although comedian held copyright on it. In the dismissed suit, Lloyd charges Universal infringed on "Welcome Danger" in its production of "She Gets Her Man." Two other actions brought for comic by Fendler against Universal will proceed to trial as originally filed, plus the new "Danger" action now being prepared.

HUNT STROMBERG is aiming his indie productions straight at femme audiences, and with this for a goal is making certain that films carry high femme interest in titles. His first indie production was "Lady of Burlesque," and while his second, "Guest in the House," didn't specify sex of "guest" in tag, all his exploitation was careful to bring out point she was a woman. Producer now has "Young Widow" before cameras, and next two pictures will be "Dishonored Lady" and "Strange Woman," latter with Hedy Lamarr starred.

Steppin' In Society

(Comedy)

REPUBLIC RELEASE. Associate producer, Joseph Bercholz. Director, Alexander Esway. Screenplay, Bradford Ropes. Based on novel by Marcel Arnac. Photography, Reggie Lanning. Editor, Harry Keller. Musical director, Morton Scott. Art direction, Gano Chittenden. Set decorations, Otto Siegel. Costumes, Adele Palmer.

CAST—Features Edward Everett Horton and Gladys George. Supporting players: Ruth Terry, Robert Livingston, Jack LaRue, Lola Lane, Paul Hurst, Isabel Jewell, Frank Jenks, Harry Barris, Iris Adrian, Tom Herbert.

PREVIEWED in Hollywood, Calif., June 4, 1945. Running time: 70 MINS.

"Steppin' In Society" serves its purpose well as a supporting feature and is in the nature of a sleeper comedy. Title is a misnomer and there are a few lapses where action drags, but overall scheme is trimly calculated to catch and retain popular interest. Edward Everett Horton turns in a sock performance as a judge who decides to step out and see how the other half lives, in so doing becoming properly involved in a manner which provides first-class entertainment.

Horton has benefit of a hand-picked supporting cast, Gladys George sharing featured billing with him as his wife. Ruth Terry, Jack LaRue, Paul Hurst, Lola Lane and Robert Livingston score as members of a gang which Horton is chosen to chieftain, when, in looking through his briefcase, they find plan for robbing a bank. After gander at this they think he's high-powered operative, not realizing plan is one which Horton, as judge, was going to study to determine outcome of a case already tried before him. Isabel Jewell also is in for a good dramatic sequence.

Premise carries likely possibilities which materialize both in script by Bradford Ropes, in his adaptation of Marcel Arnac's novel, and in Alexander Esway's direction. Picture is a creditable piece of producership for Joseph Bercholz. Musical direction by Morton Scott likewise rates hand, with other technical departments spelling class throughout.

$250,000 GROSS SIGHTED DURING CURRENT WEEK

Total of $250,000 is sighted for Los Angeles first-run theatres on the current week, despite holdovers in 13 of the 20 situations. Strongest of the new bills in town is "Pillow To Post" at Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern, which has estimated $58,000 in sight due to Memorial Day opening. Republic's "Flame of the Barbary Coast" and "Earl Carroll's Vanities" at the Guild, United Artists and Wilshire, is above average at possible $31,000.

Third week of "Diamond Horseshoe" and "Escape In the Fog" at the Chinese, Loew's State and Uptown has estimated $29,500 coming up, plus an additional $8,000 at the Carthay Circle, where it opened Memorial Day. "Enchanted Cottage" at the Hillstreet and Pantages is aiming for estimated $33,000 on its second week after clocking $45,600 the first frame. Second stanza of "The Affairs of Susan" at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramounts also is going for $33,000.

"The Clock" closed last night at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz theatres with estimated $25,000, and "Valley of Decision" opens in the trio of de luxers today. "The Clock," after a good but not hefty opening week, slowed down for the remainder of its run and finished with approximately $114,625 for the three weeks, which is under the Metro average in the day-daters.

"The Body Snatchers" and "The Brighton Strangler" close four-week stay at the Hawaii tomorrow night, making way for "The Unseen." Latter comes in on a single-bill policy, although it may be double-billed after the initial seven days. Wally Brown and Alan Carney, heading the stage show at the Orpheum, closed their week last night with estimated $24,500 in the box office. Opening today are Larry Stevens, the Pied Pipers, Diosa Costello and Morey Amsterdam on the stage and "The Scarlet Clue" on the screen.

A & C NYing

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, having completed work in "Abbott and Costello In Hollywood" for Metro, train east this week for a personal appearance tour, highlighted by a three-week engagement at the NY Roxy starting July 3. Proceeds of the tour go toward the national youth foundation sponsored by the two comics.

Play Review

CARMEN JONES

To take an old war horse like "Carmen" and slip it a hypo might not come under the heading of fair play by the turf authorities. But to do the same to the battered opera seems to be not only ethical but downright profitable. And it turns out to be a capricious filly capable of romping home far ahead of the field.

"Carmen Jones" could have been plenty bad had it not been handled with delicacy and feeling for the original piece. However, Messrs. Billy Rose, Oscar Hammerstein II and Hassard Short have turned out an exquisite chunk of theatre that is a treat for the eye and the ear. Musically it still is George Bizet, but lyrically it is Hammerstein. His book and lyrics, although based on the Merimee yarn and the Bizet score, are more real than anything the Metopera ever put forth. And the same goes for Hassard Short's staging, lighting and color schemes, which are about three furlongs ahead of the general run of productions in these parts.

Muriel Smith sang the title role last night with a warmth and depth that few of the classical singers have ever equaled. Napoleon Reed's Joe was a more understandable protagonist than his paunchier operatic predecessors. And Cindy Lou, the up-country girl, became more than a wishy-washy soprano under the ministrations of Elton J. Warren. The rest of the cast, including Jack Carr and Glenn Bryant, gave "Carmen" a zip with good, earthy humor that alleviated much of the impending doom of the older show.

Civic Light Opera Association's presentation of "Carmen" is in the vein of "Lady In the Dark" and "Song of Norway." It is the high spot of the season, not only for operetta fare, but for anything that may come in the ensuing year. It is a shame the show will play here only three weeks while San Francisco

(CBS News Analyst)

The United Nations Conference in San Francisco is confronted with a critical situation. An issue of principle has been brought to light which seems to divide Russia from the other four big powers. It is recognized that the Security Council, which is to be the Executive Body of the New World Organization, must have powers commensurate with its responsibilities which are great. It is further recognized that for this Executive Body to be effective there must be substantial unanimously among the great powers. The Russians want a veto power that will allow any of the big five to veto not only enforcement action of any kind, but also discussion of any situation which may disturb the peace. The issue or principle here involved transcends the mere matter of Russia's inflexible attitude. It should be patent that acceptance of the Russian position would circumscribe the function of the Security Council. For what good the special powers assigned to the council if it is not to be obligated to discuss freely and thoroughly a situation which might result in the necessity of using those special powers. The big five are trying to find a way out of this critical situation by calm discussion. If they fail there may be a showdown on the floor of the conference.

—By RADIE HARRIS—

The sidewalk traffic in front of the Hotel Pierre the other noon was blocked by a milling mob of autograph fans, much to the annoyance of the hotel guests. As one especially dowager looking frozen puss came out, she wanted to know what was causing all the excitement.

"We're waiting for Ida Lupino," a bobby soxer explained. Suddenly Ida emerged through the revolving doors and the whole flock descended on her en masse.

The dowager raised her lorgnette and exclaimed, "My goodness, she isn't beautiful, is she?"

Whereupon the bobby soxer retorted, "You're a fine one to talk, 'Mrs. Skeffington!' "

Virginia Field also will be featured in the cast, in the role created by Valerie Taylor in the original Leslie Howard-Margalo Gillmore production. . . . Hollywood interest always evinced in Montgomery Clift, has been hypoed more than ever by his current performance in Elsa Shelley's "Foxhole In the Parlor," but Clift still refuses to sign any contract without a clause permitting him to return to the theatre every year—and the salary he is refusing from several majors "ain't no hay!" . . . Constance Cummings, Benn Levy, Adrienne Allen, Eva Moore, her doughter, Jill Esmond and Jill's 8-year-old son, Tarquin Olivier, are among the contingent who sail back this week. For Larry Olivier, the homecoming of his son should be an emotional experience. It will be his first glimpse of him in four years. Incidently, the beautiful home that Jill and Larry once snared on Cheney Walk in Chelsea overlooking the Thames (the former home of Whistler) has disappeared in the blitz.

BLUMENFELD ASKING FOR SELZNICK'S 'SPELLBOUND'

San Francisco, June 4.—Joe Blumenfeld has made formal application for right to play "Spellbound," David O. Selznick picture, at his United Artists theatre here. Application was made to United Artists' local branch office and is move by exhibitor to prevent selling away of the picture to Fox West Coast or any other circuit for its first-run playdate here.

Some months back Blumenfeld lost "I'll Be Seeing You," another Selznick film, to Fox West Coast when Selznick entered into separate deal with the circuit for screening. Sell-away was protested by Blumenfeld, who has rights to UA first-runs at his theatre, but complaint never reached court. Selznick had asserted that "Seeing You" was a Vanguard production, turned out by Dore Schary, and that his distribution deal with United Artists called only for his personal productions.

IATSE SEIZURE BY WALSH UPHELD BY COURT

the plaintiffs had not exhausted all remedies provided for in the union constitution. All applications for relief were denied, leaving the international free to proceed with trial of four members accused of "acting against the best interests of the IATSE."

Attorney Luddy stated in court, however, there was some doubt as to how soon the trial, interrupted by the injunction application, would be resumed. He intimated there was a possibility the trial might not be resumed until the current case is tried on its merits. It is probable, though, that the IA will demur to the charges on the grounds they do not constitute a complaint.

Temporary restraining order tossed out by Judge Wilson prohibited the international from proceeding with the trial, from preventing meetings of the membership and from interfering with autonomy of the local. While temporary order was pending, membership met and nominated officers, but this action probably will be nullified by the IA in view of the court's ruling. International had discontinued rank and file meetings and ordered election of officers postponed.

Attorney Ben Margolis argued for nearly three and a half hours in an effort to show the court the temporary restraining order should be made permanent.

COPS ALERTED AS STUDIO PICKET LINES INCREASED

Extra police and sheriff's details were alerated for studio duty yesterday as striking technicians increased their picket lines and received orders to "cut out the politeness and get tough." At the same time it was reported international union presidents in the building trades were calling a meeting in Washington, presumably with the idea of demanding William Green, prexy of the American Federation of Labor, rescind his announcement that current walkout is an unauthorized strike.

Building trades were reported cracking down locally, with the result that IATSE tops are said to have pulled their men off a construction job at one major studio. Carpenters have asked mill men and others not to handle supplies for studio and it is understood building trades tops protested IA men being used to erect a building.

A few fists were tossed in front of Metro yesterday when Sorrell and James Skelton, business representative of the Studio Carpenters Local 846, appeared at the head of a mass picket line following reports that five carpenters planned to return to work. Picket lines began tightening up yesterday after reports some strikers were returning to their jobs.

Prexy Richard Walsh of the IATSE was reported back east, presumably in connection with orders of the AF of L executive council that he cancel charters he had issued for machinists, carpenters and painters. Reports that Roy Brewer, IA international representative, also had returned east could not be verified, although Carl Cooper, IA veepee and head of the downtown stagehands, was reported issuing orders in connection with the IATSE's effort to keep studio production rolling during the walkout.

Antonio D'Elia yesterday was ordered to trial July 6 in Superior court in connection with an alleged assault on a studio worker. D'Elia claims to have been on picket duty at the time of the alleged assault.

MONOGRAM SETS UP NEW SYSTEM OF DISTRIBUTION

New York, June 4. — Monogram's new plan in distribution for its English territory will result in its receiving a larger percentage of the gross receipts.

Monogram net profits for 39 weeks ending March 31, 1945, amounted to $107,840.94, compared to profits of $111,961.45 for same period last year.

Prexy W. Ray Johnston announced that Monogram board of directors had fixed Nov. 14, 1945, as the date for the annual stockholders' meeting and also had nominated the following existing board as the management's choice to be voted on at the annual meeting: W. Ray Johnston, Trem Carr, Steve Broidy, George Burrows, Charles Trampe, Arthur C. Bromberg, William Hurlbut, Howard Stubbins, Herman Rifkin and Paul Porzelt. FAMOUS ARTISTS TO TAKE SELZNICK LIST SOON

Negotiations for takeover of the Selznick agency and its clients by the Famous Artists Corp. group is expected to be completed within a few days. Financial arrangement calls for the Famous corporations to receive 50 per cent of the net proceeds with the equal balance to be distributed among heirs of Myron Selznick. Management of around 100 clients is involved in the transaction as well as the New York and London offices of the Selznick Co.

It is provided in the negotiations that the personnel of Famous Artists complement the Selznick staffs in the administration of the firm's business and representation of its clients. Famous would also place its own reps in the NY and London offices to work with the present Selznick staffs.

Parties to the transaction which would take over operation of the Selznick business include, besides Famous Artists, Charles K. Feldman Corp., Feldman-Blum Corp., Charles K. Feldman, Ralph Blum, Jack Gordean, William Dover, and Minna Wallis. With consummation of the deal, the Selznick building in Beverly Hills would be vacated immediately and either be disposed of by the estate or blue printed for enlargement to accommodate commercial firms.

Previously James Saphier and Tom Fizdale entered into an arrangement for takeover of the Selznick agency, but certain factors were alleged to militate against a successful operation and severance papers were drawn, Saphier and Fizdale withdrawing from the operation.

GOVERNORS ASKED TO BACK WAR BOND FREE MOVIE DAY

New York, June 4.—Governors of all 48 states and mayors of all principal cities of the country are being asked to issue special proclamations setting aside Wednesday, June 6, as a special bond selling day in honor of the motion picture industry and its proposed Free Movie Day. Arrangement for request was made with Samuel Pinanski, industry's national chairman, and the various state exhibitor chairmen throughout the country.

Already many governors and mayors have indicated their assent to the plan. These are the governors of Nebraska, Utah, California, Oklahoma, Virginia, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Missouri, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Vermont, New Hampshire and Maine.

Thus, with the official sponsorship of each state and the mayors of each principal city, the film industry will be accorded the greatest sendoff of Free Movie Day that ever has been done in any campaign. This is the first time such official interest has been shown.

other snazzy canapes add up to fantastic figures. This doesn't include the minor parties and the more or less casual drink buying.

Tonight's big party is being hosted by the local Mexican colony and Latin Americans with the Mexican delegation and its chief, Ezequiel Padilla, as the guests of honor. Party, being staged at Club Lido on North Beach, is unique at the conference in that newsreels will be there. Few, if any shots, have shown the honestly hard working peace planners within reach of a drop of John Barleycorn.

At another dinner tonight T. V. Soong will be honored with Governor Warren and Mayor Lapham slated to show.

Mexican delegation will also meet Governor Warren at Sacramento Wednesday.

Film industry is shooting a 35 milimeter film story of the conference as the special gift of the industry to every chief of every delegation. Picture winds up with special shots of each delegation and voiced in five languages.

Claude Collins, representing the five newsreels from Washington, and editor of the special conference newsreels shown at the United Nations theater here, leaves for Hollywood tonight. He will go on to Washington after a couple of days in the film capital.

Congressman Louis Rabaut, here giving the show a searching once-over, leaves for the east via Los Angeles Wednesday.

The chaps covering the show for press, radio and pictures, have reached the point where they bandy jests about the hot rum toddies the snack bar will serve during the coming Yule holidays and lugubriously express the hope of being out of the trenchers by Christmas.

distribution, has held it up. He now is waiting for Sears to assume active charge of the business, and will then submit his resignation to the company board.

Raftery went into the United Artists post following the resignation of Murray Silverstone, as no person whose name had been submitted was acceptable to the member-owners of the company. Raftery has been handling the United Artists corporate matters for his law firm since the inception of the company, as well as the personal affairs of Mary Pickford.

When drafted for the presidency of the company he felt the job would be temporary, and he again would be able to resume his work in the law office. But with nothing developing, and with Capt. Dennis O'Brien, head of the firm, in semi-retirement, and Arthur Driscoll, the other partner, also wanting to retire from practice, Raftery feels that he shortly must return to head the law firm offices. Both Driscoll and Raftery are nephews of O'Brien, who founded the firm with Moe Malvensky more than 30 years ago. Raftery has been with the office 25 years.

Raftery, recently here, told close confidants he hoped to get consent of the UA owners to get out of the prexyship by September, but that he would handle the corporation's legal matters through his firm's office as heretofore.

Dear Mr. Cagney:

Very many thanks for letting me see your picture, "Blood on the Sun."

It is a very fine picture, most excellent technically and wonderfully well acted.

We enjoyed it exceedingly.

I think it will be very valuable, as it will give our people a better insight into the Japanese character.

Personally I am delighted to see a newspaperman made a hero and not depicted as a punk, as they unfortunately are so often portrayed in the movies.

Naturally the Press Club would be proud of the picture and I trust that all good Americans will see the picture and be duly thrilled by it.

RANK DENIES RUMOR OF PENDING DEAL

New York, June 5.—J. Arthur Rank has denied that he is negotiating a deal with David O. Selznick or Samuel Goldwyn, although U. S. film production interests have in recent months approached the British film man looking toward an affiliation according to Rank's close business associates. Rank and his party arrived here yesterday from Canada.

Selznick, internationally minded, told Coast intimates that one of the main reasons for his current trip east was to talk with Rank. Selznick and Goldwyn both have much in common with Rank. Through the latter, producers could secure financing for extensive production and distribution in Great Britain and elsewhere.

IN Hollywood to observe the modern American technique of motion picture production, Father Palacios, prexy of St. Xavier's College of Bombay (India), yesterday reported that his school has already graduated more than 250 studio technicians for his country's film plants. Result of his survey here, the cleric stated, will be incorporated in new courses in his school. More than 2,000 students from the 20 Bombay High Schools are able to see American made films through Father Palacio's plan of having his college made a second run theatre for a weekly showing of top productions. A nominal admission charge insures an equitable rental for distributors, and the territory is one in which there is no regular second run theatre. The cleric-educator, a visitor at Warner Bros. yesterday, explained that popularity of American-made films in Bombay have been increased because of his current plan.

OH BROTHER

Boston, June 5.—How love reforms burglars is the basis of "Oh Brother," which too often mistakes farce for drama and would fall flat but for Hugh Herbert's jittery gestaures and grimaces. Jacques Duval's uneven opus needs pruning and tightening, particularly in the second and third acts, which fail to maintain the comedy pace of the first. However, movie rights have already been sold (reportedly for $250,000, buyer not yet announced).

Curtain rises to nap being taken by penniless artist, Allen Kilmer, ably played by Don Gibson, in living room of a vacated Daytona mansion. Herbert as Charles Craddock, and his pretty aide, Sue Atkins (Susan Garnett) discover Kilmer while looting the place. Noting the artist's resemblance to a portrait of a child on the wall and knowing that her pal has found papers showing the child has long been missing, Sue persuades Kilmer to pose as the returned scion. Artist falls in love with his "sister," spottily played by Arlene Whelan. Third act finds crooks exposed but the artist's attempt to flee is spoiled by the "sister's" love, and latter's aunt has been smitten by Craddock.

Farce element is too thin to spread over all three acts and consequent reliance upon straight drama to hold the play up is not always credible and often ludicrous. Herbert ought to have more to do, as he's funny enough when active. Susan Garnett is excellent in the first act and then becomes obscure through the fault of author. Eva Condon, Sally Archdeacon, Kendall Bryson, Lyle Bettger, fluttery Catherine Doucet and Forrest Orr acquit themselves well. Movies should put sustaining life into this one. Peter Warren produced the show and Bretaigne Windust handled the direction.

George Brown, Par Ad Chief, Going To NY

Brown, Lee Phelps, Tom Dugan, Carey Harrison, Genevieve Bell, Jimmy Conlin.

TRADESHOWN at studio, June 1, 1945. Running time: 75 MINS.

"Don Juan Quilligan," an off-the-beaten-path comedy, is gusty fare which should meet with hilarious response from average audiences. Packed with Damon Runyon-type characters, picture is a fitting vehicle for the broad comedic talents of William Bendix, Joan Blondell and Phil Silvers, who share star honors, supported by standout cast. The finished product is a credit to those concerned with its making.

Story is about a Hudson river barge captain (Bendix) who loved his mother so deeply that he constantly sees her most cherished qualities in practically every girl he meets. This starry-eyed trait leads to his becoming involved with two gals, one in Brooklyn (Joan Blondell), the other in Utica (Mary Treen), to the extent he finds himself betrothed to both. Before he can do anything about this situation he's married to them simultaneously. He finally worms out of his innocently-bigamous ways at the conclusion of his trial for his "murder" of a twin brother whom his pal (Silvers) fabricated in an effort to get him off the spot.

Situation has been played up in a cleverly devised screenplay by Arthur Kober and Frank Gabrielson, in their adaptation of Herbert Clyde Lewis' original story, and Frank Tuttle caught the spirit of the piece admirably in his direction. Bendix, the well-meaning lad who loves Joan because she has a laugh like his mother, and Mary, because her cooking reminds him of his sainted parent, turns in the best job of his screen career, making Patrick Quilligan, who never permits the English language to interfere with what he wants to say, a lovable mugg.

As Margie Mossrock, Joan Blondell's impersonation is reminiscent of her Aunt Cissie in "A Tree Grows In Brooklyn," endowed with the same charm, and Phil Silvers is afforded his most ambitious opportunity as first mate on Bendix's barge. Mary Treen is excellent, too, as are Veda Ann Borg, Hobart Cavanaugh, Anne Revere and B. S. Pully in briefer roles.

William Le Baron made this novelty offering a class picture in turning it out as his final producer chore for 20th-Fox, and surrounded himself with top technical assistance in all departments.

Edith King Inked

Edith King has been inked for a supporting role in "Calcutta" at Paramount. Broadway character actress was last seen locally in the legit troupe touring with "Othello."

Within These Walls

(Drama)

20TH-FOX RELEASE. Producer, Ben Silvey. Director, Bruce Humberstone. Screenplay, Eugene Ling, Wanda Tuchock. From a story by Coles Trapnell, James B. Fisher. Photography, Glen MacWilliams, Clyde De Vinna. Art direction, Lyle Wheeler, Richard Irvine. Set decorations, Thomas Little, Ernest Lansing. Editor, Harry Reynolds. Costumes, Kay Nelson. Special photographic effects, Fred Sersen. Music, David Buttolph. Musical direction, Emil Newman. Orchestral arrangements, Arthur Morton.

TRADESHOWN at studio, June 1, 1945. Running time: 72 MINS.

"Within These Walls" is just another prison picture. Cast and director try hard to overcome plot hurdles, but static situations relegate film to minor position on double bills and action has little to offer in fresh entertainment.

Thomas Mitchell, a judge who has waged campaign to clear up reeking prison administration, is himself appointed to post of warden, and takes his son and daughter, Edward Ryan and Mary Anderson, with him. Son, inclined to recklessness, proceeds to get into trouble by passing messages outside for some of the prisoners, and is packed off to college, father insisting he complete his education before entering service.

Instead of rejoining his family for Christmas holidays, boy skips out and disappears, later showing up at pen as a convicted criminal. His father refuses to treat him any differently from any other prisoner, but boy redeems himself somewhat in climax when he prevents a prison break and is killed.

Characterizations aren't particularly convincing, due to weak screenplay and stilted dialog. Most arresting performance is turned in by Mark Stevens, a newcomer, in role of prisoner-chauffeur.

Direction by Bruce Humberstone is rugged but is handicapped by script, which also makes Ben Silvey's bow inauspicious. Eugene Ling and Wanda Tuchock wrote screenplay from a story by Coles Trapnell and James B. Fisher. Other technical departments are standard.

Penthouse Rhythm

(Filmusical Comedy)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Associate producer, Frank Gross. Director, Eddie Cline. Story by Min Selvin and Stanley Roberts. Screenplay by Stanley Roberts and Howard Dimsdale. Director of photography, William Sickner. Musical director, Edgar Fairchild. Art direction, John B. Goodman and Harold MacArthur. Sound, Bernard B. Brown. Technician, Robert Pritchard. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman and A. J. Gilmore. Dialog director, Emory Horger. Film editor, Russell Schoengarth. Gowns, Vera West.

CAST—Kirby Grant, Lois Collier, Edward Norris, Maxie Rosenbloom, Eric Blore, Minna Gombell, Edward S. Brophy, Judy Clark, Marion Martin, Donald MacBride, Henry Armetta, Jimmy Dodd, Bobby Worth, Louis DaPron, George Lloyd, Paul Hurst, Harry Barris, Velasco and Lenee.

PREVIEWED at Universal Studios, Universal City, June 5, 1945. Running time: 60 MINS.

"Penthouse Rhythm" is a fair grade of "B" musical with tunes and dance numbers pieced into a light story that isn't original enough to distract attention from the music. Comedy is of the old Keystone cops-and-robbers type, done in white tie and tails, replete with pratfalls, chase and head busting.

Radio following of Kirby Grant and Lois Collier will give their names marquee value and Judy Clark also will provide some box office draw. Both Lois and Judy are easy to look at, do their drama work nicely and make a good job of putting over their song numbers.

Eric Blore and Minna Gombell get laughs out of small bits and share comedy honors with Edward Brophy. Marion Martin turns in a convincing performance as the femme "menace" of the story.

Direction by Eddie Cline, veteran comedy man, is generally successful in pointing the laugh sequences and keeping the show properly paced. Frank Gross has displayed production skill in converting rather commonplace basic materials into fair entertainment.

The five song numbers—three by Jack Brooks and Norman Berens, one by Brooks and Seymour Kramer and one by Inez James and Sidney Miller—won't crowd the hit parade, but have a bit of sparkle and verve to them.

Barbara Britton Role

Barbara Britton has been set to co-star with Robert Lowery in the Pine-Thomas production, "They Made Me a Killer." Film will get under way June 15.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

I write this on the eve of the first anniversary of D-Day. A few hours ago the four power allied control council held its first meeting in the outskirts of battered Berlin. Germany has been stripped of her conquests and cut down to geographical size as of 1937. Whether or not more territory will be taken from her will be determined at the peace settlement. In this connection it is known, for instance, that the Netherlands would like a strip of Northwestern Germany. They will lodge their claim on this basis . . . that the inundation of Dutch soil by Germans has made it unproductive for several years. Without this normal production Holland cannot raise enough to live on, either directly or by selling what she grows for imports she needs. But while final settlement awaits decision of a peace conference, Germany will remain under the strict control of the Allies. Their problem is manifold. They must maintain order, hunt down war criminals and see to it that German war potential is destroyed. This is difficult enough, but not so difficult as the task of starting the Germans successfully on the road of re-education in peaceful and cooperative living. There's the rub.

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, June 5.—Don Henshaw, of the Canadian War Finance Committee, is due here July 9 to pow-wow with Tom Bailly, Hollywood WAC coordinator, who has been in town on the Seventh War Loan. Henshaw is interested in a film for Canada's coming Victory Loan drive. Hollywood talent has consistently supplied Canada with war bond pictures through all of that country's campaigns.

For Canada's first five, Hollywood made trailers featuring name stars. For the Sixth, Warners turned out "The Shining Future," later cut to one reel as "Road To Victory" for our own "Fighting Fifth" Bond drive. Metro made "Tomorrow John Jones," starring Spencer Tracy, as an exclusive for Canada's Seventh. And the success of "All Star Bond Rally," made for Canada's Eighth and now used for our own Seventh, is picture history.

Commander Harold Stassen, one of the Republican hopes for 1948, will get a terrific boost in his Presidential aspirations if Walter Wanger goes through with his reported plans to do the Stassen life story on the screen. Stassen has done so well at UNCIO that Wanger's interest has been aroused in the ex-Minnesota governor.

* * * * * * * * *

Latest wrinkle under consideration by OWI is a one-minute animated cartoon on a current national problem. It would be clipped to newsreels. Idea, which seems slated for approval, would be released through WAC, with Pathescope producing the animations. The government agency interested would foot the bill. Project should jell around July 1.

While it is new for us, it actually is something that the Canadians have done for the last three years. About 18 months ago this column recommended the idea for War Bond drives, but nothing ever came of it.

* * * * * * * * *

Hollywood participation in the Seventh War Loan is being stepped up for the home stretch drive.

Robert Young starts a tour in Dennison, Texas, tomorrow, which will take him to about 15 towns in Texas and Louisiana. This smaller city circuit is a new stunt which Lois Andrews did successfully in Pennsylvania, bringing Hollywood names to places that never saw a film star before.

Ralph Bellamy and Ruth Hussey, now on tour, return to home plate this week. Ditto Anne Baxter, who leaves New York tomorrow for a War Bond appearance in L. A. Eddie Cantor's bond selling expedition wound up in New York today.

Library of Congress now is seeking funds to continue its program of storing outstanding films of each year in the Library. A three-year grant from the Rockefeller Foundation, on which the Library has operated, ended April 30. Wonder whether Hollywood will step in on this one and peel off the necessary greenbacks to keep the ball rolling?

* * * * * * * * *

There will be simultaneous worldwide release, including Latin-America, for "The True Glory," the British-American documentary on D-Day to V-E Day. Date, of course, is July 19, with Columbia distributing in the U. S. . . . Look for a reorganization in the OIAA motion picture division when boss Francis Alstock gets back after the windup of UNCIO. . . . Now that the tour of Nazi atrocity camps by film industry biggies is in the bag, the radio boys started to yell "Me, too." They'll be taken over by the Army after the filmsters have returned.

* * * * * * * * *

Another idea for a picture along the lines of "Mission To Moscow" may come out of a book which Donald Nelson, former WPB chief and later White House trouble-shooter in China, is writing. Ghost, who is helping in the preparation, is Bruce Catton, former WPB publicity director and personal publicity adviser to Nelson. There's a good story there on the inside of how this peaceful nation was converted into the "arsenal of democracy."

* * * * * * * * *

Now that the American preem of Lester Cowan's "GI Joe" is set for here on June 27 under the aegis of the National Press Club, the story can be told. When Cowan broached the Press Club officers with the idea, the other day, they were a little cautious and insisted on a private screening of the film first.

Reason is that the last pic which kicked off with Press Club blessing was the highly controversial "Mission To Moscow." This one raised considerable intra-club ruckus and the club was accused of fostering pro-Russian propaganda.

At any rate, the club officers came out of "GI Joe" screening delighted with the film. A special showing also was given here for General A. D. Surles, head of Army Public Relations. Burgess Meredith is expected here with the preem which will tie in with a Press Club drive for an Ernie Pyle memorial.

George Skouras spends about three days a week here on various government chores, while brother-Spyros already has gone abroad where he will join the industry delegation when it arrives for a look inside Germany. . . . Ann Corio getting more kudos here for her hospital and canteen appearances than for her p.a. on the stage of Loew's Capitol. . . . Andrea King and Helmut Dantine in almost a week before their skedded appearance at Warners Earle. They're doing some good deeds and also seeing the tall buildings. . . . William Wells, UNRRA film head, is in Europe until about August. . . . Ditto for Ned Shugrue, of the Treasury's War Finance Division, though he will be back sooner. . . . "The United States," made to tell the British about us, is slated for American release shortly through the BIS rotation system. . . . Latest word is that Canada may make the United Nations Conference documentary that everybody else has been ducking. . . . OPA has contracted with Sam Glucksman for two five-minute shorts for release in Negro theatres.

PREVIEWED in Hollywood, June 4, 1945. Running time: 66 MINS.

Zane Grey's old reliable "West of the Pecos," a tale of Texas outlawry in 1887, returns to the screen at RKO with a modicum of love and slapstick to punctuate the gunplay prevalent in those rugged days when men were sharpshooters and women toted lace parasols when they were not masquerading as male cowpokes.

Sharpshootingest of the men was Robert Mitchum, playing the role of Pecos, who got himself tangled up with Barbara Hale, playing the daughter of a Chicago packer who sold his slaughterhouse and went back to the ancestral ranch to recover his health under doctor's orders.

On her first day in the wild west, the gal was molested by a couple of men-about-town who thought she was a night-clubber on account of her fancy duds, so she disguised herself as a boy to fool the wolves. She also fooled Robert Mitchum, who bumped into her as he was backing out of a gambling joint with both guns blazing. Thinking she was a boy, he handed her a swift kick in the britches. Later on, in the second quarter the gal tied the score with a kick from the one-yard line. It was developing into a punting duel when boy tossed gal into river and discovered to his amazement that he was a she.

Meanwhile, Robert was a fugitive from the Vigilantes, a gang of baddies managed by the Sawtelle brothers, played by Harry Woods and Perc Launders, who ran the gambling house and robbed stage coaches as a sideline. They had bumped off Bill Williams, the stage coach guardian, and were trying to pin the rap on Robert, his best friend. They even went so far as to send one of their gangsters east of the Pecos to swear out a murder warrant and lure the U. S. marshal into the plot.

By this time the gal's old man had regained his health by mixing adobe bricks on the ancestral rancho and gathered his faithful vaqueros around him for a final gun battle. It was a 50-50 fight until the U. S. marshal, who had learned the truth, galloped to the rescue with his posse. It wound up with the hero leaping from the roof of the hacienda and subduing the heavy with a haymaker instead of a gat.

Music and moonlight entered the picture in the campfire scene out yonder in the desert where Richard Martin, playing an Irish Mexican, sang a Spanish serenade to a French maid, portrayed by Rita Corday.

The romance wound up with Robert carrying Barbara across the threshold of the hacienda for a touchdown, instead of trying for another field goal.

COURT BANS MASS PICKETING AT GOLDWYN'S

in 25 feet of the vehicle entrance of studio and not more than two within 25 feet of the pedestrian entrance.

Order prohibits any attempt to obstruct delivery of supplies into studio, use of sound trucks or any other device to magnify voices, and prohibits pickets or other strikers from yelling in loud voices, cursing, etc., employes, tenants or customers of studio.

Pickets and strikers also are prohibited from "following, trailing or pursuing" employes, customers or tenants for "the purpose of injuring, intimidating, coercing, threatening or molesting" them. It further states that pickets or strikers may not make "vile, abusive, obscene remarks to employes, customers or tenants" and restrains them from "shouting in a loud or boisterous manner."

Pickets also are told they must not stand, march or walk in groups or columns before or across the ordinary entrances to studio in such a manner as not to leave ample space for those desiring to enter or leave lot.

Show cause order and temporary restrainer is returnable June 15 in Superior court. Order, secured by Attorney Mendel B. Silberberg, names as defendants Business Representative Ed Mussa and Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421; Prexy Herbert Sorrell of the Conference of Studio Unions, Moving Picture Painters Local 644, Business Representative Al Speede and IBEW Local 40, Business Representative James Skelton and Studio Carpenters Local 946, Business Representative Jack Williams and Studio Janitors Local 278, Moulders and Foundry Workers Local 374, Blacksmiths Local 212, Business Representative D. T. Wayne and Studio Machinists Local 1185.

Producer representatives explained the order applied only to Samuel Goldwyn because that was the only lot where mass picketing had occurred. It was indicated a similar order would be requested for other studios if mass picketing was attempted at any of them.

Studio execs at the same time declared the strike front had been dented, with some carpenters, machinists, sketch artists, designers and plumbers returning to their jobs at 20th-Fox and Metro. Strike leaders, however, insisted the deflections were very small and would not exceed 25 men out of 4,500 involved in all classifications.

Herbert Sorrell announced last night that a meeting of international presidents in the American Federation of Labor had been set for June 18 in Washington to call for a showdown on issuance of new studio charters by Prexy Richard Walsh of the IATSE. He said that International Prexy Ed Brown of the machinists had indicated he could not attend before that date, but that efforts were being made to have him postpone other business in order that an earlier meeting date could be set.

It was stated that Sorrell, head of the Conference of Studio Unions and Painters Local 644; Joseph Cambiano, international representative and veepee of the carpenters, and Business Representative D. T. Wayne of the machinists would plane east to attend the meeting. Sorrell said the international heads in the AF of L would be asked to demand that Prexy William Green sanction the legality of the current strike and to insist that Walsh either withdraw the charters or get out of the AF of L. The strikers also served notice on the actors that starting June 13 they intend to publicize the names of all players crossing the picket lines.

BOND DRIVE ZOOMS ON AS FREE MOVIE DAY NEARS

New York, June 5.—Total of 10,253 theatres throughout the country, as of today, will participate in the nationwide Free Movie Day celebration tomorrow. Total so far exceeds all expectations, according to Samuel Pinanski, national chairman of the film industry's Seventh War Loan campaign.

Tomorrow also marks the midway spot in the campaign, and drive is zooming ahead. Not only has it exceeded other drives in Free Movie Day, but it has more than doubled the number of children's matinees, and exceeds in bond premieres by almost 20%.

Free Movie Day tomorrow already has been officially proclaimed by governors of 23 states and the Treasury Department has taken official cognizance of the date in a message sent to Pinanski by Ted R. Gamble, national director of the Treasury's War Finance Division. Message was as follows:

"This is the day when patriotism of the motion picture industry is best displayed; the day when the theatres give away their merchandise free to purchasers of War Bonds.

"Free Movie Day is being celebrated on the anniversary of the Normandy invasion. One year ago our Allied armies dared the strength of the Hitler fortifications and entered the most decisive phase of our war against the Nazi enemy. It is fitting and proper that we honor the memory of those men who died in that beachhead offensive.

"We can pay such tribute through the purchase of War Bonds, and in so doing protect the lives of other men on the other side of the world.

"The Treasury Department is grateful to a generous industry for Free Movie Day."

Robert Young leaves today for Louisiana to start a series of Seventh War Loan personal appearances. He will meet the Red River Invasion Fleet at Shreveport June 10. Other dates for his appearances include Minden and Natchitoches, June 11; Alexandria, June 12; Opelouses and Baton Rouge, June 13-14; New Orleans, June 15-16-17.

Hollywood Canteen yesterday purchased $200,000 in War Bonds through the Hollywood Motion Picture War Finance Committee, which is conducting the Seventh War Loan drive throughout the Hollywood film industry.

RKO, CANTINFLAS DISSOLVE BY MUTUAL PACT

RKO and Cantinflas have dissolved by mutual consent agreement whereby studio was to produce bilingual picture starring Mexico's No. 1 screen comedian, titled "The Magnificent Tramp." Two parties couldn't get together on story lines and cost of production, studio reports.

John H. Auer, who was to produce and direct film in English and Spanish, and writer Lawrence Kimble went to Mexico City several months ago to confer with Cantinflas on script. At that time, and later, studio announces, comedian and his representatives okayed screenplay.

In Mexico City yesterday, Cantinflas is reported to have said he broke contract because film, to have been a Spanish fantasy, did not depict Mexico accurately, and that original screenplay, written by Jaime Salvador, had been changed beyond all recognition in revamping.

"Tramp" is to be shelved by RKO indefinitely and Auer will immediately start preparations for "Sweet Georgia Brown."

CHI OPERETTA FOLDS AS UNION SQUABBLE ENDS

Chicago, June 5.—Union-management squabble has been cleaned up at the Opera House coincidental with the announcement that the Shubert-Opera House Corporation's projected series of summer operettas will fold Sunday because of poor business. Signal for the end of the union fight was the signing of the Association of Theatrical Agents and Managers minimum basic agreement by James C. Thompson, Opera House operator.

Operetta folderoo is caused by the fact no new shows are available to follow "DuBarry Was a Lady" and "Countess Maritza," Thompson said. Each held for two weeks but got miserable takes—$15,000 a week for two weeks of "Du Barry" and $15,500 last week for "Maritza," although the house was scaled for $58,829 a week.

This summer's plan was to present light operas unfamiliar to Chicagoans. It's worth noting, therefore, that offerings last year, including "Rose Marie," "New Moon," "Merry Widow," etc., all tried and true warhorses, got grosses as high as $27,000. However, this year's pair of lesser-knowns took terrific nosedives.

In signing the ATAM pact for house manager, Thompson balked at inking it for four years, which is usual stretch, limiting it to only one year. He also substituted "Chicago" for "New York" in all clauses, claiming he wants the right to pick a local man if anything were to happen to Phil Carlin, present manager.

Signing of the contract is considered a victory for the union, despite stipulations, which are pointed out as being minor. Act also removes necessity for arbitration. However, the Opera House will be dark indefinitely, it was announced, due to booking difficulties.

Dolores Del Rio Spurns U. S. Film Contracts

Mexico City, June 5. — Dolores Rel Rio, who recently returned from New York, states that though she has received numerous contract tenders from American film producers, she has refused them. ARMY ANSWERS BEEF OF WOR RADIO MAN

Washington, June 5.—Squawk by Dave Driscoll, head of news and special events for WOR, key Mutual station in New York, that the Army discriminated against radio in favor of the press and newsreels, drew a sharp retort from Col. Ed Kirby, chief of the radio branch of Army Public Relations. Driscoll yelled "We wuz robbed" when he was not permitted to set up a mike at the press conference of General Omar Bradley at the Waldorf in New York. He previously was rebuffed when he tried the same thing at a press conference of General Courtney Hodges.

Kirby said Driscoll's complaint boiled down to "a lack of understanding of the form and purpose of a press conference plus a keen competitive desire to score a beat over other stations." Kirby added that Driscoll failed to make a distinction between a broadcast and a press conference, the latter frequently having background and off-the-record material not privileged for public release. Kirby pointed out that it is not customary to broadcast any press conference, from the White House down.

War Labor Board order calling for wage boosts of approximately $50,000 yearly for members of the Screen Cartoonists Guild is being appealed by Walt Disney Productions. Execs stated appeal was based on allegation that board action contravened established policy of board, in view of fact that company prior to order had granted increases for classifications involved that carried them above Little Steel formula.

Company heads declared that lower-bracket workers given substantial tilts by WLB, already had been handed increases amounting to 25.6%. It also is contended in appeal, filed yesterday, that board did not take into consideration evidence pertaining to financial condition of company, etc.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, June 5.—Some of our cinema directors are maneuvering so that French Pierre Chenal not be allowed to direct pictures in this country. They explain their attitude stating that there are many Mexican directors sans films to direct. If their quaint line of reasoning were followed by our authorities, Mexican audiences would never hear renowned singers of other countries, nor see great dancers, nor enjoy the performances of foreign artists of any field, because there would always be some of our own people without contracts.

The directors who oppose Chenal insist upon mentioning article 3 of our federal labor law, which stipulates that "Under equal circumstances, Mexican citizens be preferred in all lines of work." They don't seem to understand the words "under equal circumstances."

The whole affair is idiotic, but we can't even smile about it. The Mexican cinema industry is too important. We have very few top directors. Our industry needs talent, come from where it may. With the narrow-minded selfishness of some of our cinematographers on one hand, and the suicidal measures of the union on the other, it is a wonder we produce pictures at all.

Producers Salkin and Pablo Gonzalez, and Director Jaime Salvador, have invaded the port of Veracruz with cast of "Squadron 201." Domingo Soler, one of Mexico's foremost actors; the Spanish comedian, Angel Garasa; Ruben Rojo, Louise Burnett and several others swim in the warm gulf waters and chat at the little city's sidewalk cafes between scenes.

Juan Orol, director-producer husband of star Maria Antonieta Pons, announces that his next film will be dubbed and that he will offer stellar role of English version to Hedy Lamarr. I'd love to hear what Hedy Lamarr has to say, or rather, what she would say, had she seen the pictures produced by Mr. Orol.

One day's box office receipts for "And Now Tomorrow" at the Rex cinema were almost 17,000 pesos. Box office receipts on the same day, the same film showing, at a better cinema, the Palacio Chino, were less than 9,000 pesos. The Rex showed the original English version, while the dubbed one played at the Palacio Chino.

Astro Films' whodunit, "Murder In the Studios," starring English Actor Fu Manchu, has gone into cutting room. Here's hoping it is not quite, quite as bad as the last Fu Manchu starrer.

"Amor, Amo y Senor," a mediocre play surprisingly successful at the Ideal theatre, will be adapted to the screen and produced by Grovas. Anita Blanch, a very capable actress and star of the legitimate play, will have stellar role in screen version.

Mary Douglas has been given roles in "La Mulata de Cordova" and "La Mujer de Enfrente." . . . At Azteca studios shooting of "Scarlet Roses" has begun, with Emilio Tuero and Amanda Ledesma in leads. . . . The Cinematographers Union (S.T.I.C.) will declare a strike at the Warners office in Monterrey. . . . Carlos Amador en route to Los Angeles to purchase equipment for open-air cinema, which will be a novelty of doubtful success in Mexico.

TOM GERAGHTY

Tom Geraghty, 62, pioneer screen writer and producer, died yesterday in a private sanitarium in Culver City. Death resulted from a facial tumor.

Geraghty at the time he was taken ill about a year ago, was head of the Hollywood Bureau of Censorship, OWI. He had been part of the motion picture business since the early days and one of the first to make a name as a screen writer. He was a reporter on the New York Herald-Tribune in the early 1900's, became associated with the old Metro company as publicity director, and while in that position met the late Douglas Fairbanks and the two became close friends. Geraghty wrote numerous scripts for Fairbanks and was his companion on a world tour.

Geraghty turned out altogether more than 100 originals for Fairbanks, W. C. Fields, Thomas Meighan, Gloria Swanson, Joe E. Brown, Will Rogers and other stars.

He was born in Rushville, Ind. Surviving are two sons, Maurice and Gerald, and two daughters, Mrs. Carey Wilson, and Sheila Geraghty.

Funeral services will be held at 1 p.m. Friday at the Little Church of the Flowers, Forest Lawn, with Rev. Neal Dodd officiating.

CHI EXHIBS BITING FINGERNAILS OVER RELEASES

Chicago, June 5. — Chicago is strictly a sellers' market these days, judging from features for July tabulated last week for general release houses by Jack Kirsch of Allied Theatres. Of 50 features, 16 are reissues, seven are westerns, which cues some of the fingernail biting on the part of hundreds of exhibitors who are figuring on enticing payees into the theatres.

Exhibitors as usual are blaming the distributors, who in turn admit there is a print shortage, a dearth of product and a tendency on the part of home offices to hold back releases.

MIDNIGHT CLOSING BILL ASSURED OF PASSAGE

the bill and sent it to the floor of the Senate after a hearing this morning at which Earl Carroll and his attorney, Leonard Wilson, talked against the bill. Opposition in the Senate melted overnight and the bill seems assured of getting 27 votes, a two-thirds majority required to put it into effect immediately on the Senate floor.

At the hearing, where both Wilson and Carroll talked against the measure, the nitery owner declared his Hollywood club suffers heavily with midnight closing. He puts on his first show at 9 p.m. and the second at midnight, he said, and midnight closing leaves him only three or four hours of business.

Assemblyman Harold Sawallisch, Richmond author of the bill, declared only 150 night clubs out of 12,000 on-sale licensees in the state oppose midnight closing. He also stated that a 2 a.m. law encourages absenteeism at war plants and that military officials on the Coast really never wanted to lift the military midnight curfew.

"A small, selfish group in Los Angeles went to Washington and high-pressured military leaders there to lift the curfew on the Coast, but military leaders here really didn't want it," Sawallisch said.

The committee tabled an amendment to allow the bars to remain open until 1 a.m. Saturdays but adopted an amendment changing their starting hours from 6 a.m. to 8 a.m. The way the bill reads now and the way it probably will go to the governor lists hours as follows:

On-sale, 8 a.m. to midnight every day. Off-sale, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. weekdays, and 10 a.m. to midnight Saturdays.

cocktail party tonight at the Bohemian Club, but no newsreel sequence is planned—and don't think it is because silver-thatched Jack Connolly, having lost a 15-buck Stetson at the Bohemian Club on the first night he wore a benny in years, is miffed because the directors wouldn't pay his claim for the missing chapeau.

The delegate who appears to have the vote of the ladies of the press as having the most magnetic sex appeal of anyone in the conference was in a special silent screening today. He is Manuel C. Gallagher, of Peru, chairman of the committee on the international court of justice, who was filmed with his committee.

Ezequiel Padilla and the Mexican delegation, trailed by a big battery of newsreelers, will trek to Sacramento tomorrow. Padilla will be newsreeled with Governor Warren, and also during Padilla's address to the State Legislature. There'll be a big party also staged by the Sacramento Mexican community, and that may be good for a few shots. Incidentally, if time permits there'll be shots of Padilla having dinner with Mexican laborers, possibly field workers, on his return trip, adding a strong dash of democratic flavor that should go big south of the border.

Francis Alstock, Office of Inter-American Affairs newsreel chief, is expected back from a hurried trip to Washington by tomorrow or Thursday.

Meanwhile there's not a thing sensational for radio, press or cinema, and everything marks time until the conference finale shapes up, with the date for President Truman's speech and the charter-signing still set some time between June 11 and 15.

WARNERS TO MAKE OWN EXTRA, LABOR DEALS

Warners probably will have to set up its own machinery to cast film extras, negotiate wage agreements with scores of studio unions and guilds, and to carry on various other functions that ordinarily are handled for the major companies by representatives of the Producers Association. This was indicated yesterday when members of the Association took up discussion of the withdrawal of Warners both from the Association and the Motion Picture Producers Association.

While execs expressed willingness to continue these services temporarily, it was said to have been plainly indicated that other and permanent arrangements would have to be made by the retiring company. Members are said to feel

WESTBROOK PEGLER'S mad-on with radio, television and kindred arts took a vicious turn in his pillar of type in the Examiner yesterday and coast leaders in the maligned trades are wondering what's in his craw. His especial peeve was at television, which he foresees as "a crude and expensive disappointment and its clients or consumers will pay high for the slow improvements of a primitive experiment." As for auto radios he says, "it has victimized the public to the extent of millions of dollars with false promises and high prices." A huge blob of spleen is splattered in his statement that "not one in a hundred of radio and radar technicians will come out of the service with knowledge and experience in the field of electronics superior to that of a garage mechanic." Nor are phonographs spared in his tirade. Sez Pegler: "The mechanism is not fit to be mentioned with the ordinary dollar watch of 30 years ago." He really works himself into a lather on the matter of news analysts and lets go with, "radio welcomes as a martyr any psychopathic liar who has been thrown out of the paper because of proven malice and falsehood." And to pile on his venom, he hisses, "the simple truth is that radio has been morally yellow and is preparing a come-uppance which may be painful to many more people than just those who are implicated in this performance." Pegler's blast got a rise out of those who occasionally read his column, but it will soon be forgotten for his statements lack any basis in fact and he has no authoritative proof to back up his statements. If Pegler and his bosses are frightened at the bogey of television, just think of the apoplectic surprise awaiting them if facsimile is fully developed, forewarn those in the trade who know what's up and peeking over the horizon.

PROPOSED broadcast of "Command Performance," G. I. show, from the stage of Grauman's Chinese theatre in the interests of the Seventh War Loan campaign has been nixed by the Hollywood Victory Committee. G. I. show, as set up by theatre men plugging bond sales for the Seventh, was figured to be a natural to ring up a record total of sales. HVC turned thumbs down on theatre airing, asserting that it is against its policy to permit film names to make gratis theatre appearances to sell bonds. Committee claims that if an okay for such an appearance is once given it would result in a deluge of requests from other theatres for similar stunts. "Command Performance" is transcribed weekly for shortwaving to G. I.'s overseas by the Armed Forces Radio Service and is staged before a radio studio audience of both servicemen and civilians. Rudy Vallee's air show will substitute at the Chinese.

STERLING HOLLOWAY, who was discharged from the Army more than a year ago, has had tough sledding as far as getting a screen role. Following his return from Italy he turned down a part in "Bedside Manner" due to a three voice portrayal with Walt Disney, which was sans screen appearance. Then he worked in "Walk In the Sun," which has not got beyond the cutting room. After that he had chance for a part in "The Young Widow," but had a previous commitment to direct and act in the operetta "Desert Song." Following that job he signed to direct another operetta, "Rose Marie," which shut him out of a task at RKO in "Radio Stars On Parade." Now he's worried he's been off the screen too long and the public might have forgotten what he looks like.

TRADESHOWN at Paramount studio, Hollywood, May 31, 1945. Running time: 97 MINS.

The five piano maestros alone are worth the price of admission to "Out of This World." Which doesn't mean that they steal the show, either. There's plenty of other music. It's all pretty good. There are at least two tunes that will linger in the memory. The romantic comedy lead (acting by Eddie Bracken and crooning by Bing Crosby) provides laughs and sentimental appeal in full measure. And Cass Daley at the drums —whether you take it as music or acrobatic grotesques—is ace entertainment.

The story is a tightly dramatized version of the one that is pretty commonly used for musicals. It isn't obtrusive enough to distract attention from the tunes at any point. And it does give Diana Lynn a chance for a good job of heartstring pulling in the romantic passages with Eddie Bracken.

The Eddie Bracken part—that of Herbie Fenton, the crooning messenger boy whose quaver-notes set the bobby-soxers swooning—is a composite of Eddie's acting with Bing Crosby's voice dubbed in. The tricky synchronization is handled perfectly.

The feature musical specialty is the five-piano number with Maestros Carmen Cavallaro, Ted Fio Rito, Henry King, Ray Noble and Joe Reichman tossing chords and melodies back and forth.

The two outstanding tunes are "Out of This World" and "June Comes Around Every Year," by Johnny Mercer and Harold Arlen, with the "June" number probably the catchier of the pair.

Production is quite in the grand manner by Sam Coslow and Hal Walker's direction is effective, skillful handling of a type of performance that makes heavy demand on directorial talent.

PREVIEWED at the Pantages, Hollywood, June 5, 1945. Running time: 93 MINS.

"A Thousand and One Nights" is a groovy dish of escapist film fare. A hep version of that old, icky tale of Aladdin and his magic lamp, it packs a laugh wallop as stout as the enduring qualities of the fable from which it springs. Samuel Bischoff's production handling is smart and showmanly, making it a visual Technicolor treat of lush settings and even more gorgeous gals. Alfred E. Green's direction doesn't miss a bet in belting over the laughs, in staging the spectacles, and in generally guiding the material to a sock conclusion. It's all slap-happy, but in a box office way.

Baghdad, as depicted in the hilarious script by Wilfrid H. Pettit, Richard English and Jack Henley, is a curious mixture of the old and the modern. It's a fable about Aladdin, an early-day swoon singer, who dared to love a princess and how he finally wins his bride with the aid of as slick a genie as ever came curving out of a lamp. While Aladdin practices his swoon art, his buddy, Abdullah, a jive-talking, light-fingered gent who was born 1,000 years ahead of his time, plies his pocket-picking trade upon the crowds that gather. It is an easy life, until Aladdin looks upon the forbidden princess and gets ideas. Arrested for his audacity, he escapes with his pal. During the chase that follows they encounter Kofir, the Sorcerer, obtain the magic lamp and become princes in an effort to further Aladdin's romance. The princess is will-

CAST—Pamela Blake, Sheldon Leonard, Lola Lane, Elisha Cook, Jr., Paul Guilfoyle, Constance Worth, Claudia Drake, Virginia Brissac, Thomas Jackson, Evelynne Eaton, Peggy Lou Bianco, Fred Kohler, Walter Baldwin, Robert Emmett Keane.

PREVIEWED at Sound Service studio, Hollywood, June 6, 1945. Running time: 68 MINS.

In spite of the title, which is pretty corny even for the yucks, "Why Girls Leave Home" is a top-billing show for the minors and a good second-halfer anywhere. Producer Sam Sax seems to have had some doubt in the beginning as to whether the film was going to be a musical, problem play, or straight drama. He ends, up, nevertheless, by turning out good, hard-boiled seat-edger crime melodrama.

The musical score is hot swing that would be adequate to a more elaborate production. The three song numbers, sold in superlative fashion by Pamela Blake and Claudia Drake, have hit possibilities. "The Cat and the Canary," put on by Miss Blake in her role as a night club singer, is jive novelty song that will "send" them.

Story is concerned with the luring of Miss Blake into the night club job, attempts to murder her to keep her from telling what she learns of a killing in the club and her final rescue by a reporter-detective.

The femme members of the cast all give top performances and their work is largely responsible for keeping the show alive and moving. Lola Lane, as the femme "heavy" of the piece; Claudia Drake, as a drunken night club star, and Virginia Brissac in a mother role deserve special mention.

William Berke's direction keeps the action fast and thrilling.

Preachment sequence at the start explaining why Pamela leaves home for the night club and tag scenes of similar import don't especially interfere with the story—but they don't help it any more than the title does, either.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

Japan is confronted with a series of important military decisions. It is estimated that she has still available for action an army of four million men. The divisions of this army now fighting in Southwest Asia and on Pacific Islands suffer from poor connections with the home base of supply. And with American and naval air power being what it is, there is little the Japanese can do to improve these connections. It would be logical, therefore, for Japan to try to cut her losses in the extremities of her gangling empire in the interest of concentrating strength in areas where connections with home base are less tenuous. But even a decision of this sort would still leave Japan facing many question marks. Her lines on the Asiatic mainland would still be far flung. She cannot overlook the Russian danger that lurks in Siberia. There is the threat of direct American invasion of the homeland. Withdrawal from South China north of the Yangtze would open seaports through which aid could be hastened to the Chinese. How will she dispose her strength for her greatest good? Her record of being repeatedly outguessed in the Pacific campaign can only sharpen the dilemma horns on which she now reposes.

WILDBERG PLAYS SAFE, SIGNS STARS 2 YEARS

As a safeguard against having his stars "lifted," John Wildberg has pacted Martha Raye and Phil Baker, toppers of his forthcoming legit musical, "Belle Brody," for two years. Wildberg is not only insuring himself against having his top players snatched away, but is setting a precedent for revealing faith in how long the show will run.

Currently on the Coast to discuss sale of film rights to "Memphis Bound," his latest Broadway show, Wildberg also is looking for two other players to put in top roles of "Brody."

While he is here, "Brody" is going right along in production, with Cy Howard writing the book, Sammy Cahn and Jule Styne cleffing the show and Harry Delmar, the director, holding daily conferences with Wildberg. Delmar and Howard came to the Coast to be here with the producer and the two cleffers.

Wildberg expects to mount the show at a cost of $200,000 and will break it in during October in Boston. "Brody" then will open on Broadway before Thanksgiving.

For his first straight legit offering Wildberg also is preparing play, "The Hump," which he will co-produce with Harry Wagstaff Gribble. Wildberg expects to wind his business on the Coast June 22 and return to New York, where he will start rehearsals on "Brody" about Sept. 1.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

"Blue Ribbon Town" will go to the post next fall for the first time without Dick Mack at the production helm. The man who put Pabst on the dials two and a half years ago, first with Groucho Marx and then Kenny Baker and Danny Kaye, has closed out his affiliation with the Kayes and Warwick & Legler. Contract vested with Mack the right to withdraw on formal notice, which was executed yesterday with 13 weeks of his straight '52 still to go. Reason for Mack's severance is the move to New York by the Kayes for at least the next two radio seasons, the producer preferring the balmy clime of these latitudes.

No sooner did the word leak that Mack was leaving the Kayes and the Warwicks than three offers to produce network shows were heaped upon him. That he will produce and script-edit the Joan Davis show for Swan Soap is almost certain, although there's nothing in writing. There's also the chance that he may take a second show and the possibility that he may become production supervisor on all three. Naturally Joan Davis gets first call, largely for sentimental reasons. It was Mack who first put the comedienne on the Sealtest exhibit and realizing her potentialities gave her a steady berth with Rudy Vallee and John Barrymore. It is now radio history that she eventually inherited sole stardom and lifted the show into the upper strata of the elite, there to have and hold her high estate.

Danny Kaye will practically have to start from scratch in New York, the Mack defection being augmented by the absence of Harry James, whose option was allowed to lapse, and possibly the writers and supporting cast. Likely that Harry Sosnik will inherit the baton. Kaye's Gotham yen is prompted by the "need" of a stage play and nitery dates to further his career. Joan Davis may tee up with Harry Von Zell as foil and secondary comic, with the thrushing to be done by Andy Russell if a deal can be struck. In giving up the Kaye show, Mack is parting with the sweetest contract ever drawn up for a producer. But there are other considerations more important to him, mainly to work where his home and family is and a fond affection for a place called Hollywood.

We've heard it before and so have you—that Sunday's studio audiences, especially toward nightfall, are on the droopy side. More to the point, they just don't spark to the funny fellows like ducat holders on other nights. A certain producer, who takes his charges through a live warmup on Fridays, comments that these auditors are much more enthused at the antics of the comics than the regular Sunday night crowd of hand-sitters and yawn-stiflers. Could it be that they're all played out by Sunday night after the usual weekend round of revelry or do they demand a sock in the risibilities to top off their weekend pleasures? There's a lesson in mass psychology for some learned gent to dabble in and his findings should be interesting.

STATION BREAKS . . . Deal was being closed last night by J. Walter Thompson with Metro for eight guest shots by Margaret O'Brien. Four would be on Lux and other four with Charlie McCarthy (a cute idea) next season. If Leo approves her first shot would be on Lux June 18 in "Canterville Ghost." . . . When there's a big job to be done by KFWB, commercials mean nothing to Headman Harry Maizlish. For the Doolittle-Patton homecoming Saturday, he has cleared 10 full hours on the frequency to tag along with the generals from the time they debouch from the plane until the final strains of "Star Spangled Banner" in the Coliseum. . . . Sid Strotz due back from Manhattan next Thursday, perhaps to pack up for his new executive post with NBC in New York which has so long been in the wind. . . . Judy Canova is rated 10th in the Nielsen survey, passing many of the top shows in the CAB and Hooper reports.

Sam Moore, head of Radio Writers Guild in Hollywood, rises to the defense of his craft and flails away at charges that its members aren't being done right by. His rebuttal is partitioned off into four segments, enumerated thusly: (1) "the Guild has never failed to cooperate in supplying producers with names of writers of specific kinds," (2) "because the Eddie Bracken show was forced off the air is no fault of the Guild. Most of our members are writing full time and many are in the armed forces," (3) "the Guild is in no position to demand an arbitration on disputed pay because free lance writers in the Guild are not protected by contracts with networks or agencies," (4) "minimum basic agreement will attempt to achieve name credit for writers, Guild shop, minimum fees and writer's ownership of material." So having stated his case, Sam can now scamper back to his typewriter and with John Wheden whang out another of those topnotch scripts for "The Great Gildersleeve."

HITCH HIKES . . . Adult handling of her lines with Jack Benny on "This Is my Best" won Norma Nillson (she's 7) the plaudits of her co-workers and the high praise of being the best child actress in radio. . . . It's all in the family so no harm done Helen Mack's "Date With Judy" is rated at 11.1 while hubby Tom McAvity posted 7.6 with "Corliss Archer." But don't play golf with him, Helen. . . . Don Fedderson and Art Farlow may wrap up that KMTR deal when they pile off the Lark Saturday morning. The New York Post's buy of KYA in Frisco is said to be ready for submission to the FCC and there are only a few details yet to be ironed out for a change of ownership at KMTR. . . . Wen Niles was bumped in Kansas City last night enroute back from Sedalia, Mo., after announcing the Bob Hope finale and missed out on his own show with Don Prindle. Brother Ken subbed. . . . Young & Rubicam, acting for General Foods, is more than casually interested in Eddie Bracken for next season. And no double takes if it goes into the last half of the Kate Smith spot.

STRIKERS' ATTORNEY PLANS DEFENSE ON PICKET BAN

Strike leaders are scheduled to meet today with Attorney Frank Pestana to plan defense against temporary restraining order issued by Superior court prohibiting mass picketing at Samuel Goldwyn studio. Meanwhile, heavy lines still are being maintained at the Goldwyn lot and some other studios, labor tops declaring they had not been served with notice of the restrainer.

Notice of temporary restraining order was served late yesterday on Herbert Sorrell and several other strike leaders.

It was disclosed yesterday that the strike strategy committee had adopted a motion to impose a penalty upon any members who contacted producers or IATSE officials with the idea of seeking a strike settlement. Committee took position it was the only body authorized to make such contact and that any independent moves, regardless of the good intentions, would be interpreted as a weakness by the opposition.

Committee also advised strikers to use their own judgment about removing tools and other equipment left in the studios when the walkout started 13 weeks ago. They were told the studios were responsible for such equipment during a strike and there was no obligation for strikers to remove them.

Leaders denied there had been any break in the strike front. It was admitted that a few carpenters, designers and machinists had returned to jobs, but tops insisted the number was even smaller than had been anticipated even before the strike was ordered.

The State Employment Stabilization Committee has upheld a ruling of the local office that studio workers who refused to return to work because of current strike are not entitled to draw unemployment insurance.

WAC NEWSREELER COLLINS ENDS PARLEY JOB, LEAVES

Claude I. Collins, newsreel contact for the War Activities Committee, who spent the past seven weeks as the motion picture contact for the industry at the United Nations Conference for International Organization in San Francisco, left here last night for his Washington base with his task completed.

Collins used four sound crews and two silent cameras to photograph the delegates of the 49 attending countries and their entourage. The shots were made on 35mm. stock and the final prints, a copy of each being given the chairman of the visiting delegation, were on 16mm. stock. Besides these prints, copies also were given to the secretariat of the conference, OWI, OIAA, and the State Department for the archives.

The general subject matter ran around 1,000 feet, and in 16mm. printing was reduced to 450 feet. Titles were inserted as well as a commentary which was made in the language of the delegation. The languages were English, Spanish, Portuguese, Russian and Arabic. The delegation from Denmark which arrives this week in San Francisco also will be filmed, and its commentary will be scored in the Danish language. Each of the prints will be in a leather case.

Prior to being reduced to 16mm. size the films first were screened for the delegates at the United Nations theatre in San Francisco, being changed twice weekly and added to the regular newsreel shown in the theatre.

The entire cost of the filming, which was done in hotels, apartments, parks, outside of the Memorial theatre and in a studio theatre which opened three weeks after the conference began, was defrayed by the American Motion Picture Industry, which also paid for operation of the United Nations theatre, which will end an eight-week career on June 16.

Collins functioned on the project in association with Francis Alstock and Jack Connolly, who are newsreel contacts for the State Department.

ARMY TO EXPLAIN BURNING OF FILMS

Col. Edward Munson, head of the Army pictorial division.

At the same time the War Department is going over its surplus pictures to see what can be released through surplus property channels for public use.

Colonel Munson's report, it is understood, will explain that much of the film burned at Astoria was of such obsolete and technical nature it could not be used by the public. Stuff has been replaced by newer methods.

War Department probably will go into complications arising from use of its films by commercial companies.

Chief stumbling block is the scoring. Music rights are given free to the Army, but the copyright owners could make claims if the pix were sold commercially.

This also applies to professional actors. For instance, training shorts involving Clark Gable or Ronald Reagan would run into trouble if sold for private use, since the actors were under contract to studios while in the service.

The first of a series of meetings to discuss possible utilization of other discarded material is scheduled by the War Department tomorrow at the Pentagon. Many Signal Corps and AAF films are completely Army jobs and would be free of copyright or studio trouble. This type of film might be offered for sale as surplus war goods.

While the Army was preparing to move in the matter, Senator Francis Myers (D, Pa.) tonight wrote a second letter to Major Gen. H. C. Ingles, chief signal officer of the Army Service Forces. Myers previously had asked Ingles for an explanation of the destroyed films and indicated he was dissatisfied with Ingles" reply.

After stating he understood why the Army could not release certain films, Myers wrote:

"Is it not true that there are many other War Department films containing valuable educational and training data which would be of great public benefit? I refer now to such films as the auto mechanic series, electricity and magnetism series, films on first aid, automobile safety, conservation and serving of food, aeronautics, and many others.

"In the state of Pennsylvania we have 20 film libraries and more than 1,300 film projectors owned by colleges, high schools, churches, clubs, industries and other organizations, all of whom have been very much interested in obtaining proper film material for their use. The War Department surplus prints would be of immense value to these organizations."

they are taxed for these services, presenting a solid front on major questions, and that no effort should be made to furnish such services to outside companies.

If Warners elects to remain outside the Association, its labor relations staff, headed by Carrol Sax, probably will be enlarged, with the same applying to its casting department. It was not indicated what effect this will have on current negotiations with the Screen Actors Guild.

Tribute to industry tops for their "loyal cooperation" during the period of government censorship of import and export films was paid by Watterson Rothacker, when he appeared before the execs to officially notify them of the shuttering of his office here and headquarters in New York.

SKOURAS HOST TO STATE DEPT. TOPPERS

the all-out entertainment of all conference personnel and in the business of documenting the conference for history on film.

Tonight's event was a dinner and reception to the American delegation only, held in the Italian Room of the Hotel St. Francis. There was no speechmaking, but the industry was represented by Charles P. Skouras, National Theatres president, as host, along with John Bertero, vice-president; George Bowser, general manager of Fox West Coast, and W. H. (Bud) Lollier, realty head for the circuit. There were plenty other names of men well known in the industry, but the emphasis was on keeping the affair out of the limelight and sedulously avoiding anything which ever could be regarded as capitalizing on the event.

Today saw the French making one grand gesture in the newsreels and missing out on another. Delegation chief Paul-Bancour, former prime minister, laid a wreath on the Cenotaph at the National cemetery at the Presidio of San Francisco in celebration of the first anniversary of D-Day. It was filmed without sound.

The newsreel office received mid-afternoon calls to cover a French function at Letterman General hospital, where the French assertedly were planning to celebrate with convalescent wounded war veterans, with champagne flowing. It was too late to rig up lights and the shot wasn't made, but the consensus was that the reaction might have been sour anyway, what with moralistic opposition in some quarters to pouring bubble-juice for patients and critical comment in other quarters hinting that the champagne was more a device to get newsreel footage than an honestly greathearted jubilation with the fighting men who nearly gave their all for honneur et patrie.

A large group of newsreelers was expected to buzz to Los Angeles between now and Saturday in order to be on deck the latter day to cover the civic celebration for Generals George Patton and James Doolittle.

Jack Connolly, of the International Secretariat newsreel office, went to Sacramento today with Ezequiel Padilla, the Mexican delegation and a group of newsreelers to film Padilla's speech to the Legislature and his meeting with Governor Warren, plus a bit of the Sacramento Mexican colony's shindig for Padilla.

The new Danish delegation has not been filmed yet, but is next on the agenda.

No committee meetings today yielded anything screenable or exciting for the radio gang. As a yardstick on the interest, a press conference today by Victor Andrade, chief of the highly important political and security functions committee, drew 60 press men at a maximum, or perhaps 10% of some of the earlier press meetings.

Mono Plans 4 In June

Monogram will release four films during June, Steve Broidy announced yesterday. Already released June 2 were "Springtime In Texas" and "Trouble Chasers." June 9 is release date for "Flame of the West" and "Mr. Muggs Rides Again" will go out June 16.

FILM COLONY CHEERED BY NEWS OF MORE GAS

Announcement that "gainfully employed" motorists may apply for increased "B" gas rations Monday comes as especially welcome news to the film colony. Distances between studios being what they are and the long home trips necessitated in many cases by the housing situation, the 400-mile "B" ceiling has been an acute problem for the show business boys.

Studio execs, actors, technicians and studio office and labor crews now can qualify for the new 650-miles-a-month ceiling.

Charles Scott, OPA district mileage rationing chief, states that applicants "who are gainfully employed and can prove need" may file at their ration board for the additional amount.

Those whose three-month rations expire within the 30-day period followwing next Monday will not only get the extra gas due them under the new ceiling, but also will be given their next three-month supply. Those whose rations go beyond the 30 days following Monday will be given the amount they are eligible for under the new ceiling for that portion of their ration period which remains.

ing, but before the happy ending Aladdin has to rescue her father, whose sultanship has been assumed by a wicked twin brother, and surmount kindred difficulties.

Comedy falls to Evelyn Keyes and Phil Silvers, and these two worthies give the laughs a workout. Miss Keyes is the genie, the gorgeous likes of which have never been seen before, and a big share of the fun comes from the puckish interpretation she gives the assignment. The way she finally solves her yen for Aladdin by creating his twin for herself, her gift to Silvers because he's a nice guy, which wraps up the boff finale; the fact that only the lamp's master can see her are among the incidents that are high-gear funning. Silvers is the light-fingered Abdullah. His performance is a delight and a major factor in carrying the picture along.

Straight assignments fall to Cornel Wilde and Adele Jergens. Wilde is properly swashbuckling as Aladdin, lends credence to his love scenes and generally gives a top performance to the role. Strictly on the gorgeous side is Miss Jergens as the princess. Her luscious charms, breathtaking and eyefilling costumes complement her royal role. Dennis Hoey is both the good sultan and the villainous brother, who is aided in the skullduggery by Philip Van Zandt as the grand wazir. Gus Schilling and Nestor Paiva are comic-opera captains-of-the-guard. Rex Ingram is a terrifying giant. Richard Hale, the sorcerer; John Abbott, a plaintive tailor who knows the joys of the lamp too briefly, and Murray Leonard, a camel driver, each contribute capably to the spirit of fantasy. Dusty Anderson as the princess's maid-in-waiting, heads up a group of charmers whose beauty is fully exploited by Technicolor and costumes.

Behind-the-camera credits are high technical achievements and figure importantly in furthering the story and mood. Among the standouts are the photography by Ray Rennahan, the art direction by Stephen Goosson and Rudolph Sternad, and set decorations by Frank Tuttle; Lawrence W. Butler's special effects, and the process photography by Ray Cory; Jean Louis' costumes, musical score by Marlin Skiles and musical direction by M. W. Stoloff. Norman Deming served as assistant to Producer Samuel Bischoff.

It will take about two reels for audiences to catch the spirit of this fantastic fantasy, but from then on it's a fast, laugh-packed track that offers hilarious entertainment for ticket buyers.

SCULPTOR AWARDED $3000 IN ART SUIT

Cement statues by Fritz Henkels, long on display in the forecourt of Fox West Coast Egyptian theatre, were worth $3,000 according to jury verdict yesterday awarding sculptor that amount for distruction of his art. Henkels filed suit against theatre after statues were turned over to a junk man for deposit in the city dump. Defense contended Henkels' statue of "The World Supported By Five Athletes" and other pieces were worthless, but sculptor's attorney asserted that, while they might not appeal to persons in Who's Who, they did constitute art loved by the common people. Suit had been on trial several days before a jury in courtroom of Superior Judge Arthur Crum.

IMMEDIATELY following liberation of Paris by Allied Forces, and as soon as such films were available for showing, hungry people formed long lines waiting to see American newsreels, so they could see what was happening in America. This information is provided by J. M. Ruddy, now with Warners, who recently was mustered out of Army as first lieutenant, after seeing service abroad as information and education officer to a fighter group in Ninth Air Force. The French were so anxious to know what was going on in the free countries, particularly the United States, that packing theatres to catch whatever newsreels were exhibited was the primary object of majority of Parisians, Ruddy declares. While in French capital shortly after the liberation, Ruddy found the French were avid for news on Hollywood, particularly a number of personalities who were in the news before the Nazis took over Parts and they no longer were able to hear from outside world. Particularly were people interested in knowing about American family life, and one picture was mentioned above all others, "Four Daughters," Ruddy declares, a picture the French people believed reflected this American manner of living. Germans left a great number of 16 mm. projectors, used by Nazis for propaganda purposes, which, in their rush to abandon Paris, they deserted along with their film. These projectors now are to be used by the French for re-education of the people.

STUDIO police are being run ragged trying to cope with an epidemic of petty thievery that seems to have hit all the film lots at the same time. For the last few weeks small articles have been disappearing from the sets and office workers have been reporting personal belongings missing. Especially annoying to directors and causing minor delays in shooting is the recurrent disappearance of minor props. In one studio a set of ash trays, worth three or four dollars a piece and left overnight, had to be replaced when shooting started the next day. Anything on the stages that isn't nailed down or too heavy to move has a habit of turning up mysteriously missing. At one of the independent lots an office girl's purse containing $35 was stolen and another was victimized to the extent of $15. A secretary's desk was ransacked. Thefts are all of minor proportions but they add up to a considerable sum. Police so far have found no clue to solution of the kleptomania mystery. Meanwhile, sound stages in some studios are being tightly locked up at night, with special watchmen detailed to them.

"RHAPSODY IN BLUE," story of George Gershwin and his music, may not be a complete encyclopedia of musical biography, but it comes about as near to it as anything in films. Twenty-nine real-life characters are portrayed. Of these, Paul Whiteman, Oscar Levant, Al Jolson, George White, Rouben Mamoulian, Anne Brown, Hazel Scott and Tom Patricola play themselves. Such great musical figures of the day as Igor Stravinsky, Jascha Heifetz, Maurice Ravel, Buddy de Sylva and Walter Damrosch are portrayed by actors. Music of the film includes twenty-nine of Gershwin's compositions, 18 of which receive feature treatment, the other 11 being briefly sketched. Fourteen theatre or concert auditoriums were reproduced including Aeolian Hall, Carnegie Hall, Lewisohn Stadium, Los Angeles Philharmonic and Paris Comedie Francaise. A total of 1080 musicians were employed in the picture. Eight original members of Paul Whiteman's orchestra were assembled for the Aeolian Hall scenes, including Al Galladora and Henry Busse.

PUERTO RICO apparently is intending to cash in on the 20th-Fox "American Guerrilla in the Philippines" troupe going there on location, hoping that selection of site by a Hollywood company will lead the way to other major companies. Before military and government authorities granted the studio permission to make "Philippines" there, it is reported El Mundo, the island's largest and most important newspaper, conducted an editorial campaign to bring sufficient public opinion to bear that the government could not turn down the studio's request for shooting facilities. El Mundo devoted four editorials and 12 columns of space to the movement, and was joined by island's six other daily newspapers. Without any solicitation from studio, El Mundo obtained support of several top Puerto Rican officials, and otherwise cleared way for company to go there. 20th-Fox already is considering advisability of filming other pictures in that Caribbean location, since it is fresh and un-picture-wise.

SOLON RIDICULES OWI-MADE PICTURES

He also attacked OIAA for purchasing scripts called "Little Red School House," "Bronx Zoo" and "Fulton Fish Market" to make into pix and radio programs for Latin-American audiences.

RKO PLANS SERIES OF SHORT MUSICALS

RKO plans to start series of short subject musicals, if film restrictions ease up during fourth quarter of year. Decision rests with Harry Michalson, company short subjects sales manager, due out here from the east in July, at which time subject will be discussed and probably settled.

One Exciting Night

(Comedy Mystery)

PARAMOUNT RELEASE of Pine-Thomas production. Associate producer, Maxwell Shane. Director, William C. Thomas. Original screenplay, David Lang. Photography, Fred Jackman, Jr. Supervising editor, Howard Smith; edited by Henry Adams. Art direction, F. Paul Sylos. Sound recording, John Carter. Set decoration, Ray Berk. Music score, Alexander Laszlo.

CAST—Stars William Gargan, Ann Savage, with Leo Gorcey, George Zucco, Paul Hurst, Don Beddoe, Charles Halton, George E. Stone, Robert Barron.

TRADESHOWN at Los Angeles, June 7, 1945. Running time: 63 MINS.

"One Exciting Night" divides its laughs and chills about equally and, while never quite as exciting as the title implies, measures up as an okay supporting feature. William C. Thomas doubles as co-producer with William Pine, and as director. As a directorial starter for Thomas, picture indicates ability to generate suspenseful mystery flavor and the overall job is a good first credit even though a lack of experience is noted in the handling of some of the lighter moments.

Original screenplay by David Lang is played against a background of a wax museum full of crime figures. Plot concerns efforts of two reporters and a killer to play hide-and-seek with the corpse of a former notorious racketeer, all for selfish reasons. The reporters are trying to beat each other on the story of the return of the gangster after being missing five years, while the killer wants the body undiscovered so he can purloin a bunch of unset diamonds. Thomas builds considerable suspense in the opening sequences when the killing takes place and toward the conclusion when the killer nearly bumps off the two reporters. In between, picture deals in comedy as the corpse is shuffled from one hideout to the other.

William Gargan and Ann Savage are the rival newshawks and both bat a good average in the playing. George Zucco is the menacing killer. Leo Gorcey, assistant in Charles Halton's wax museum, turns in his typical mug comedy, and Halton adds some chuckles with his frustrated characterization. Paul Hurst and Don Beddoe are the befuddled cops and George E. Stone the traveling corpse.

Maxwell Shane, as associate producer, marshalled appropriate atmosphere for the story.

Santa Fe Saddlemates

(Western)

CAST—Stars Sunset Carson, with Linda Stirling, Olin Howland, Roy Barcroft, Bud Geary, Kenne Duncan, George Chesebro, Bob Wilke, Henry Wills, Forbes Murray, Frank Jaquet, Josh Carpenter, Rex Lease.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, June 7, 1945. Running time: 55 MINS.

"Santa Fe Saddlemates" is a rough, tough western that's cut to order for the outdoor trade. There's action a-plenty and, as a surprise for western fans, the hero is permitted to hit what he aims at with a minimum of wasted lead. Heading up the heroics is Sunset Carson, an easy-riding, stalwart hero who cuts a fast action path through Bennett Cohen's original script. Thomas Carr's direction and production gear this one for favorable reception in the western market.

Carson is assigned to a special border detail to clean up a gang of jewel smugglers. He assumes the identity of a gunslinger, joins the gang and gradually works his way up to the head man, who's none other than a respected citizen in the border town. Rootin', tootin' fist-fights, chases and hot lead punctuate the action as Carson fills his assignment. In for comedy is Olin Howland, former eastern bookkeeper who longs for life in the wide open spaces. Linda Stirling as a femme reporter who's after the smuggling story for her paper gives Carson opportunity for some prairie romancing. Miss Stirling also sings "Oh Mister," tune by Jack Elliott.

Heading up the dirty work is Roy Barcroft and his standard henchmen include Bud Geary, Kenne Duncan, Bob Wilke, Henry Wills, Rex Lease. Photography by William Bradford and musical direction by Richard Cherwin aid the action.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

San Francisco, June 7.—At five o'clock yesterday afternoon, Secretary Stettinius held a press conference. All he did was read a statement he had made on behalf of the Big Five to the steering committee (heads of delegations) of the United Nations Conference. But that was enough for one afternoon, because the statement revealed that the Big Five had come to an agreement on the veta issue that has been holding up the conference in many ways for more than a fortnight. Under the terms of the Big Five agreement unanimity of the permanent members of the Security Council—that is the Big Five—is required in all decisions relating to enforcement action and, except as parties to disputes, in all decisions for peaceful settlement. There has been agreement on these two points right along. But now it is agreed that any state, whether member of the organization or not, may bring a dispute to the attention of the Council, and that no individual member of the Council can alone prevent a consideration and discussion of that dispute by the Council. The conference breathes more easily tonight than in some time. Now watch it go.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

"Round Trip," comedy by Mary Orr and Reginald Denham, opened at the Biltmore—and it's just too bad that it didn't have a one-way ticket NOT leading to Broadway, because a lot of very nice people, including June Walker, Sidney Blackmer, Phyllis Brooks, Edith Meiser, and Nancy Carroll's young daughter, Patricia Kirkland, ars far too nice to be involved in such risque, unattractive proceedings. Renee Carroll, hat check girl at Sardi's, is said to have $10,000 invested in this turkey (which doesn't compare to the kind you get at Sardi's). But which certainly proves there's a lot of "checks" appeal in men's hats!

"Hollywood Pinafore" (with deepest apologies to Gilbert and Sullivan), by George K. Kaufman, opened at the Alvin to an anticipatory audience who paid a $9.60 ducat admission and would have gladly doubled that tariff for the privilege of being on hand for this major event of the closing season. With Nicholas Schenck, Anatole Litvak, Arthur Freed, Don Loper, Lucille Bremer, Jack Cohn, Bennett Cerf, Doris Warner, Pam Blumenthal, Lillian Hellman, Bob Sinclair, Edna Ferber, Gilbert Miller and Doc Schurr in the gala assemblage, it was a safe bet that all allusions to Hollywood would strike a responsive chord—for here was the most "hep" audience that the Alvin theatre will ever draw. But somehow the smattering of names like Zanuck, Gable, Van Johnson, Orson Welles, etc., etc. fell flat, and it was only during the Anthony Tudor ballet, "The Birth of a Star," and the brilliant satire on a Hollywood story conference that the evening lived up to its highest expectation. Again, as in "Firebrand of Florence," Max Gordon has been prodigal with his production, and for the T.B.M. there is a lineup of the most eye-filling femmes to be seen east of the Rockies—especially "Miss Beverly Wilshire"—alias Pamela Randall!

EXCLUSIVELY YOURS: Mary Martin out of danger and making satis-factory progress at the Lying-In Hospital. . . . Luise Rainer, who is still looking for THAT play to bring her to Broadway, will mark time by making a straw hat appearance in "There's Always Juliet" for Gus Schirmer, Jr.'s Strand Theatre in Stamford, Conn. . . . Richard Krakeur is the new producer of Eddie Goulding's "Last Sunday." . . . Peggy Fears has all the financial backing for a musical with score by Rudolph Benatsky—now all she wants is Gertrude Lawrence as star, the optimist! . . . As soon as Moss Hart checks in from the South Pacific, he'll give his immediate attention to a rewrite job of Robert Tourney's "The Secret Room," which he will also direct, as another gold mine for his brother, Bernie, and Joe Hyman. . . . Eddie and Ida Cantor celebrate their 31st wedding anniversary (9) with the usual family gathering—including Leo Lindy! . . . Lee Segal, who owns the radio rights to "The Stork Club" (Par retaining television) is also peddling a package deal of dramatizations of the O. Henry and Ring Lardner wit and humor, with Bennett Cerf acting as emcee. . . . Ben Washer, back in civvies again after two and a half years as advance p.a. for "This Is the Army." . . . Geraldine Fitzgerald will only make New York a stopping off place when she arrives (15) enroute to Ireland, to reunion with her family and show off her 5-year-old son, Michael Edward, whom they have never seen. . . . Vernon Duke, in Nantucket, and Ogden Nash, in Martha's Vineyard, will commute to each other once a week, to intergrate the words and music they are writing for the Al Hershfeld-S. J. Perelman musical, "Forty-Five Plus." . . . Col. Anatole Litvak's next destination will be Germany, where he hopes to catch up with his pal, Billy Wilder. . . . The Freddie Marches, Jo Mielziners and Rouben Mamoulians, a gay sextette in the Cub Room. . . . Jed Harris, reading the book of the New Opera Company's "Song of Joseph," raved to Yoland Mero-Irion about the lyrics, only to discover that they were written by the "man he loves to hate," Alex King!

SUCCESS STORY: Less than five years ago, when "Pal Joey" was playing at the Biltmore, featured in the cast was June Havoc, and supporting her in the chorus line was a guy named Van Johnson. Shortly after, when June was snatched by RKO and went to Hollywood, Van soon followed, but his contract quickly became an "optional" illusion. June came to his rescue and let him board at her house, to help save rent.

The curtain now lowers twice, to denote the lapse of two years. Van Johnson is the SRO attraction on the screen of the Capitol in "Thrill of a Romance." On the stage is June Havoc.

STUDIOS HAND OUT 860Gs TO WHITE COLLARITES

Guild, estimated that the retroactive clause of new contract will dump approximately $500,000 into laps of workers. Basing weekly payroll for office workers at $100,000 weekly, Pratt figured that increase will call for additional pay of approximately $7,000 weekly, or some $360,000 annually.

The WLB also approved terms and conditions of contract which guarantees earned vacations, night premium pay, preferential hiring, cumulative sick leave, etc. Agreement extends over a two-year period beginning Jan. 1, 1944. The union already is preparing new proposals for submission to producers, covering the two-year period beginning next January.

Pratt stated that studios plan to begin computing amount of retroactive pay due SOEG members immediately. The new scales will be put into effect as soon as payroll departments can make the required changes. It probably will be several weeks, however, before retroactive checks will be ready for distribution.

New basic agreement was negotiated by Pratt at conference with company heads in New York in April, 1944. Execs agreed to various terms and wage scales, subject to approval by the WLB. Workers at Paramount and Warners are the only collarites not involved in deal.

MASS PICKET LINES TAKEN FROM GOLDWYN STUDIOS

Mass picket lines were removed from Samuel Goldwyn studio yesterday in compliance with temporary restraining order issued by Superior Court Judge Emmet Wilson. Lines, however, were immediately shifted to RKO-Pathe lot in Culver City, with reports that strike leaders plan to shift mass lines daily from one studio to another.

Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, declared he never had been served on the restraining order, but that lines at Goldwyn were switched after some of the pickets had been served. He declared if new injunctions are sought by the producers the lines will be shifted from one studio to another until the restraining order comes up for hearing in Superior court on June 15.

Sorrell said preparations had been made to cover Metro yesterday, but that lines were switched to RKO-Pathe when plans became known and heavy police details were stationed at Metro. Sorrell talked yesterday with L. P. Lindeloff, international president of the Brotherhood of Painters. He said Lindeloff was handling arrangements for meeting of international presidents of various unions in Washington to demand a showdown on issuance of studio charters by Richard Walsh, IATSE prexy.

There was little other strike activity yesterday, with studio executives insisting that production was fast approaching normal and that there had been a steady improvement in conditions weekly since the walkout started 13 weeks ago.

WHITE COLLARITES TO HAVE FEMME GUILD BOSS

The 2,500 studio white collarites affiliated with Screen Office Employes Guild will have a femme boss Tuesday when Lillian Hurwitz is elected president to succeed Harry Phillips. Miss Hurwitz, nominated without opposition, will be officially elected at the general mass meeting at the Woman's Club of Hollywood.

The only contest in the election is a three-cornered battle for the vice-presidency and in election of delegates to two central labor bodies. Florence Coates, Republic; Helen McLeMore, Universal, and Bill Douglas, Technicolor, are competing for the veepee spot.

Alice Olcott, 20th-Fox, was assured of election as recording secretary when Marjorie Ramsey, Universal, also nominated, withdrew from the race. Miss Ramsey withdrew to assure the 20th-Fox unit of representation among the officers.

Glenn Pratt remains as business representative. Allan Mansfield was selected as assistant business representative, succeeding Bernard Lusher, now in military service. Herta Uerkvitz will be installed as conductor and Lester Baum as warden. Flo Contini is unopposed for re-election as financial secretary. Other incumbents assured of election are Leon Suckloff as treasurer, and Marjorie Comitti as trustee.

NEWSREELERS MISS OUT ON BIGGEST YARN OF PARLEY

San Francisco, June 7.—The first real breath of excitement in this incredibly dull conference in weeks came today with nary a newsreel on hand to film it. The biggest story of the conference broke with a press conference by Secretary Stettinius at which it was revealed the deadlock on the security council voting question had been broken by a neat formula which permits any nation to bring a dispute before the council and makes the great concession of denying any single member of the council the right to prevent, alone, consideration and discussion of a dispute or situation laid before it.

The consensus was that the deadlock had been broken and that the issue of "independence" or "self-government" which General Romulo of the Philippines delegation had promised to fight out on the floor of the conference—maybe for some fine footage—could be expected to be settled, too.

There was drama a-plenty at the Stettinius confab. When he said, "Ladies and gentlemen, I am delighted . . . " he could go no further. Cheers and applause stopped him. The ensuing mad rush to telephones would have been picture material in itself.

Otherwise the conference about hit a new bottom for the entertainment industry crews. Trek of newsreelers to Los Angeles for the Patton-Doolittle cerebration Saturday got under way. Lighting Expert Pete Mole was among those leaving and will return Tuesday. Francis Alstock, Office of Inter-American Affairs newsreel chief, plans to leave Washington by plane tomorrow and to spend Saturday in Hollywood. The filming of the Danish delegation, 50th of the United Nations, was postponed again.

The United Nations theatre continues to be jampacked with its nightly showings, another motion picture contribution to the conference. Tonight will feature a studio preview of Paramount's "Miss Susie Slagle"; Friday night will feature a preview of "The Way Ahead," distributed by 20th-Fox, while Saturday night will offer a preview of Metro's "Son of Lassie."

No date has been set for the finale of the conference, but today's deadlock breaking suggests the mark of next Friday, June 15, for President Truman's speech and the charter signing is quite possible.

Request comes because very few units in this field have voluntarily gone to the ODT and offered to cut travel in the manner worked out by the major baseball leagues and other groups. Traveling shows, bands, etc., are in the units ODT aimed the warning at.

Statement was included in an overall explanation by ODT on the need for cutting down because of the heavy movement of soldiers this summer.

OH, GENERAL, WHAT YOU DID TO NBC'S DIGNITY

NBC got a swift kick in the dignity Saturday night by a man who is no green hand at roughing up the high 'n' mighty. Its mikes wide open across the country for an extemporaneous talk at L. A. Coliseum by General George Smith Patton, the network —and all by its nationwide self, if you please—took the worst beating of its long and dignified career.

Not once, but twice the fighting tank general exploded his emotions with the use of the inhibited "g—d— it" (must maintain our respectability) and out of sets in millions of homes it must have scorched the ears of startled listeners. Can this be NBC, and what goes here? Church people must have shuddered like the JOHN ALTON, Republic cameraman who filmed studio's "Love, Honor and Goodbye," reports he has perfected a new cutting machine which reduces editing time by one-half and will save considerable expense in editing. Cameraman has applied for patent, and formal announcement of the instrument appears in current issue of International Photographer. Machine differs from the Moviola now in use, according to Alton, although it retains some of its basic characteristics. It has the projecting light, motors, sound box, magnifying glass or miniature screen, but instead of a single track for an image, it has two or more tracks which can be operated individually or together. Each track projects image on same screen, but only one image at a time is visible. There is an automatic changeover from one to another when all are running, either through use of shutters, or through any other mechanical device adapted for this purpose. Motors run in both directions and are individually controlled. At present, says Alton, there are two models in design: Model A, with two tracks only for pictures of lower budgets, and Model B, with several tracks for films of higher budgets.

RENE CLAIR, due to leave New York over weekend for Europe, where he expects to conduct a survey of motion picture industry in his native France, and England, is making plea for American motion picture companies to allow friendly nations to develop their own film industries, without trying to swamp these countries with American product to the extent respective nations will not be able to embark upon their own film production. Such a move on Americans' part, Clair believes, would help to set the stage for another world conflict, due to bitterness which would arise. French director's plan is predicated upon thought that exchange of ideas in the picture industries of the various nations will help to make these countries understand one another all the better, and that for America to give precedence to other countries' own product within their respective territorial confines will permit these countries to swell their badly-depleted exchequers so that they may have money to indulge in foreign trade.

WHAT was considered one of the fastest songwriting jobs for a special broadcast may develop three song hits for Maj. Meredith Willson of Armed Forces Radio Service. Intended as a running gag in melody for the "Dick Tracy" platter for GI's, "Happy, Happy, Happy, Happy, Happy, Happy, Happy, Happy, Happy, Happy Wedding Day" has struck the fancy of the Andrews Sisters and they'll record it with Bing Crosby for Decca. The romantic ditty, "Whose Dream Are You," will also be cut by The Groaner, and the sleeper of the lot is believed to be "What Am I Going To Tell My Heart," written for "Tracy" but not quite finished in time. If all three click it will set some kind of a record for a rush job on a one-time shot.

On tropic isles the sunlight smiles
Throughout the livelong day.
There is no rain, nor ache nor pain,
And all is blithe and gay.

In bright sarongs the merry throngs
Of dancers deck the scene.
In fact, it seems a land of dreams,
As pictured on the screen.

In colors quaint the scripters paint
A scene of blissful glows,
A paradise to film fans' eyes,
But not to G. I. Joe's.

TRADESHOWN at Los Angeles, June 8, 1945. Running time: 113 MINS.

The drama, music and frenzy that featured the Volsteadian era along Broadway have been captured to a marked degree in "Incendiary Blonde." Lavish spectacle in the production numbers, brilliant Technicolor, top performances and direction have been used to lend interest for present-day audiences to this story of Texas Guinan. George Marshall's direction has taken every advantage of the colorful incidents in the Guinan career, weaving together the material for a top credit. Joseph Sistrom backs the material with generous production appurtenances that add to the box office values.

Betty Hutton, as the "hello, sucker" girl, never has been seen to better advantage. She punches over the nostalgic songs and gains considerable stature as an actress in the dramatic portions with a sock portrayal. Opposite her is Arturo de Cordova, registering solidly.

The screenplay is based on tragedy, but scripters Claude Binyon and Frank Butler have played up the comedy and tuneful incidents as a balance against the heavier phases so that story moves forward without depressing. Picture begins its story in 1909 at the time Miss Guinan joins a wild west show to help recoup family fortune. It shows her rise to stardom in that entertainment field and then carries her on to Broadway and success in musicals, to Hollywood as a western star, and back to New York for her night club days. Picture spends too much footage on the wild west show sequences, giving it a slow start, but remainder is unfolded swiftly.

Barry Fitzgerald, as Miss Guinan's father, competently socks over the role of the impractical Irishman whose get-rich-quick schemes play havoc with his daughter's love for de Cordova, Charles Ruggles is seen as Cherokee Jim, wild west show impresario and earlyday film director, doing an excellent job. Bill Goodwin grabs a smart credit as Tim Callahan, the man who served briefly as Miss Guinan's husband and aided her Broadway musical success. Albert Dekker, night club operator; Mary Phillips, The Maxellos, Maurice Rocco and several uncredited players each contribute to the fine performances and entertainment.

The outstanding musical direction by Robert Emmett Dolan, photography by Ray Rennahan, bright costuming by Edith Head, art direction by Hans Dreier and William Flannery and set decoration by Steve Seymour are among the technical jobs that give added values to the production.

Bedside Manner

(Comedy Drama)

UNITED ARTISTS RELEASE of Andrew Stone production. Producer-director, Andrew Stone. Associate producer, Henry S. Kesler. Screenplay, Frederick Jackson, Malcolm Stuart Boylan. Original story, Robert Carson. Photography, James Van Tree, John Mescall. Art director, Rudy Feld. Editor, Jimmy Smith.

CAST—Co-stars John Carroll and Ruth Hussey. Features Charles Ruggles, Ann Rutherford. Supporting players, Esther Dale, Grant Mitchell, Frank Jenks, Claudia Drake, Bert Roach, Renee Godfrey, Joel McGinnis, John James, Vera Marsh, Sid Saylor, Earl Hodgins, Mary Currier, Constance Purdy, Mrs. Gardner Crane, Joe Devlin, Dimitrios Alexis, Don Brody.

PREVIEWED at Fox Wilshire theatre, Los Angeles, Calif., June 8, 1945. Running time: 79 MINS.

Trim package of up-to-the-minute entertainment with planty of laughs, "Bedside Manner" is a well-constructed comedy-drama right down the popular alley and should hit a nice stride at box office. Film is a situation piece produced and directed in high key, the cast tossing inhibitions to the wind and throwing themselves wholeheartedly into the spirit which early is established and maintained until final fadeout.

Andrew Stone production, which he also directed, establishes as ranking comedians both John Carroll and Ruth Hussey, who co-star, and permits practically every other member of cast an opportunity to display his or her comedy wares. Essentially escapist fare, comedy is tempered with an emotional note in a few sequences, when Miss Hussey, as a doctor, is prevailed upon to stay over in her home town and operate on a girl in danger of losing her beauty through an accident at a war plant.

Motivating idea of picture is Miss Hussey's efforts to continue on to Chicago, where she intends to do medical research, after stopping off for a night to see her uncle, Charles Ruggles. Ruggles, a doctor so swamped with cases due to physician shortage that he's pill-happy, does his uptmost to convince his niece that she should remain with him and take over some of his cases, but though sympathetic to his plea the lady doc tells him she wants to have a job in which she can wear dresses after office hours, and she couldn't do this by staying on.

Plot thereafter is a series of stunts to keep the gal there, with John Carroll, test pilot at one of town's war plants, drawn in as a pantophobia case (fear of everything) to be Miss Hussey's star patient, lady doc believing herself responsible for his condition after he crashes into a tree while trying to get her to agree to stay on. An amusing doctor-patient romance is built up.

Script by Frederick Jackson and Malcolm Stuart Boylan, in their adaptation of Satevepost story by Robert Carson, provides ample opportunity for the two stars and actors in support to get the most out of their portrayals. Miss Hussey is lovely and practical in her role, which should lead the way to future comedy impersonations, and Carroll, making his first screen appearance since his release from army, is capital in a grandeloquently-styled part. Ruggles does one of his best pieces of acting, Ann Rutherford is a demanding girl friend of Carroll's, and balance of cast is likewise first-rate.

Procter & Gamble

By JACK HELLMAN

"What has Hollywood to be afraid of?" The question was posed by Gilbert Seldes, director of CBS television programs, who is passing a few days here enroute to Portland where he'll speak at the Institute for the Study of Radio. Television isn't going to kill anything, little less pictures or broadcasting, he theorizes. There has been some talk back east of combining film with video in theatres, he offered, such as having televised commercial radio shows or sports events supplant B pictures as the second feature. Seldes readily admits that most answers become problems and that only the engineers can speak with authority on the technological elements. The other phases of tele then must be pure guesswork. He believes that CBS will be using color within the year but that a national television network still is 10 years away. Hollywood's future is assured when sight and sound are wedded, he holds, and most of the big dramatic and comedy shows will be fed the cables from here. Production of dramatic shows, whether live or on film, still is in the experimental stage and, in his opinion, with miles to go to achieve the finished article.

It was a cinch to be snapped up after the big heave by NBC's Niles Trammell and in it goes next season to the everlasting delight of the big red network. If you haven't already pegged it we're referring to "Life of Riley," that wacky bit of biz starring Bill Bendix. Procter & Gamble bought it over the weekend for Teel and that means "Gaslight Gaities," which NBC treated like an in-law, goes over the side. The Irv Brecher package will have pretty much the same contents —Don Bernard, director; Lou Kosloff, music; John Brown, Conrad Binyon and Sharon Douglas, chief supporting players, and Scripters Ashmead Scott, Alan Lipscott and Ruben Ship. Fall takeoff has been timed to coincide with the return of Bendix from picture location in Puerto Rico. Stan Joseloff negotiated the deal for Biow and George Gruskin acted for the Morris agency.

STATION BREAKS . . . What's this we hear about Ward Wheelock signing Mickey Rooney to a postwar radio contract and bonusing him with $15,000 (payable on demand) for joining the Campbell soup crowd. His would be a third show supplementing Jack Carson and Reader's Digest. . . . The CBS sustainer, "Casey the Press Photographer," will fill out the eight weeks in the Sinatra spot from July 11 through Aug. 29 after the Ray Noble session completes five weeks of the cycle. . . . "Mayor of the Town" takes six-week layoff from July 14 to Aug. 25, and loses five minutes in the fall to the Bill Henry newscast, airing east and west at 8:30 p. m. . . . Textron starts a dramatic series on CBS Aug. 18, which replaces the Helen Hayes series on Mutual. . . . Topping the latest Crossley list is Walter Winchell, followed by Bob Hope and Lux Radio Theatre. . . . Guest for the past season, Groucho Marx will play host the next.

Nothing new in radio, you say? How about Leith Stevens, for years one of the better radio maestros, directing the summer sub for "Info Plizz?" Sounds like smart casting for who is better equipped to hold rein on a musical show than a music man. It also will mark the first time, we believe, that Stevens or any other time-beater swapped his stick for a soft seat in the glass menagerie. Star of the show is Rise Stevens, who will solo numbers from filmusical scores under the wand of conductors who presided over the original sound track. Bobby Dolan leads off June 25 in tunes from "Going My Way," to be followed by Maurice Stoloff in "Song to Remember" and later Leo Forbstein in the Gershwin picture and Al Newman on the "State Fair" ditties. Murray Bolen of the Compton agency will have supervisory authority.

Discrimination against radio at press conferences of national figures should arouse the dander of the network news chiefs but somehow or other they're taking it lying down. In the entire coverage of the United Nations Conference to date we believe the outstanding broadcast would have been the press interview with Anthony Eden and V. Molotov. The newsmen, newsreelers and photogs hopped on it with both feet and their frenzied efforts were justified. Just why a "pooled" mike wasn't set up can be charged off to the unwillingness of the chain gang to make an issue of it. Interviews with the great and near-great can be conducted without the old off-the-record dodge and what's fit to print is fit to be put on the air. Naturally the newsmen will fight any effort of the broadcasters to invade their "sacred rights" but in the interest of fair play and impartiality radio should be given the same shake at coverage as the type and shutter crowd.

HITCH HIKES . . . It has finally been decided to give the Andrews Sisters eight weeks off for overseas duty and starting July 1 from New York will come Curt Massey, Carol Bruce and Harry Sosnik's music. Producer Joe Rines will be in Gotham at the time but will be on layoff until Judy Canova returns from her holiday to do the first few broadcasts of the new season from the other seaboard. . . . Colgate may move "Theatre of Romance" to Hollywood for the stimulating effect of better star casting. . . . Client's reaction to the substitution of Ken for Wen Niles last week: "Has Prindle a brother?" . . . Bill Spier will produce the Dick Powell summer whodunit series for Fitch. . . . Ben Friedman, son of the late and great Dave, has been added to the writing staff of the Tommy Dorsey (Standard Brands) piece. . . . What's the mahoskis on Vic and Sade taking the P & G strip following Jack Kirkwood on CBS? We're just wondering what effect the night air will have on their funny biz.

ANDY RUSSELL WITH JOAN DAVIS WRAPS UP SWAN SHOW

Joan Davis show for Swan Soap is practically all wrapped up and ready to go to the post in the fall. Contracts are ready for signing by Andy Russell, who'll be secondary lead and featured vocalist. Previously set were Dick Mack as producer and Harry Von Zell, foil for Davis and announcer.

Given the option of remaining with the Sealtest show or casting their lot with Davis, Shirley Mitchell and Verna Felton chose the latter. Writers and music director still are to be selected.

Successor to Miss Davis on the Sealtest show will be chosen from the weekly change of guests to be used through the summer. One making the best showing gets the call as vis-a-vis to Jack Haley next season.

Hughes Starts 'Saint' In Producer Spot

Gorden Hughes starts "The Saint" series as producer June 20 on CBS and will hold the reins until William N. Robson returns from his Army mission in Germany. Summer substitute for Jack Carson will have Brian Aherne in the name role and the music of Leith Stevens. No other assignments have been made.

Will You Follow Through for Franklin Roosevelt?

He believed in the unity of the Big Three—not alone for military reasons, but for the establishment of a lasting world peace.

He believed in the Four Freedoms as a practical reality . . . in a World Charter and the economic principles that would make it work.

He believed that world prosperity and peace were dependent on American prosperity . . . sixty-million jobs.

He fought for the extension of the G. I. Bill of Rights to provide suitable training and reorientation of the returned veteran.

He was opposed to discrimination of any kind because he knew our future depended on the extension of democratic opportunity.

He believed in guaranteeing Freedom from Fear to our own American people—in sickness and health, in youth and old age.

President Harry S. Truman, in his first message to congress, said: "I will support and defend those ideals (so eloquently expressed by Franklin Roosevelt) with all my heart. That is my duty and I shall not shirk it."

It's Your Duty and Ours, Too!

That's why we pledge our wholehearted support to the President in carrying out the principles for which F.D.R. lived died.

But His Heritage Needs YOU To Make It Work!

It needs your membership in the HOLLYWOOD INDEPENDENT CITIZENS COMMITTEE OF THE ARTS, SCIENCES AND PROFESSIONS. It needs work and money for which to continue the fight. WIRED MUSIC IS SWEEPING COUNTRY service being "advertising at the point of purchase."

Recorded music, with interspersed product plugs, would be piped into the big markets with the charges to be borne by the advertiser. Where no advertised commodity is sandwiched in between recordings, there would be a flat service charge. Survey is being conducted in spots now serviced to determine its efficacy. If a favorable report is brought in, music will issue from speakers at all points of concentrated purchase throughout the country.

Latest survey is being conducted in the Los Angeles area to determine the feasibility of installing music dispensers in the markets around town. Already in operation in approximately 50 food emporiums in the Oakland area, the wired waltzes are proving practical as boosters in product-pushing for housewives.

Setup demands no coin on part of market owners. Operation is paid for by selling commercial plugs, similar to radio advertising, at 12 to 15 minute intervals. Mrs. George Spelvin goes into her favorite grocerteria and gets a concert, broken at intervals with suggestions that she look on such and such counter for Ipswitch Mayonnaise. No definite results have been tabbed to any extent on the new operation, but there haven't been any beefs from the grocers yet, either.

Already in operation in southern California are several music units in defense plants. Surveys have revealed there seems to be a "fatigue period" approximately every two hours. Method of getting over this letdown is to pump about 10 or 15 minutes of music into the plant at that time. Resultant production charts have shown that the cleffs are here to stay in those factories employing music.

Another survey on foot is to see how soothing salon concerts will aid the jittery in doctors' offices. In time it is planned that no farseeing medico will allow his patient to be content with only three-year-old magazines.

Several of the swank dress shops in the Beverly Hills-Wilshire region have installed recording systems and play tunes at intervals, both for the benefit of the customers and the employes. At least one spot is reported to spin platters while the femme customers watch several models display the latest thing in flimsy underthings.

Historically, music for work is nothing new, with galley slaves, chain gangs, sailors and even the pyramid and cathedral builders of early times reported by historians as doing their work to rhythmic chants. What the wired music will do is to bring it into all phases of work where it possibly can be of some aid.

Talk of installing the systems for home use also has been made. However, it is out of the question for the time being, because the telephone company controls the lines. Expense of installing, plus the cost and immediate lack of equipment puts the domestic touch far out of sight for some time to come.

While Musak is the top company in the field at the moment, others are coming up. One such company is World Broadcasting and Transcriptions, which is parent company for Decca. Several others are reported forming and are going in for the commercial as well as the entertainment accounts. They are all making their recordings on platters now, but should the music on wire spools come into broader use, chances are John Q. Public is going to wind up with wired music.

Radio Network Plugs

Top plug tunes of the week, as logged over the major networks, NBC, CBS, Blue and Mutual, are being LISTED ALPHABETICALLY, not numerically, under a new accord between the music publishers and song pluggers union, as a means to curb the payola evil. Thus, it is figured, the normal competitive methods, sans artificial stimulation to get on top will tend to eliminate some of the petty bribery, etc.

GREAT USE OF FILM IN PROPAGANDA REVEALED

Washington, June 10.—Tremendous use of motion pictures and radio for foreign propaganda in this country is reflected in the report of the Attorney General to Congress today on the administration of the foreign agents registration act. The report lists 17 press, radio and motion picture services, 17 distributors of films, photographs and radio transcriptions, and other outfits doing some of this work in connection with their major propaganda activities.

Some of the outfits are domestic working for foreign principals. Others are direct agencies of the foreign governments. Some of the persons required to register under the law are business men here as commercial representatives. Most of them are out to influence public opinion in America in favor of their particular governments, or even in favor of one faction in a particular country.

Britain lists the most direct "agents" in the motion picture field. College Film Center, Cosmopolitan Films, Film Review, Rarig Motion Picture Co., Swank Motion Pictures and Visual Education Service, Inc. Russia has Artkino Pictures and Pic Films, Inc.; Canada has a branch of its National Film Board, and most other countries have films available for private and public showings. There are dozens of little outfits which will supply press or radio material and also films to plug the particular cause they favor.

All operate openly, so long as they are registered with the Department of Justice. For example, until it folded, the publicity outfit for the Yugoslav government in exile claimed it supplied newspapers and magazines, distributed pictures, gave information for books written by Americans, aided in production of the film "Chetniks," worked with Sigmund Romberg on an operetta laid in Yugoslavia, supplied radio material for March of Time, etc.

SOPHIE TUCKER TIES UP ESTATE OF KIN

Chicago, June 10.—Sophie Tucker, appearing here at Chez Paree, has been granted an injunction in New York preventing the City National bank of that city from transferring securities placed there by singer's late brother and business manager, Philip Abuza.

Action, handled by Sophie's attorney, A. J. Halprin, was aimed at entertainer's sister-in-law, Mrs. Leah Abuza. Value of between $200,000 and $300,000 was placed on securities, including stocks, bonds, certificates, mortgages, etc., by Sophie, who said Mrs. Abuza removed them from the bank's vaults the morning after Abuza died, last May 9.

The petition seeking injunctions against the bank and against anyone else seeking to remove the holdings, which represent a "sizable portion of her life earnings," was okayed by the New York Supreme court, Sophie said.

GEN. PATTON DOES THINGS TO NBC DIGNITY

knobs on the network control panel or the indecision of Joe Alvin, NBC's director of public events, who rode herd over the al fresco spectacle. "I had no script. What could I do?" gives him about as clean an out as one could hope for in such a dilemma.

The crowd which filled the amphitheatre (Danny Thomas called it a gopher hole) except for one corner spot took Patton's remarks in high glee, applauded and shrieked. No greater suspense was ever built up by Alfred Hitchcock than the pause by Patton when he searched for words (or rather expletives) to describe his feelings about the Japs. Every one was holding his breath, but he pulled neat switch and trailed off with . . . people! A master showman, Patton, who knows how to punch over a line without prissy contemplation or regard for the niceties of rhetoric. General Jimmy Doolittle played it straight and posied his traveling companion. It was Patton's show, with the military spectacle a close second.

For spectacular timing, smooth performance and nary a bug in the entire operation, the show that was put on by the Army in the field outshone anything done hereabouts in the memory of this generation of native sons and daughters. Low-flying planes that swung menacingly over the crowd on split-second cue, earth-shaking attacks by five giant tanks and exploding bombs and bizarre lighting effects by dozens of giant klieg left their impression in the minds of the thousands and will linger long in their memories. It so moved a New Yorker, he remarked, "Only Hollywood could put on a show like this." But it was the Army with the Hollywood infiltration.

The picture industry's part in the ceremonial, under Mervyn LeRoy's direction, ran a fair third. Those who p.a.'d specialties were Jack Benny as emcee, Judy Garland, Charioteers, Danny Thomas, Ella Logan, Jimmy Durante, Lena Horne, Frances Langford, Carmen Miranda, Bette Davis, Margaret O'Brien, Jeanette MacDonald, Lauritz Melchior, Enzio Pinza, John Nesbitt, Humphrey Bogart (as Doolittle), Edward G. Robinson (as Patton), the music of Lt. Col. Eddie Dundstedter's Army Air Forces band and Lt. Jimmy Grier's Coast Guard musickers. One of these times Hollywood is going to contribute something original.

Selznick Back, Will Resume 'Duel In Sun'

David O. Selznick returned to LA to resume production on "Duel In the Sun," interrupted by the strike. Selznick requested an immediate meeting of Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers to discuss matters negotiated by him for the society while back east. A huge advertising campaign is planned for "Duel In the Sun," $500,000 to be expended in advance of release alone.

Hillyer Takes 'Trail'

Lambert Hillyer will direct "The Lost Trail" for Monogram, with shooting slated to start June 18. Johnny Mack Brown will star with Raymond Hatton.

HOLLYWOOD BIGS PLAY VITAL PART IN HOMECOMING

Hollywood celebrities and executives played an important part in the two-day homecoming celebration for Generals George S. Patton and James Doolittle which wound up last night.

Final "P-D Day" occasion was a dinner at the Ambassador hotel to which the Hollywood personalities were invited in recognition of their contribution to the most spectacular celebration southern California ever witnessed.

Industry's efforts were praised last night by Mayor Fletcher Bowron as "an outstanding example of civic and patriotic effort." He expressed gratitude to Y. Frank Freeman who represented the industry on the citizens' committee.

Mervyn LeRoy was given the task of producing the dramatic Coliseum show which highlighted the program. Associate producer was Lt. Col. Clifford W. Macfarlane. Glenn Wheaton, Jerry Lawrence, Irving Brecher, Bill Ratigan and Leonard Callahan did script work. William Cannon and Bill Hebert were production assistants.

Screen and radio stars were enlisted by the Hollywood Victory Committee. Humphrey Bogart delivered a stirring narration depicting General Doolittle's briefing of his B-25 pilots on the Hornet before the first Tokyo raid; Edward G. Robinson introduced the General Patton sequence—key episodes for the capacity audience of 105,000.

Jack Benny emceed with Judy Garland opening the show by leading the audience in singing "God Bless America."

Special numbers were presented by Jimmy Durante, Danny Thomas, Carmen Miranda, Frances Langford, The Charioteers, Ella Logan and Lena Horne.

Bette Davis read General Patton's poem, "God of Battles." The Lord's Prayer was spoken by Margaret O'Brien. Jeanette MacDonald, Lawrence Melchior and Ezio Pinza joined in singing "The Star Spangled Banner."

H. L. Lewellen supervised erection of special set for the Coliseum. Walter Hoffman, Paramount, and Lou Witte, 20th-Fox, with staff of explosive experts, worked on simulated tank battle which introduced General Patton.

20th-Fox contributed trailers and p.a. system for show. Publicity was handled by an industry committee with Arch Reeve as chairman and Duke Wales actively in charge. On the staff were Don McDonald, Universal; W. C. Lewellen, Paramount, and Harold Medelsohn, Columbia, loaned by their respective studios.

All newsreels covered the celebration and there was complete radio coverage, Blue carrying welcome at City Hall and NBC the Coliseum show.

SKOURAS HAILS INDUSTRY AS SAVIOUR OF GREECE

New York, June 10.—Spyros Skouras, who returned last week from a trip abroad, yesterday thanked the American motion picture industry for making food shipments to Greece possible. "We have saved millions of lives," Skouras said at a press conference. "I believe that 3,000,000 of a Greek population of 7,500,000 have been saved from starvation through the intervention of the film industry.

"It was because I represent the film business that doors opened in the State Department and foreign ministeries abroad. This is an instance of what our industry can do in the way of human good."

Skouras stated that American industry has not yet recognized the tremendous job U. S. films have done in promotion of all U. S. commerce in foreign countries. "We've been the vanguard, the advance agents," he said, "yet there has been little awareness of this role by other industries."

Skouras said that aside from food the product which could do the most good for morale in wartorn nations such as Greece would be American films. "To help them forget the horrors of war," he added.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, June 10.—Cinema critic Efrain Huerta declares: "Dubbed pictures are a total failure and the lion foolishly stops its ears." Huerta doubtlessly refers to Metro's Leo, and he is right, as far as the failure of dubbed versions of Hollywood films offered to the public which patronizes the higher-priced cinemas of this city. But what about smaller cities and towns throughout the Mexican and other Spanish-speaking republics?

A new picture producing company (and they spring up over night in spite of raw stock shortage), announces it soon will begin shooting of "Souls of America," story based on the legend of the two snow-crowned volcanoes, the Iztaccihuati and the Popocatepetl, which rise like guards over our capital.

Porto Rican Mapy Cortes and Argentinian Hugo del Carril will co-star in Films Mundiales production, "A Gaucho In Jalisco." Jalisco, one of our states, must have some sort of magic. We have myriads of songs about Jalisco; the men of that part of our world claim to be the bravest, and the women the most beautiful of our territory. The Mexican cinema seems in accord, and our producers have released a number of films with the name of "Jalisco" in the title.

OWI ROCKED BY COIN CUT, SEEKS BUDGET PLAN

Washington, June 10.—Office of War Information officials, badly rocked by the action of the House Friday in slashing their appropriation to $18,000,000, still were unable to decide today how they best can spread the money around.

OWI was hoping the Senate would restore at least a substantial portion of the cut. In the budget for the fiscal year OWI asked $42,000,000. The House Appropriations Committee whittled this to $35,000,000 and then the House itself knocked out another $17,000,000, as a result of a Republican drive on the agency.

If the cut should remain the radio and film units would feel the blow heavily and the domestic radio and motion picture bureaus, which are largely contact points between the industries and the government, would come close to disappearing.

On a pro rata cut basis, the domestic branch would receive a total of $300,000 for all its activities.

LAST OF LUFTWAFFE SHOWN IN AIR FORCES SHORT

The question that was going the rounds during the latter days of the conquest of Germany: "What's happened to the Luftwaffe?" is answered once and for all in the Army Air Forces short, "The Fight For the Sky."

The Luftwaffe was destroyed, and the film shows the actual process of destruction. The fight for air supremacy over Europe is shown in actual combat shots of American fliers battling the German planes.

The close-ups of the air action were made possible by the "GASP" (gunsight aiming point) camera, mounted as standard equipment on all American fighter aircraft. "The Fight For the Sky" is direct action film, surpassing the best shots of the most intrepid newsreelers.

Film was produced from the combat footage under supervision of Lt. Col. Stephen Morehouse Avery by the 18th AAF Base Unit at Culver City.

Assisting in production were Capt. George Oppenheimer, Lt. Victor Kline and Lt. Thor Brooks. Narration is by Capt. Ronald Reagan. Picture is being released through the War Activities Committee and the Office of War Information.

Present at the screening was Lt. Jack Burkhart, who participated in the air battles depicted. He was there to answer any questions about the destruction of the Luftwaffe, but there weren't any. The film had answered them all.

Unless I've been crossed, the Warner outfit has not seen a proof of this advertisement. Those who know me will believe me when I say that this is a totally unsolicited statement. Those who don't know me will have to take my word for it.

On Wednesday night last, I saw a preview of a picture called, annoyingly enough, "Pride Of The Marines.". It's the story of Al Schmid, a marine who was blinded on Guadalcanal. In spite of the title, it's one of the finest films I have ever seen. In some respects, it is the finest.

It took courage to make this picture. Great courage. It says things we all feel, but only too rarely have the intrepidity to express. It is tomorrow's life on today's film. It is a brilliant achievement.

To producer Jerry Wald, who is turning out the best pictures in Hollywood today—to Delmer Daves, who directed—to Albert Maltz, who wrote it—and to John Garfield, who is magnificent as Schmid—my humble congratulations. And to Jack Warner, with whom I all too seldom see eye to eye, a sincere bow for his guts in sending "Pride Of The Marines" out under the Warner imprint.

I've seen a picture that came from the heart, and this is the only way I know to tell you about it. I'm leaving Warner's in a few months—so there are no axes to grind, no posteriors to be osculated.

"Pride Of The Marines" is a fine, fine job.

SUNSET-VINE SITE FOR BLUE CHAIN REPORTED

Blue Network's search for a Hollywood studio site is reported nearing an end, with most of the chain execs favoring Sunset and Vine. Negotiations have been conducted with Judge Harlan Palmer, owner of the northwest and southwest corners, and cue to a possible sale of the Music City site to the skein is the notice served on tenants of the building that store and office leases will not be extended beyond three months after V-J Day.

Don Searle, western division head of the Blue, has been reporting back to the home office on available locations, but high officials of the company are partial to the "crossroads" location, upon which would be erected a height-limit office building and facilities for broadcasting and television. Hollywood Chamber of Commerce has been exerting its influence to anchor the networks at Sunset and Vine, and Judge Palmer is said to be sympathetic to such a concentration of the industry.

INCREASING its sample size, C. E. Hooper is now issuing a one-month report on Pacific network shows as against the former practice of two-month survey. As an additional service to its clients a Hooperating Pacific network pocket piece is also being issued, similar to its national coverage. Topping the first 15 in the coast May report is Bob Hope with 26.6, followed by "The McGee's," Screen Guild Players, "Gildersleeve," Lux, Charles McCarthy, Walter Winchell, Hildegarde, Brice-Thomas, "Mr. D. A.," Bob Burns, "Crime Doctor," Abbott and Costello, Bing Crosby and Jack Benny. Advance ratings on the national Friday list (June 1) are on the minus side with exception of Durante-Moore, who gained fractionally. Amos 'n' Andy at 12.8 was off .1, "Duffy's Tavern" off 1 at 10.9, "People Are Funny" off 2.5 at 11.6, and Danny Kaye down 2.1 at 7. Judy Canova maintained the pace of the past few weeks at 11.6; down .6, and "Truth or Consequences" was unchanged at 13.2. Of the Sunday afternoon shows, all on the plus side, Andrews Sisters were clocked at 4.9, Charlotte Greenwood 4.8 and John Charles Thomas 8.5.

WITH procurement of materials for sets and costumes already a serious problem, Frank Ross is faced with new headache in preparing "The Robe" for production. RKO producer needs approximately 50 to 60 draftsmen to prepare sketches for sets, a job which will require their concentrated effort for several months, and most that RKO has ever had in past were 16 draftsmen, working at top speed. Difficulty now is that architects' offices are requiring the services of as many draftsmen as they can line up, and for last few months have been doing their best to make such jobs attractive to studio men, so that already a number of studio draftsmen have made changeover. Prospect is that more and more draftsmen will drop out from studio work, to align themselves with national architect offices which are making tremendous plans for postwar building, both in this country and abroad.

ANNUAL hegira of Broadway producers has begun with several of the legit rein-holders already here for the avowed purpose of picking up talent for forthcoming shows. Although the stage moguls make the trek faithfully each year, seldom do they ever arrive at more than one or possibly two castings—most of them winding up with no hired hands. Reasons given for this are that the highly-paid film employes are seldom lured by the less expensive profits of stage work, plus the fact the grind on Broadway is somewhat harder than facing the lenses. However, most of those hep to the situation believe the so-called "casting" being done by the Gothamasters is merely an excuse to spend several summery weeks on the Coast under the guise of doing business.

The last three shots were remoted by CBS from the beach dancery.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

Events of the past week have been of exceptional interest. I do not refer to developments in the Pacific war or to the political crisis in Japan, interesting as these are. I refer rather to a political drama that looms as something of more transcending importance. As Raymond Swing pointed out in an article in the latest issue of Atlantic Monthly, the physical power of the world now resides mainly in the United States and the USSR. He poses the question . . . "How will they use it?" He implies that they should use it for the common good if they are to serve their own best interests! In this connection, one of the great political facts of our day is widespread popular suspicion in this country about the motives of Russia, and vice versa. These suspicions may or may not be justifiable. But they exist, and that is the hard political fact. So long as they exist in a degree that will adversely influence national policy effective, Russo-American cooperation will be that much more difficult to achieve. This past week, accord among the big five about the veto issue at the San Francisco Conference, and what looks like the working out of an understanding for allied control of Germany, were received as good omens. These signs are, as I say, of transcending importance for the future peace of the world.

Detecting hardened felons in their dark careers of crime.
He solves a case of murder by the victim's derby hat,
A toothpick or a cigarette, or simple clues like that.
He casts his eagle optic on a footprint in the hall
And, slick and hardened though he is, the crook confesses all.
In ordinary life the crook would call his mouthpiece in
And beat the rap and go right back to his career of sin.
It is a leadpipe cinch to solve a homicide in fiction,
But it is something else again to wangle a conviction.

ing, and rushed back north for daily exhibition to delegates.

Special presentation reels were edited and narrated for each of the 49 delegations.

Compiled from material gathered by a special camera staff of five national newsreel companies, more than 100 individual stories have been handled here and flown back to San Francisco for showings at industry-operated United Nations theatre. Another unit in Hollywood assembled an overall record of the conference activities, while a third group selected and compiled shots of each delegation and addresses by its leaders.

At one period, work was being done simultaneously at four studios, laboratories and recording plants, with the entire industry represented by the personnel involved. Howard Dietz of Metro was chairman of the planning committee in New York, while Claude Lee of Paramount, officially represented the industry at the conference. Lee's liaison with the government was Col. J. Noel Macy of the State Department, and working with Lee in San Francisco was Glendon Allvine, of the Public Information Committee, eastern division. Organization and direction of camera and soundmen was assigned to Claude Collins, representative of the combined newsreels in Washington.

Allyn Butterfield of Metro headed the Hollywood production organization. From various studios Butterfield secured a staff which was augmented by appointment through Darryl Zanuck of several writers and film editors.

Gift reels, to be presented by Lee to the chiefs of the various delegations, are made on 16mm. films and are enclosed in gold-embossed leather cases. Films are offered with the compliments of the American film industry, no special mention being made of any individual company.

Another conference activity by the industry was arrangement of studio visits for hundreds of delegates and advisers who were able to spend a few hours in Hollywood. Lee and Colonel Macy scheduled the trips from San Francisco, while Arch Reeve, of the public information committee, handled arrangements here. The industry also is preparing to cooperate with Mayor Fletcher Bowron in handling Los Angeles tours for delegates at the close of the conference.

(Psychological Drama)

WARNERS RELEASE. Producer, William Jacobs. Director, Curtis Bernhardt. Screenplay, Arthur T. Horman, Dwight Taylor. Original story, Robert Siodmak, Alfred Neumann. Photography, Merritt Gerstad. Editor, David Weisbart. Art direction, Ted Smith. Set decorations, Clarence I. Steensen. Gowns, Milo Anderson. Music, Frederick Hollander. Orchestral arrangements, Jerome Moross. Musical director, Leo F. Forbstein.

TRADESHOWN at studio, June 8, 1945. Running time: 85 MINS.

Well-handled suspense elevates this Humphrey Bogart starrer into the capital psychological murder tale category, with corresponding box office grosses to be anticipated. Directed skillfully by Curtis Bernhardt from slick tailored script by Arthur T. Horman and Dwight Taylor, picture early captures a mood of menace which carries through entire plot, dealing with Bogart as a murderer, and provides 85 minutes of action-packed drama with few sagging moments.

Bogart returns to his familiar villainy in "Conflict," in which he murders his wife, Rose Hobart, to get her out of the way so he may have her young sister, Alexis Smith. Thereafter picture builds to an exciting climax, a psychiatrist and friend of the murdered woman, Sydney Greenstreet, utilizing tricks of psychology to crack the murderer. Articles which he knew his wife had with her when he killed her in the mountains mysteriously show up in the murderer's home, there is a phone call at a resort which the operator says was his wife, and even a pawn ticket with his wife's writing on the envelope is mailed him.

Star delivers one of his customary class performances as the troubled killer, who finally has to return to the scene of his crime to put his mind at rest and finds Greenstreet and the police awaiting him. Part is right up Bogart's alley, and is a departure from recent characterizations. Greenstreet makes the psychiatrist a convincing and compelling figure, matching the quality of Bogart's portrayal, and both Miss Hobart and Miss Smith are excellent in roles which they fit into perfectly. Balance of cast matches up.

Bernhardt gives further evidence of his ability to handle suspenseful drama with his direction of "Conflict," one of his best jobs to date. William Jacobs, too, demonstrates showmanship regard in his producership, lining up technical departments which pave the way to a smooth, finished production. Story was from an original by Robert Siodmak and Alfred Neumann.

Boston Blackie Booked On Suspicion

(Melodrama)

COLUMBIA RELEASE. Producer, Michel Kraike. Director, Arthur Dreifuss. Screenplay, Paul Yawitz. Story, Malcolm Stuart Boylan. Based on the character created by Jack Boyle. Photography, B. Meehan, Jr. Film editor, Richard Fantl. Art direction, Perry Smith. Set decorations, Fay Babcock. Sound recording, William Randall. Assistant director, James Nicholson.

CAST—Features Chester Morris, with Lynn Merrick, Richard Lane, Frank Sully, Steve Cochran, George E. Stone, Lloyd Corrigan, George Carleton, George Meader, Douglas Wood, George Lloyd.

REVIEWED at the Hollywood Pantages, June 11, 1945. Running time: 66 MINS.

This latest entry in Columbia's "Boston Blackie" series is a neat whodunit for the supporting market. Playing, direction, story have sufficient values to carry interest and the whodunit factors are worked out at a good pace. Chester Morris in the title role gets himself mixed up in murder, forgery of rare books and sundry other things calculated to keep him on the outs with the law until the chips are all in.

Morris, aiding a friend, poses as a bibliophile in the auction of a rare tome. When it's discovered to be a forgery, Morris sets about recovering the money paid for it, but just before he collars the forger, latter is murdered. Morris is arrested but escapes, assumes the bibliophile guise to avoid the police and continues the search for the killer, from whom he has recovered the money. Narrow brushes with the law and with the crooks keep things moving until Blackie finally solves the crime and clears himself.

Lynn Merrick turns villainess for the femme lead as the murderess being sought by Blackie. Aiding the heavy work are Steve Cochran and George Meader. Helping Morris are George E. Stone and Lloyd Corrigan. Richard Lane again crosses swords with Boston Blackie as Inspector Farraday, while Frank Sully is the police sergeant.

Arthur Dreifuss directed the Michel Kraike production capably, and Paul Yawitz did a good script job on the Malcolm Stuart Boylan original. Photography by George B. Meehan, Jr., and other credits are okay.

Geoffrey Massey, paratrooper in the Canadian R.A.F., who has just arrived from Germany for a month's furlough, enroute to the Pacific where he volunteered to be sent, although his three years of service entitled him to a discharge. . . . Jerry Dale and Ed Peskay still are stunned by the shocking news of Buck Singer's sudden death—they had been with him all afternoon and he had just left them to take a nap before rejoining them for dinner. . . . Wonder why Arthur Freed isn't taking advantage of Lucille Bremmer's current visit here, to garner advance publicity on "Ziegfeld Follies?" She's making no contact with the Metro publicity department and is cold-shouldering the press. . . . Ruth Lee Taylor, reunioning with her groom, Col. Paul Zuckerman, for the first time in three years at the Warwick. . . . Few people seeing Wallis Clark, the newest "Father Day" of "Life With Father," realize that he is the son-in-law of the late Arthur Byron, whose farewell appearance as "Polonius" in John Gielgud's "Hamlet" was on the stage of the same Empire Theatre back in 1936.

ADD ARRIVALS: Irene Hervey and Allan Jones at the St. Regis. . . . Lucille Bremmer, Arthur Freed and Sol Lesser at the Hampshire House. . . . Dorothy Garland at the Essex House. . . . Amos 'n' Andy at the Savoy Plaza.

NOW I'VE HEARD EVERYTHING DEPT.: Hollywood celebs coming to NY are amazed at the fan adulation they receive on this end, which is so much more intense and hysterical than the blase attitude of the coasters, with the exception of a few gaping tourists. Here in the East, loyalty is maniacal, as epitomized by two fans, who, within my ken, for nine years have the sidewalk concession in front of every hotel and restaurant, breathlessly awaiting the "exits and entrances" of every visiting star.

When morbid curiosity prompted me to ask one of them, now grown to man's estate (he must be at least 21), why he spent his every waking hour chasing movie stars, he replied with this classic explanation: "Well, it's a good, clean outdoor life!"

SUCH IS FAME! Jack Kirkland came into the Stork Club the other night and the new captain at the door, not recognizing him, handed him the brush-off with, "Sorry, no reservations left." Whereupon Jack identified himself as Patricia Kirkland's father, and the rope was removed.

A "GARLAND" FOR DOROTHY: Judy Garland's sister, Dorothy, who is dropping the name of Garland, to establish her own identity as "Miss Dorothy" (courtesy of Russell Birdwell, Inc.) auditioned for the press at the Colonnades in the Essex House yesterday and made a fave impression. This middle of the three Garland soeurs (Sue, the eldest, broke up the act eight years ago when she married) is also clever in not bing the least bit imitative of Judy. She has her own style, and although being Judy's sister will undoubtedly be an "open sesame" to Broadway biggies, she'll stay there on her own. She's here on a limited budget and says she's determined to land a job before the bankroll runout. But from my crystal bowl, I don't think there'll be any SOS to the family coffers on the coast.

FILM TECHNICIANS TO ORGANIZE 16MM FIELD

Taking cognizance of the rapid expansion of the 16mm. picture field, Film Technicians Local 683 has started a drive to unionize commercial processing laboratories. It was stated that jurisdiction of Local 683 extends over all western states and that when commercial processing reaches sizable proportions it may become necessary to send representatives to other cities to organize and consolidate the work.

Following a survey of commercial processing by Business Representative John R. Martin and Secretary Norval Crutcher, following plan for organizing commercial establishments was submitted to the 683 membership:

"Members in plants now organized to receive C membership status, but shall be guaranteed against being displaced by reason of seniority as long as they are employed by the specific laboratory which was organized at the time they obtained membership in the local. These provisions to apply also to servicemen entitled to return to work at the specific laboratory in which they were formerly employed."

Big rush in the 16mm. field is expected to start as soon as the government lifts restrictions on distribution of film and other supplies. Many companies now are being organized to distribute 16mm. films in schools, churches, etc.

NLRB MAY ORDER DECORATORS POLL QUIZ

The National Labor Relations Board is expected to order a local hearing on the recent election of studio Set Decorators it was indicated yesterday, as NLRB officials prepared to submit their recommendations to Washington. Should the Board, however, disallow challenges of the IATSE and Producers and order ballots of striking Decorators counted it was stated, a hearing would not be necessary if it was disclosed all strikers had voted for Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421.

Strikers cast a total of 62 votes to 50 for the IATSE. If all strikers voted for affiliation with Local 1421, as is claimed by the Conference of Studio Unions, the strikers still would have a majority even if some challenges were allowed on their last-minute eligibility list.

Ballots were sealed after all but one had been challenged either by the strikers, IATSE or Producers. The lone ballot was then challenged by the NLRB. Board representatives have been investigating qualifications of some strike replacements who were voted by the LA as Decorators, but it is understood claims are so conflicting they will be submitted to Washington. If hearing is ordered here, individual voters probably will be called to testify as to their experience and qualifications as Decorators.

There was little other strike activity yesterday, although Building Trades groups met to discuss picket lines, etc. It is understood there is a difference of opinion among some of the downtown crafts as to crossing picket lines to deliver supplies to studios. Some teamsters were reported making deliveries, with others refusing to cross the lines.

Talks convinced him there is a definite opportunity for a constant exchange of American and Mexican films, as well as an interchange of top players from both countries.

"Song of Mexico," recently completed by James A. FitzPatrick for Republic, was produced entirely in Mexico, in both English and Spanish. Company also has deal with same producer to make another picture in the Fall, this probably to be filmed in Cuba.

GENERALS CLIP B.O. FOR 25G; TWO MG PIX GROSS $134,500

Local first-run houses screened a special trailer up to 6 p.m. Saturday urging attendance at the Coliseum, which in effect amounted to theatres dipping into their own pockets to further the patriotic celebration.

Despite cut in box office grosses, Los Angeles first-runs are heading for great $276,000 overall take on the current week. Of this figure, Metro will claim approximately $134,500. Studio's "Valley of Decision" finished its first week last night at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Ritz theatres with estimated $69,000. Another Metro bill, "Between Two Women" and "Main Street After Dark," is heading for sock $65,500 at the Chinese, Carthay Circle, Loew's State and Fox Uptown.

"Salome, Where She Danced," is only fair at the Pantages and RKO Hillstreet at estimated $32,500 coming up for the week. "The Unseen," single-billing at the Hawaii theatre on Hollywood blvd., is catching a snappy $8,500 for its initial seven days. Pop-priced engagement of "The Song of Bernadette" at the Four Star is heading for neat $4,500 or better on its first week.

Among the boldovers, "Pillow To Post" at Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern theatres, is sighting for possible $34,000 for second and final frame. Republic's anniversary bill at the Guild, United Artists and Wilshire, consisting of "Flame of the Barbary Coast" and "Earl Carroll's Vanities" is steady at estimated $19,500 on its second week. "Affairs of Susan" at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramounts is coming through with okay $22,500 estimate for its third and final week.

RAW STOCK RATIONING END BY JANUARY 1, SOONER SEEN

allocations as soon as possible. Only two still remaining for film are L-233 (controlling types of production at the manufacturers' level), and L-178 (allocating 35mm. to commercial users).

Right now only about 29,000,000 feet of stock stand between Hollywood and no rationing for the third quarter. WPB allocated 271,000,000 feet to the studios.

"In setting up our policy," said Adams, "we have taken the position that when there are 300,000,000 feet available per quarter for all the big producers, plus 100% for the class C producers, and for Army, Navy and other government claims, order L-178 can be revoked."

August apparently is the month which will tell the story. Adams said that some time that month he will have the complete story of requirements for the fourth quarter, plus the estimated production figures. The crucial point is summer raw stock production.

"Last year," Adams pointed out, "over 50,000,000 feet of production were lost during the third quarter." This year it is hoped that the loss due to vacations and other causes will be down to 30,000,000, because raw stock manufacturers have agreed to go all out in the production of 35mm. and X-ray film, even at the expense of other types.

If the production goal can be met, according to Adams, the fall situation will be much brighter than at any time since the beginning of the war—again barring unexpected military contingency.

Other highlights of the conference: FEA, which has been given 38,000,000 feet for the third quarter for overall foreign allocation, has assigned no raw stock to Russia. That is because Russia is not at war with Japan and therefore not eligible for lend-lease stock. In addition, Russia did not receive much of the 15,000,000 feet allocation created for it at the beginning of the second quarter.

Adams said he had no definite information about the raw stock production in Russia, but that last January he understood total facilities operating there could turn out less than 90,000,000 feet annually. The big Russian raw film factories in the Ukraine were smashed up by the Germans. He said Russia has not offered to buy raw stock for cash yet.

For the third quarter, England has been allocated about 1,500,000 feet of color film, but no black-and-white. Britain will continue to get celluloid base from this country and do its own black-and-white coating.

The Agfa factory at Leipsig was found to be intact when our army took over. However, the city is in the area since turned over to Russian military control, so that its production probably will flow to the Soviet picture studios.

J. Arthur Rank made direct application for stock as an independent producer, and did not appeal through the British Embassy. He has received allocation for the third quarter based on his annual average use.

SCREEN PLAYERS ARE HANDING CHIEFS DEMANDS

Screen Players Union was advised yesterday that copies of union's wage demands now are being distributed to various producers for their consideration. Business Representative Mike Jeffers said Fred Pelton stated these would be analyzed by execs and that company representatives would be ready to resume negotiations with SPU in about 10 days.

It is understood studio heads are not opposed to making some adjustments in pay minimums for extras, but majority do not favor request that minimum for all extra work be fixed at $16.50. Current scale for players working in mob scenes now is $5.50, with regular extras drawing $11. Minimum for dress extras is $16.50. Old scale for cowboys called for $11.50, but riders have been refusing to work unless paid $16.50.

Jeffers also announced that SPU has filed application with the Associated Actors and Artistes of America for a local charter and made application for affiliation with the State Federation of Labor and the Central Labor Council. A letter was received yesterday from Prexy C. J. Haggerty stating Federation would be glad to have SPU as a member after its affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

Deadline for former B members of the Screen Actors Guild to affiliate with SPU without the payment of an entrance fee is midnight Thursday.

ACTORS' GUILD AND EXECS NEARING PAY ACCORD

Screen Actors Guild and major companies are reported nearing the inking stage on basic agreement revisions covering minimum wages and working conditions for day players, stock and freelance actors. While clauses on which tentative accord has been reached and counter proposals of producers will not be reduced to writing until tomorrow or Thursday, it is understood deal will call for substantial tilts for all classifications, including singers and other groups which transferred to A-J membership when the B classification was dissolved.

Several of proposals were discussed by SAG board of directors last night, but details will not be made public until various amendments to current agreement have been reduced to writing. One studio executive declared that if proposals are accepted they will add several hundred thousand dollars to cost of production annually.

One tentative proposal calls for increasing minimum of day players from $25 to $35. If current ratio of four times the daily take for day players is continued for freelancers, minimum for that group would be tilted to $140 per week. It is understood deal also would call for a boost in pay of stock players, who now receive from $50 to $150 weekly.

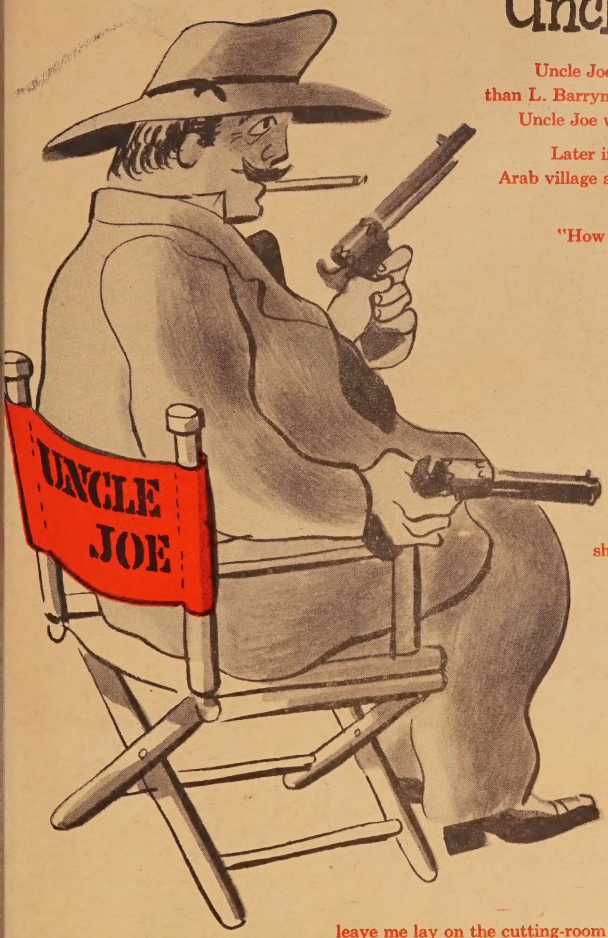
"you gotta know my Uncle Joe" ★



Uncle Joe is a great man and a great actor. He says he's a better actor than L. Barrymore. "But I don't get a chance, because my name is Joe Fit," Uncle Joe was complaining one day. "Why not get a new name for me?"

Later in the week I was going across the Metro lot when I passed an Arab village and one of the Arabs said, "You got a new name for me yet?" It was Uncle Joe . . . he was playing an Arab for a change.

"How about Montross Boyer?" I asked him. "I'll try it!" Uncle Joe said to his Arabian beard.

So if you soon hear of that great new character actor, Montross Boyer, it's only my Uncle Joe showing L. Barrymore how to act.

* * * * *

Uncle Joe played in Ingrid Bergman's new picture, Saratoga Trunk. He got hit over the head with a shovel. Gary Cooper was in the picture—he was a railroad builder, and Ingrid loved him. But they had arguments, and she kept throwing him over, and he went back to building railroads, and then Uncle Joe got hit over the head with that shovel. "My head ached like a gong," he told me . . . Speaking of Ingrid Bergman, when she was just out of Sweden and I was just out of Harvard, I interviewed her. I was supposed to interest her in America, and vice versa. "I luv this country," Ingrid said. I asked her what kind of pictures she liked. "Those people who throw pies at each other," she told me.

* * * * *

Uncle Joe wasn't very happy after he saw the rushes on Saratoga Trunk. "They decided they had too many railroad fights in it," he fumed. "So they leave me lay on the cutting-room floor! I shoulda stood in the plumbing business!" . . . Uncle Joe's in the new Joan Crawford picture. He's the arm of the dead man you see in the first scene. Unfortunately, the camera angle cuts off the rest of my Uncle Joe.

Stephen Longstreet's "My Private Life with the Stars"—with the author's own hilarious illustrations—is the freshest, funniest feature in any screen magazine. You find it only in MOTION PICTURE Magazine.

Uncle Joe is one of the many good reasons why more and more thousands of people prefer paying their 15c for every new issue of MOTION PICTURE . . . they like its wit, the chuckles it gives them . . . they know it's truthful . . . it's always bright.

Hedda Hopper, Sidney Skolsky, Fred Othman —all the people the movie-loving public wants to hear from—and about—are regular features of MOTION PICTURE . . . MOTION PICTURE Magazine looks ahead.

H'WD BIDDING ON B'WY PLAYS IN SHARP DECLINE

New York, June 12.—Indicating a trend toward original screenplays, Hollywood bidding for motion picture rights to Broadway plays registered a sharp decline during the first half of 1945. Only important play purchase reported thus far this year is "Oh Brother," since Paramount's deal for the purchase of "Dear Ruth" for $450,000 is being held up pending adjudication of Columbia's action against Norman Krasna.

Total screen right purchases since start of the year by studios total scarcely more than $350,000, compared to the total record-breaking sum of $4,500,000 for the full

LOCAL exhibition circles are watching closely anticipated invasion of the Southern California territory next month by Joe Blumenfeld, Northern California exhibitor. Rumor persists that Blumenfeld has tied up several local theatres, other than the Tower, downtown house which he takes over under lease July 1, to form a first run, day-date combination here. At one time Blumenfeld was planning to use the Million Dollar, Vogue and Pan-Pacific as a trio of day-daters, but purchase deal with Harry Popkin fell through, with the San Francisco exhib then reported to have made other deals to assure local showcases. There is a possibility that Blumenfeld may tie in with Robert Lippert, another Northern California exhib, for use of the Colony, which latter purchased recently. Understood Lippert has made preparations to enlarge the Hollywood boulevard house if it should be advisable when material becomes available. Million Dollar, Vogue and Pan-Pacific, which would have given Blumenfeld ideal outlets here, are now being negotiated for by other circuits. Metropolitan theatres, which is losing the Tower to Blumenfeld, is dickering for the Million Dollar, while Fox West Coast has its eye on the other two houses, indicating possibility of a new string of day-daters under their banner.

WESTBOUND travel, by plane or train, is due to become even more of a headache for civilians starting Aug. 1 and continuing through next March, when the Office of Defense Transportation further tightens up travel so battle-bound troops from Europe can be moved to western embarkation spots quickly. A particular bottleneck in travel presently is continued use of train facilities for unnecessary trips. With the vacation season here, motion picture executives, especially those in the sales field, figure it will be practically impossible for them to continue necessary trips around their districts west of Chicago. For months sales managers have been taking it on the chin while trying to maintain personal contacts with their branch offices, largely due to junkets by those without pressing business to transact. ODT has threatened to install travel rationing unless people without just cause stop unnecessary travel. Air travel west of Chicago after Aug. 1 will be impossible without high priority, ODT believes.

ALTHOUGH Joan Fontaine has been rumored for the lead in "The Bishop's Wife," which Samuel Goldwyn is scheduled to do next, it's a good bet she doesn't get the part. With the script finished on the yarn for which Goldwyn paid author Robert Nathan $200,000, it's a certainty that David O. Selznick will not let Fontaine go. Teresa Wright, VARIETY learns, may get the coveted role when she completes her chores in Par's "Too Good To Be True." William Wyler, who has been making Army films, probably will direct the film.

(CBS News Analyst)

The forthcoming meeting on June 15 in Moscow of representatives of the big three with Polish leaders is another good omen. Among these Polish leaders will be some who are not a part of the Russian sponsored provisional government of Poland notably the aged leader of the Polish peasant party Wincenty Witos and Stanislaw Mikolajczyk. At Yalta it was agreed that just such a meeting as that set for June 15 should take place to work out the basis of a new government for Poland. The meeting was never held. Instead a cold douche was thrown on the Anglo-American-Russian relations by the announcement that Russia had arrested 16 Polish leaders some of whom had been recommended by the British and Americans as participants in the projected Moscow discussions. Russia charged that these arrested Poles were guilty of diversionist activity against the Red Army. She produced no satisfactory evidence to support her charge. If her case was good she appears to have handled it badly. The Polish problem took on the aspect of a mess in perpetual motion. The meeting now called for Moscow is a sort of second time at bat for all concerned. A home run might be too much to ask for, a single would do. A foul ball would be offensive to olefactory senses everywhere.

They make the good old welkin

TRADESHOWN at 20th-Fox studio, Westwood, June 11, 1945. Running time: 96 MINS.

There isn't much to say about "Junior Miss" that hasn't already been said. It was a hit as a stage show and will be a hit as a picture. All the folks that wanted to see the play a second time and didn't will be accommodated by the film. All those who missed seeing the stage play will line up at the cinema box office now. Top of all which, the thousands of film fans who wouldn't have been stage audience, anyway, will get plenty of laughs and dramatic entertainment for their money.

Director George Seaton in doing the script and pointing the comedy passages has stuck pretty closely to the stage production. He has also succeeded admirably with the small amount of added material and the changes necessary to achieve picture continuity.

Peggy Ann Garner and Barbara Whiting as the "junior miss" of the title role and her close friend, Fuffy, reproduce excellently the touching 'teen-age mixture of pathos and absurdity that motivate the story.

Allyn Joslyn as the harassed father of the over-imaginative meddling junior miss is a distinct addition to the gallery of film parents. And his New Year's Day hangover will be readily recognizable by any drinking man in the audience. Sylvia Field, playing "straight" to him as the mother, gives a commendable performance.

Michael Dunne, the uncle who is not so erring as Peggy's penchant for melodrama demands, and Faye Marlowe furnish a highly satisfactory grade of romantic interest.

Mona Freeman, the elder sister, and adolescent boy friends—Scotty Beckett, William Frambes, Ray Klinge, Mickey Titus, Eddy Hudson and Mel Torme—are responsible for a full measure of the show's laughs.

William Perlberg's production leaves nothing to be desired.

Along Came Jones

(Comedy-Drama Western)

RKO RELEASE of an International production. Producer, Gary Cooper. Director, Stuart Heisler. Screenplay, Nunnally Johnson. Original story, Alan LeMay. Photography, Milton Krasner. Production designer, Wiard Ihnen. Set decorations, Julia Heron. Music score, Arthur Lange. Wardrobe, Walter Plunkett. Editor, Thomas Neff. Editorial supervisor, Paul Weatherwax.

CAST—Co-stars Gary Cooper and Loretta Young. Features William Demarest, Dan Duryea. Supporting players: Frank Sully, Don Costello, Russell Simpson, Willard Robertson, Walter Sande, Arthur Loft, Ray Teal, Chris-Pin Martin, Douglas Morrow, Erville Anderson, Lane Chandler, Lane Watson, Ralph Dunn.

TRADESHOWN at Westwood Village theatre, Westwood, Calif., June 11, 1945. Running time: 89 MINS.

Gary Cooper goes back to the Old West for his initial producer effort for International, in which he also stars with Loretta Young. "Along Came Jones" is the whimsical story of one Melody Jones, a roving cowpoke as inept with a gun as he is well-intentioned, who borrows plenty of trouble by doubling for an outlaw he's never met just to help a pretty gal out of a fix. Picture is loaded with laughs and a rollicking spirit, but any way you look at it, it's still a western, and will need the star names of Cooper and Miss Young to draw.

Nunnally Johnson, in writing the screenplay from story by Alan LeMay, played up comedy angles at every opportunity, and Cooper is picked up entering a town with his partner, William Demarest, where he is mistaken for the outlaw he later impersonates, part played by Dan Duryea. Entire citizenry of the town, thinking he's the fast-shooting killer, is careful to keep its hands always plainly in sight and away from its guns. Loretta Young finally saves paid from extinction by sheriff's ambush by shielding them with her rig, hustling them out of town, then sending them packing after they reach her ranch.

Reason for brash act is evidenced when she goes to barn, where Duryea, wounded in his latest holdup and for which entire country is searching for him, is hiding. It develops she and her brother were brought up with Duryea as kids, and she's more or less promised to him. Posse will take after Cooper, she figures, and Duryea then can escape in opposite direction.

Cooper, however, has certain native intelligence, despite his outward dopiness, backtracks to ranch, then is enmeshed in web Miss Young weaves by agreeing to pose as Duryea, with resultant action leading up to gal finally killing outlaw when he's about to finish off Cooper, human target for his fancy shooting.

Cooper plays part mostly for laughs and gets plenty of them, ably abetted by Demarest, as against all other members of cast playing straight. Miss Young is a beautiful heroine, and Duryea makes an impression as the outlaw, Don Costello and Willard Robertson standing out in support.

Stuart Heisler directed film in keeping with spirit of the script and William Goetz gave picture top production values. Milton Krasner photographed with good, low-key camera work, and balance of technical credits are on a par.

The Frozen Ghost

(Horror Drama)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Associate producer, Will Cowan. Director, Harold Young. Screenplay by Bernard Schubert and Luci Ward. Original story by Harrison Carter and Henry Sucher. Adaptation by Henry Sucher. Photography, Paul Ivano. Musical director, H. J. Salter. Art direction, John B. Goodman and Abraham Grossman. Sound, Bernard B. Brown. Technician, William Hedgcock. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman and Ray L. Jeffers. Dialog director, Edward Dein. Gowns, Vera West. Film editor, Fred R. Feitshans, Jr.

CAST—Lon Chaney, Evelyn Ankers, Milburn Stone, Douglass Dumbrille, Martin Kosleck, Elena Verdugo, Tala Birell, Arthur Hohl.

PREVIEWED at Universal Studios, Universal City, June 12, 1945. Running time: 61 MINS.

Hypnosis, suspended animation, mystery, murder and weird witchery in a waxworks provide chills for the horror fans in "The Frozen Ghost." Picture is an up-to-standard Universal spine-tingler that should keep the box office help reasonably busy.

Lon Chaney as a hypnotist who fears he is going mad, and Martin Kosleck as a doctor-waxworks operative who quite definitely is mad about his experiments in suspending human animation by the freezing process are the main source of shivers in the film. Villain of the piece is Milburn Stone in the part of false friend to Gregor the hypnotist. He and Kosleck plot to drive the hypnotist mad after the latter has been upset by the sudden death of a subject during an exhibition. Kosleck uses his "freezing" process to convince Chaney that he is hypnotizing people to death.

One woman victim actually dies and another is saved in a nick-of-time rescue scene just as Kosleck is about to toss her into the waxworks furnace.

Harold Young's direction gets limit thrill and suspense out of a story that is inclined to be too episodic. And Producer Will Cowan has whipped up a pretty good show out of low budget materials.

Evelyn Ankers gives a notable performance as Chaney's regular hypnotic trance subject. Other femme parts are excellently played by Elena Verdugo and Tala Birell.

Jungle Captive

(Horror Drama)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Associate producer, Morgan B. Cox. Director, Harold Young. Screenplay by M. Coates Webster and Dwight V. Babcock. Story by Dwight V. Babcock. Photography, Maury Gertsman. Musical director, Paul Sawtell. Art direction, John B. Goodman and Robert Clatworthy. Sound, Bernard B. Brown. Technician, Robert Pritchard. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman and A. J. Gilmore. Dialog director, Willard Holland and Phil Brown. Costumes, Vera West. Film editor, Fred R. Feitshans, Jr.

CAST—Otto Kruger, Amelita Ward, Phil Brown, Jerome Cowan, Rondo Hatton, Eddie Acuff, Ernie Adams, Charles Wagenheim, Eddy Chandler, Jack Overman, Vicky Lane.

PREVIEWED at Universal studio, Universal City, Calif., June 12, 1945. Running time: 64 MINS.

Why a story in which there is no jungle and in which captivity, if any, is a minor consideration, should be titled "Jungle Captive," is a cinema mystery in itself. The label may have some box office pull, but still is a misfit for a tightly dramatized chiller-diller mystery yarn.

Regardless of title, however, "Jungle Captive" is first class horror fare. It starts off with a gruesome murder in a morgue and develops rapidly, logically and with proached by David O. Selznick in New York, who outlined plans and purposes of the SIMPP, and he evinced an interest in the proposition. Selznick arranged for Nelson to come to Hollywood and met with committee group yesterday consisting of Samuel Goldwyn, David O. Selznick, Walter Wanger, Edward Small and Walt Disney. Nelson told them financial remuneration was not his prime purpose in taking the job; that would be arranged when he returned on June 29. He said he figured to do public service in coming into the picture business in a world-wide capacity, and that the financial end to him was a secondary element.

Nelson is bringing into the organization David M. Noyes who was his assistant in WPB and who will be veepee of SIMPP. Loyd Wright, who retired as prexy, will remain as general counsel for organization, with John C. Flynn continuing as executive secretary.

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, June 12.—A complete file of the films in which Mary Pickford starred has been offered to the Library of Congress for its permanent collection. The pictures form a valuable historic record in the development of the art of motion pictures.

It is virtually certain the Library will accept after rights for screening and copyright are cleared up, with an announcement to be made very shortly. In case there should be a snag, however, there is another bidder. The Museum of Modern Art in New York is said to be hot after the reels.

When the Alien Property Custodian announced the other day he was inviting bids on a batch of 50 old German and Austrian films seized in this country, he was not trying to sell a dead horse. The proposition has two distinct possibilities.

First of all, the offer would carry with it story rights. Thus studios, looking around for plots that don't cost too much, might be able to buy just what they want from some old German film.

Second is the case of television. The video outlets have trouble finding half-way decent films at a price they can pay. They might get hold of something in this batch and merely make an English language sound track.

Of course, there always are the foreign language picture houses to grab up screening rights. Since the Alien Property Custodian has a total of more than 700 films to sell, it seems a good bet that Hollywood, video and the arty theatres will all find something to their liking—cheap.

AAF motion picture section has been raw stock conscious for some months, according to Col. Robert Miller who succeeded Col. Bill Keighley as unit boss.

Discovering that a great waste of stock resulted from possession of training prints by all kinds of AAF groups which used them only rarely, AAF set up 12 exchanges throughout the country. Prints are borrowed on request and returned immediately after use. This cuts down the number of prints needed. Units may keep prints only if they can prove the pix are in frequent use.

* * * * * * * * *

AAF, by the way, has now speeded up the production of training films so that some are produced in as little as six weeks. Often the film is ready as soon as the new equipment is delivered.

A board of seven officers now serves in an advisory capacity to fill requests for training films. Only those that are absolutely necessary see the light of day on an AAF screen.

Lt. Col. William Wyler now is readying that new film which he went abroad to make. A tinter, the pic probably will emerge at about four reels. Wyler shot most of it during his nine months in Italy and southern France and it is being angled so it can be shown successfully on commercial screens.

A prose-poem fills the sound track on part of "The Total Glory," the British-American film on the Western Front, to be released shortly. Laurence Olivier was first tested as the narrator, but his voice did not come through in the way hoped. So the voice of another British actor will do the job in the final production.

Most of the commentary for the film consists of voices of participating GI's and officers, with running comments by General Dwight Eisenhower scattered throughout. He is the nearest thing to a narrator the film has.

The European tour of Ingrid Bergman, who wanted to go abroad with the Jack Benny troupe, has been nixed by the State Department. War Department refused to intercede in her behalf and the naturalization people have been very strict about these things.

If the fracas created by the discovery that the Army was burning prints of pictures and refusing them to civilian educational groups, ever results in a Congressional investigation, one point is sure to be made.

Despite the tight raw stock situation, prisoner of war camps here get two new Hollywood features weekly. "Dragon Seed," for example, was screened for POW's before our own boys saw it.

And Army Pictorial Service now has on hand 1,000 16mm. prints and 1,000 35mm. prints of "Two Down and One To Go," with some groups interested in visual education urging that the small-gauge prints be made available for non-theatrical use.

Lily Lo, the Chinese actress, who has made many films in China for the war effort, is here visiting husband T. Y. Lo, head of the Chinese Motion Picture Corp. . . . Frank Davis, scripter of "A Tree Grows In Brooklyn," arrives shortly to gather material for a script on the meat shortage. He will huddle with WFA, OPA and OWI officials, who want a government film on the subject. Newly arrived at the Navy Photographic Section, Lt. Comm. Robert Smith, formerly unit publicity chief for 20th-Fox and more recently Admiral Halsey's photographic officer.

With the Seventh War Loan in full swing, the Treasury already is laying groundwork for the Eighth in the fall. The first 16mm. meeting already has been held. An effort will be made to get more Army pix for the Eighth. Present bond campaign is topheavy with Navy subjects. One Navy pic the Treasury boys do want for the Eighth is the story of the "silent service," the submarine service. . . . British Information Services previews four of its new films here Thursday: "Report From Burma," "Operation Pluto," "A City Reborn" and "United States."

The Kid Sister

(Comedy)

PRC RELEASE. Producer, Sigmund Neufeld. Director, Sam Newfield. Screenplay and original story, Fred Myton. Photography, James Brown. Production manager, Bert Sternbach. Musical director, David Chudnow. Sound engineer, Max Hutchinson. Film editor, Holbrook N. Todd. Art director, Paul Palmentola. Set dresser, Elias H. Reif. Master of properties, Eugene C. Stone. Assistant director, Melville DeLay.

CAST—Features Roger Pryor, Judy Clark, with Frank Jenks, Constance Worth, and Tommy Dugan, Richard Byron, Minerva Urecal, Ruth Robinson, Peggy Wynne.

REVIEWED at the Orpheum, Los Angeles, June 12, 1945. Running time: 56 MINS.

"The Kid Sister" is a slightly dizzy comedy containing sufficient chuckles to okay it as supporting product. Majority of its laughs are due to strong work of Judy Clark in the lead. She's a wacky member of the younger generation who gets her man, despite difficulties, and comes through with a topnotch performance that rates her a handsome credit. Production backing by Sigmund Neufeld gets the most from the small budget and Sam Newfield's directorial pace is fast.

Fred Myton's good script has Miss Clark tired of waiting for elder sister Constance Worth to get married, and she decides to do some man-chasing, even without family approval. Roger Pryor, for whom the big sister is angling, is the subject of Miss Clark's chase. To meet him she poses as a maid in her own home while big sister is entertaining, later gets mixed up with a comic burglar, Frank Jenks. She becomes involved in a wild police chase that ends at Pryor's home, gets him interested in her, is exposed as a phony maid, but comes out the winner in the end.

Pryor appears to advantage in the male lead. Frank Jenks, Tommy Dugan and Minerva Urecal rate laughs. Constance Worth, Richard Byron, Ruth Robinson and Peggy Wynne also are capable. Photography, settings, etc., are standard for budget expenditure.

DECORATORS' VOTE RESULT MAY HINGE ON 54 BALLOTS

Recommendation that 54 valid ballots of striking studio set decorators be counted immediately was forwarded to the National Labor Relations Board in Washington yesterday by Regional Director Stewart Meacham. Local director declared such a count might determine the decorators' election at once without the necessity of holding a hearing on the 50 ballots of IATSE strike replacements, which have been challenged by Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421.

Ballots of eight of the 62 persons listed by Local 1421 as eligible were declared invalid by Meacham. He stated an investigation disclosed that seven of that number had no connection with the studios involved at the time of the walkout on March 12, while the employment of another had been terminated prior to the strike. The votes of 51 admitted strikers were declared valid, as were those of three soldiers on military leave who returned to participate in the balloting.

If a count disclosed that at least 53 of those voted for affiliation with Local 1421, Meacham explained this would give that union a majority and it would not be necessary to count the 50 challenged IATSE votes. On the other hand, if it was found more than one of the 54 voted for the IATSE or no union, it would be necessary to hold a hearing locally to establish the eligibility of the strike replacements and to determine which union they voted for.

Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, and Ed Mussa, business representative of Local 1421, hailed the decision as a big victory for the Conference. They expressed satisfaction that all 54 decorators voted for Local 1421, and, in addition, claimed that at least five of the IA strike replacements voted the same way. Some IA tops insisted, however, that at least 10 of the striking decorators voted with the IATSE, which it was claimed together with their 50 strike replacements would give the IATSE a decided victory.

In urging an immediate count of the strikers' ballots to ascertain if they will decide the election, Director Meacham told the Board:

"If it is necessary to defer establishment of results until a hearing on the 50 challenges is held, an early settlement of the strike is disastrously impaired. I recommend, therefore, that the 54 ballots, considered eligible, be immediately opened and counted. If they establish a decisive result, regardless of the 50 disputed ballots, an appropriate certification order may be issued without delay."

All 112 ballots cast in the election were challenged. All but one of the IA ballots cast by strike replacements were challenged by Local 1421, while all of the 62 ballots cast by the strikers were challenged by the IATSE and the producers. The NLRB then challenged the one remaining ballot in order to protect the secrecy of the ballot and avoid the necessity of opening the ballots to count the one not challenged.

The IATSE and producers challenged on the grounds that the strikers were no longer employed in the studios and were therefore not eligible to vote. Local 1421 challenged the IATSE ballots on the grounds the employes were not qualified or experienced decorators, but merely had been moved over from other crafts for the purpose of voting.

Possibility that some decorators might have voted against being represented by either union was advanced by some execs last night. It was pointed out the group formerly belonged to an independent society and that it was by a close vote its members voted in favor of affiliation with Local 1421. Election was to designate a bargaining representative for decorators, producers having refused to recognize Local 1421 as their representative until union was certified by the NLRB. This position was taken after the IATSE claimed jurisdiction and Prexy Richard Walsh threatened to call a strike of theatre operators if a deal was made with Local 1421 for the decorators. All three parties since have agreed to abide by the decision of the NLRB. When producers refused to recognize a decision of War Labor Board, Arbiter Thomas Tongue awarding jurisdiction to Local 1421, members voted to strike.

PAYOFF ENDS RADIO SUIT BY HOPPER

Out-of-court settlement has been made in the suit brought against the Andrew Jergens Co. and Lennen & Mitchell agency by Hedda Hopper. Columnist received a substantial sum, according to her attorneys, Gang, Kopp & Tyre.

Court action was started in November of 1942 after the ad agency had refused to honor an agreement signed by the columnist for a radio series. In Federal court here Judge Harry Hollzer dismissed the action on the ground that the contract was not in writing. An appeal was taken by Miss Hopper's attorneys, which reversed the lower court's decision. Trial had been set for late this month.

ment can be received for goods sold abroad. It was brought out that:

(1) American film business has a heavy stake in the stability of American exchange rates, in the expansion of world trade, in the opportunity to make investments abroad without fear that earnings will be blocked or their repatriation restricted.

(2) If these proposals are adopted, their effect will be to eliminate restrictions of payment of royalties to American producers, while, by contributing to the maintenance of high level income abroad, will assure steadier market for U. S. films.

(3) If the standard of living goes up foreign rentals will go up.

(4) While there have been quota and other trade restrictions on U. S. films in England, there have been greater restrictions in non-English-speaking countries on the importation of American films largely because of their adverse balance and trade relation to the United States.

Among the more than 100 leading executives on the committee are Barney Balaban, William Morris, Jr., William Benton and Gardiner Cowles.

COAN SHAPING UP PLANS FOR UA FILM EXPORTS

With the foreign market making increased demands on American films, Cecil Coan, UA foreign head on West Coast, is rapidly formulating plans for UA film shipments to all countries except Japan and her conquered territory. Coan, who recently returned from New York, had a cable yesterday from Walter Gould, UA foreign chief who is in Paris, stating that all of Europe is starved for American films.

Switzerland was cited by Gould as an example. At war's outbreak the tiny country had 24 American films which they kept running in preference to German pix for the past four years. Coan is getting films dubbed and superimposed even for Japan and plans distribution there when that country is defeated.

New York, June 12.—In connection with its third-of-a-century celebration Aug. 26 to Sept. 29, Paramount will set aside the week of Sept. 2-9 in an attempt to get something bearing the Paramount trademark played on every screen in the country. 10,807 THEATRES TAKE PART IN BOND FREE MOVIE DAY

New York, June 12.—Total of 10,807 theatres participated in Free Movie Day June 6 for a new record, according to latest figures on special events released by Samuel Pinanski, national chairman of the Seventh War Loan campaign for the motion picture industry. Free Movie Day total compares with 7,571 in the Sixth War Loan.

Bond premieres, according to Pinanski, so far have reached a new high of 5,052, compared with 4,284 in the Sixth, and children's matinees for the Seventh total 1,868, against 879 in the Sixth.

Pinanski declared he was happy to pass on to the men and women of the film industry the "sentiment of the U. S. Treasury Department, which feels that the motion picture industry is doing an outstanding job in the Seventh War Loan." He warned, however, that the industry must beware of the danger of complacency that comes from success and the weather.

"I urge every man and woman in the field not to relax, but to increase their activities with even greater vigor and help carry the ball to the successful conclusion of the drive," Pinanski said.

More than 1,100 stars and performers have donated their services at bond rallies in metropolitan New York through the United Theatrical War Activities Committee, headed by James E. Sauter, the film industry War Activities Committee revealed. Since the beginning of the Seventh War Loan, 700 film houses in Greater New York have sponsored 12,000 hours of free entertainment in 42 days.

NAB EYES PLAN TO SET UP RADIO ACADEMY

dent station managers and network officials already are on record as favoring the proposal. Plans call for a democratic organization which would have a wide membership from all interests in broadcasting and would work actively for the advancement and improvement of radio arts and sciences.

The Academy would be organized as a non-profit corporation. One of its chief aims would be "the facilitation of closer collaboration among all branches of the broadcasting industry for cultural, educational and technological progress." It would not be concerned with broadcasting business, politics or labor economics.

While details of the Academy plan will not be disclosed until after the NAB committee meeting in New York, it is understood to call for sponsorship of a wide range of cultural and educational activities, including forums and workshops, permanent archives of recordings of the best of American radio programs, a library and bestowal of annual awards of merit for outstanding achievement in radio, similar to those now given for outstanding work in motion pictures.

H'WOOD BIDDING ON B'WAY PLAYS DECLINES

year ending Dec. 31, 1944. It was pointed out here that each year a different studio steps out as leading bidder for plays, and usually emerges as a more reluctant buyer the following season.

Several studios were cited as examples in the marked cooling off of the Hollywood-Broadway romance. During 1943 Fox made commitments of $1,545,000 for screen rights to plays, including $1,000,000 guarantee for "Winged Victory." During 1944, only play purchased by Fox was "Junior Miss" for $400,000. During 1944 Warners was the leading contender on the play market with commitments of $1,657,000, aside from the profit-sharing on such properties as "Life With Father." Paramount at present is the most active bidder in the play market.

hysterical suspense from there. Rondo Hatton as Moloch, the Brute, and Vicky Lane as the Ape Woman are the regulation uncouth monstrosities of this type of picture, but they really are less horrifying and frightful than Otto Kruger, playing straight as the personable, dapper, but insanely cold-blooded bio-chemist.

Brutes and maniacal scientists, ready to sacrifice any number of human lives in the interest of experiment, are stock figures of the terror films. But a skillfully fabricated screenplay and fresh production treatment by Morgan Cox save the picture from triteness.

Story is based on the discovery by Dr. Stendhal (Otto Kruger) of a method of resuscitating dead bodies. He uses the corpse of the Ape Woman and blood taken from the veins of his pretty nurse for the experiment. The nurse (Ann Forrester) is rescued from his clutches by her interne-sweetheart (Phil Brown) just as the doctor is about to transfer her brain to the skull of the resuscitated Ape Woman.

Comedy relief from the succession of chills and shivers is furnished by the playing of Jerome Cowan as a smoothie detective of the homicide squad.

Harold Young's direction keeps the action well-paced and the scenes convincing.

SCREEN EXTRAS GUILD WILL OPEN H'D HEADQUARTERS

Screen Extras Guild, which is competing with Screen Players Union for jurisdiction over film extras, is opening headquarters on Las Palmas at Cross Roads of the World. Office temporarily will be in charge of C. J. Hyans, who was appointed by the Associated Actors and Artistes of America to organize the extra field.

The Four A's already has announced that a local charter will be granted to SEG, although SPU has been certified by the National Labor Relations Board as bargaining representative for extra players. SEG has just completed drafting of a constitution and by-laws, which will be submitted to the Four A's for approval.

Next step probably will be the nomination of officers for SEG, which is reported currently to have an affiliation of approximately 2,000. Attorney Henry B. Ely has been employed as general counsel for the new organization. After getting its charter, SEG is expected to ask the NLRB to rescind certification of SPU on grounds latter does not represent all extras.

NEWSREELS SET FOR CHARTER SIGNING

San Francisco, June 12.—Pete Mole is back from Hollywood to take over his important lighting job and newsreelers are set to cover the signing of the world charter at the United Nations Conference. This is definitely set to be held at Veterans' Memorial building where 150 delegates will sign the charter.

Newsreelers shot a session of the security council commission at which Jos. Paul-Boncour reported for the enforcement arrangements committee. This session held hints of future film work, interpreting this conference by cartoon and graphic film.

Newsreelers also have future work keeping tab on General Romulo, who is fighting against the exclusion of the word "independence" from the charter, and on Lord Halifax's ultimatum on the veto formula.

MUSHROOMERS IN FRANCE HIT U.S. FILMS

New York, June 12.—Mushroom producers in France, who made pictures with a decided Nazi tinge under the German occupation, are currently the major factor retarding the re-establishment of American film business in France.

Many of these producers have formed a partnership with people in the French government service in a concerted effort to keep their product on French screens.

Murray Silverstone, president of Fox International Corp., who returned over the weekend from a trip abroad, said that French government officials and ministries are constantly changing. He expressed the hope satisfactory arrangements could be worked out once the government becomes stabilized.

He revealed that 20th-Fox is opening three new exchanges, a sub-exchange and an office in the Far East and Africa. These include new exchanges in Tel Aviv, Palestine and Beirut, Lebanon to cover Syria and Lebanon, and Baghdad, Iraq, to service Iran and Iraq. Sub-exchange will be in Teheran, Iran.

DEAL whereby Donald M. Nelson takes over prexyship of Society of Independent Motion Picture Producers is for three years, with yearly options for renewal on part of both employer and employe. Nelson was told he could name his own figure for the job, but being of the "Roosevelt" school of $50,000 top earning a year, set his price at $1,000 a week. David M. Noyes, who takes over vice-presidency, will be paid $25,000 a year. Noyes, prior to joining Nelson in WPB, was with Lord and Thomas and very active in radio interests with them. He will run the New York office for SIMPP, while Nelson will be on the move most of the time. Nelson is the worldly type whom David O. Selznick spoke about the job when he informed Variety a successor for Loyd Wright, as prexy, was being sought. Nelson will give a good portion of his time to examining conditions in the foreign market and working out pacts with foreign governments against stiff restrictions for American made films.

MIXED reaction to an experimental commercial film televised by Don Lee's W6XAO is being closely studied by Harry Lubcke, video director for the pioneering chain, and Syd Gaynor's sales staff at KHJ. While most of the sight-sound addicts approved the demonstration there was an undertone of "okay if you don't overdo the commercial" in response to the station's poll. Quality of the production and definition was both praised and criticized by the set owners canvassed but this phase was held secondary to the question posed, "what is your reaction to the commercial film titled 'Lorraine?'" Comments included such pointed remarks as "would rather take advertising straight as in radio"; "commercial value of film too obvious"; "plugs well timed but sugar-coating too sweet." Film produced by Sawyer-Feld ran for five minutes with the Johansen Shoe plugs integrated.

EFFORTS to break production jam at the Selznick studio were indicated yesterday with return to the lot of David O. Selznick and a group of top execs. A sure sign that wheels will soon be grinding on the scheduled slate of pix ready for filming was made apparent as Argyle Nelson checked in at his desk as new production manager. Other straws in the wind are James Basevi, production designer, is back at work on "Duel In the Sun" after his strike suspension was lifted; Ruth Burch, head of casting, was among the execs returning; King Vidor, director of "Duel" was out scouting for location yesterday; Alfred Hitchcock was shooting tests for "Notorious," the Ingrid Bergman starrer, and Dore Schary was proceeding with plans for the next two productions on his schedule, "Some Must Watch," and "They Dream of Home," both of which now are in the final writing stages.

FRANCES LANGFORD-SPIKE JONES summer replacement for Chase & Sanborn lost only a small percentage of the Sunday audience that tuned to the antics of Charlie McCarthy in regular season. First Hooperating for the hiatus entry was pegged at 15, which is only 3.5 off the Bergen-Ameche finale. One of the season's sharpest drops clipped Bob Hope for 5.3, with Screen Guild Players also on the skids for 4.3. Lux gave up 2.9 for 19.8 and "The McGee's" were off 2.8 for 22.6, but topped Hope for the lead by one-tenth of a point. Walter Winchell, who last week was reported atop the heap, picked up third spot with 21.4. Other ratings clocked "Ozzie and Harriet" at 7.8, "Blondie" 10, Brice-Thomas 8.3, "Gildersleeve" 13, Kate Smith 10, "Life of Riley" 7.1, Burns and Allen 14.3, Ginny Simms 9.7.

LESLIE FENTON, producer-director of "Pardon My Past," starring Fred MacMurray, seems to be the "white haired" boy that the studios are seeking, as a result of the job he did in making this film for Columbia release. Picture was shot during the strike period and came in 12 days ahead of the 60 day schedule more than $50,000 below the $850,000 budget that was set. Picture is reported as exceptionally good, with various studios proferring stupenduous offers to Fenton to take term contract. Latter, however, turned them all down stating that he wants to continue as an independent producer, as he is now and merchandise his product with his partner MacMurray as the star.

MOTION Picture audiences are beginning to class the advertising and exploitation men in the same category as the pest in the seat behind you who has seen the picture before and insists on telling in a loud voice what is coming next. Recent Warner Bros. audience-sampling survey shows fans are inclined to be annoyed with trailers depicting dramatic sequences from coming attractions. They are equally annoyed with advertisements that include choice bits of the plot. The film fans—like P. T. Barnum's famous public—don't mind being fooled but they do object to having their screen surprises spoiled for them by the advance ballyhoo.

Callahan Due Back To Work With Grossman

Emmett Callahan, who has been general and company manager for Paul Small, is due this week to function in same capacity for Arthur Grossman, brother of Small, who is producing "Trio" at the Belasco theatre early in July. Lois Wheeler, who starred in the New York cast of the play, will have her original role, and Lee Sabinson, who directed it, will repeat his job here. Rehearsals start next Monday.

Joan Arliss Returns To Stage For Vanguard

Joan Arliss, former Broadway dramatic actress, is resuming her stage career as the lead in the Vanguard theatre production of "Blind Alley," scheduled for 12 performances beginning July 25. Her last New York appearance was with Henry Hull in "Play With Fire." Vanguard will do five plays for the summer season, opening with "Beyond the Horizon." In private life Miss Arliss is the wife of Martin Gosch, Metro producer.

When you and I were kids in school a lot of years ago
The classroom teemed with questionnaires that wafted to and fro.
You answered them as best you could and fervently you swore
That when you were a man you wouldn't answer any more.
And now you answer questions on the telephone all day
And seek a bit of rest at home before you hit the hay.
And when you turn the dial you are sunk in bleak despair
For every other program is another questionnaire.

Modern warfare is largely economic, but now it shows a tendency to revert to the old romantic type. When Helen took it on a lam from Sparta to Ilium, she started the Trojan war that launched a thousand ships and a flock of poetry and drama. Now Carole Landis moves from Reno to Las Vegas and starts a civil war in Nevada. The wild west grows wild again, with the tribal divorce lawyers fighting in defense of their happy hunting grounds.

WAR FINANCE DIV. FILM MEN AID FRENCH GOVT.

Washington, June 13. — J. Edward Shugrue, director of the motion picture special events section of the War Finance Division, has returned here after a two-week trip to Paris at the request of the French government. Shugrue outlined to French officials the contribution of the American motion picture industry to the War Bond program in the United States.

France now is in the process of formulating an expansive post-war reconstruction bond program.

It is anticipated that a representative of the film industry, possibly a national chairman of one of this country's past War Loan campaigns, will make a trip to France to aid that government in setting up its coming campaign.

STUDIOS REVEAL RISE IN PICTURE PRODUCTION

With 10 pictures completed during the last week and 35 others now before the cameras, major producers announced last night that production now is at a higher level than before the current strike started March 12. Studio heads declared that six new features will be started the coming week and that 12 new productions will be in work by the end of the month.

Producers' statement follows:

"Recognizing that the production of motion pictures is the only true gauge of the effectiveness of the studio strike, we issue this report to our employes and the public:

"With the 14th week of the strike nearing an end, production not only still is increasing but is at a higher level than before the strike began, and at its highest level since a jurisdictional dispute involving 52 employes culminated in a strike aimed to paralyze the industry.

"Thirty-five pictures are before the cameras of the nine major studios. Ten pictures have been completed within the past week; six features will start within the coming week, and by the end of the month 12 new productions will be in work. All operations at Technicolor are continuing on schedule.

"The producers stand exactly where they did in the beginning. They will continue to meet their schedules, fulfill their commitments and protect the jobs of loyal workers."

Strikers, in the meantime, were waging a campaign against actors crossing studio picket lines, while awaiting word from the National Labor Relations Board on recommendation of the regional director that ballots of striking set decorators be counted. Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, was conferring with representatives of the Building Trades Council here, presumably on question of delivery of supplies to the studios. Some building trades groups have been respecting the picket lines, while others have been ignoring them.

ILLINOIS LIBEL BILL PASSAGE AGAIN POSTPONED

Changes demanded in the bill would hold station owners and employes free from responsibility for libel if they had no advance knowledge or right or opportunity to prevent the libel. Speeches of politicians also would be exempt.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

EASIEST way to start an argument at a gathering of the radio clan is to pipe up about "packages," that snug little bundle of program ingredients that nets the seller a tidy little 10% off the top. Agents are naturally enamored of such deals so it must necessarily follow that clients and agencies aren't so hot for them. It's a controversy that has its points, either way, so rather than get ourselves in the middle we have asked two authorities on the subject to air their views. Herewith you have both sides of the question so roll your own deductions.

SEZ S. James Andrews, v.p. in charge of radio for Lennen & Mitchell: "There are two kinds of package programs—one which is owned by an agent, the other which is owned by talent. Both are dangerous to commercial radio. When an agent sells a package, he is guaranteed a flat price—usually a healthy one—for which he supplies all program "elements." The difference between what he receives and what he pays is his profit. This places a premium on practices such as excessive "doubling" of actors, re-use of musical arrangements, the use of the agents' own clients instead of more suitable people under contract to other agents, the use of less capable musicians because the most capable demand more than "scale," and many other devices which increase the package seller's profit at the expense of program quality.

"When a performer sells a package, he is sure to be more interested in the aggrandizement of himself than in the welfare of the show as a whole. With the networks seemingly following a policy of selling good pieces of time to the advertiser whose show boasts the biggest "name," soon talent will control the air, and by their short-sighted policy of demanding fabulous sums for their services and so-called "promotion" will ultimately kill the golden egg-laying goose. With either type of package, the sponsor is charged multiple profits, and, in the final analysis is building a Frankenstein which will ultimately destroy him as a radio advertiser. In the long run commercial radio is bound to suffer."

NOW to James L. Saphier, packager extraordinary: "It's been so long since anyone has asked me to justify the package radio program that I didn't think the question ever arose any more. I was under the impression that they were accepted by all agencies. Obviously I was wrong. The old fashioned arguments against the package show no longer apply. Most of them were rationalizations stemming from the fear on the part of the advertising agency that there would be no justification for their 15% commission unless they created and produced their own programs. These fears, of course, were groundless. The agency can buy a package show and still keep its head high, for it continues to earn its commission in a number of important ways.

"The function of the radio show from the entertainment point of view is to provide the maximum audience needed for exposure to the commercial message. If the show that is best fitted to do that job happens to be independently produced, the advertising agency is not properly representing its client if the show is turned down.

"The smaller agencies cannot afford to maintain complete radio staffs and are therefore dependent on the package program producers. Most of the larger advertising agencies today are experts in the radio business and as such are well able to create their own programs, but most of them realize that it would be short-sighted to depend on their own creations exclusively. If the agencies made a practice of excluding package shows, J. Walter Thompson would not have Fred Allen, Foote, Cone & Belding would not have Bob Hope, Ruthrauff & Ryan would not have Jack Benny. I could go on indefinitely, but I am sure the point is clear. Seven of the first 15 Hooper rating shows are package programs. That's not too bad a record."

CHAIN BREAKS . . . Ed Cashman takes over production of the Hoagy Carmichael show as a free lance and also lends his masterly touch to the next two broadcasts of Joan Davis and her villagers while Bob Redd visits with the home folks. Between times Cashman will cut a record of Curt Massey, Ella Mae Morse and Matty Malneck's orchestra for the approbation of Procter & Gamble in the CBS strip spread tagging after Jack Kirkwood. . . . John Guedel goes to Chicago tomorrow night for the very pleasant ceremony of having his "GE House Party" contract renegotiated with the moola almost doubled. . . . Craig Maudsley making a new agency connection now that Dancer, Sample & Fitzgerald is short of Coast billing. . . . Gummo Marx's singing discovery, Earle Bruce, being groomed for a top crooner spot. Recently out of the service, he was snapped up by 20th-Fox but will get miked before he gets mugged. . . . Len Levinson signed by J. Walter Thompson for a grand a week to write the Ballantine show back east. Who said, "don't write—wire?" . . . Lux is winding up the season in a blaze of whodunits. From "Murder, My Sweet" they segue into "Canterville Ghost" and "Woman in the Window." . . . Virginia Cooke is whipping up those scripts for Elsa Maxwell's Mutual broadcasts and may yield to the entreaties of the party-thrower to accompany her east. . . . Perry Como and Hildegarde will be the first guests on the Kraft summer series from New York which E. E. Horton conferenciers. . . . Blue network passes into limbo tomorrow and up goes the American Broadcasting Co. flag. Even though the chain can't use the initialed ABC—it belongs to someone else—we will, in the interest of brevity and the paper shortage.

Foust Leaves K & E But Kellogg Stays

Chicago, June 13.—Reports that Chet Foust would take a big chunk of the Kellogg business with him when he resigned as veepee of the Chicago office of Kenyon & Eckhardt were denied today by Ralph Olmstead, ad manager of the cereal company. He declared that V. T. Norton, who moves into Foust's job, will service the account, with John Brew of New York serving as the account executive. Kellogg business has long been considered a vest pocket account of Foust's due to the fact that when he left J. Walter Thompson two years ago to join K & E he took with him two of the cereal products. Foust is now negotiating with several agencies for an executive post.

SAG ASKS GREEN TO ACT IN BOYCOTT

studio strikers to boycott pictures produced at struck studios, that such action would be in violation of AF of L rules. In its letter to the membership, the guild quotes a telegram from Green in which he characterizes the strike as unauthorized and in which he directed the men to return to their jobs at once. The guild is asking Green to take the same action he did in the case of the Pomona Central Labor Council, which he rebuked severely for sending letters to top actors criticizing them for their action in crossing the picket lines.

SAG apparently was disturbed over the boycott, the latest of which was announced by the IBEW statement that its 1,300 locals were being asked to refrain from attending pictures in which actors now crossing picket lines appear. In the letter to Green the SAG referred to advertisements by the strikers in which they served notice that yesterday was the deadline for them to decide to respect the picket lines or run the risk of having their names circularized throughout the U. S. and Canada.

DAVIS SEES TOUGH TIME FOR PICTURES IN EUROPE

ernments, Davis cited Rumania as one of the countries in which OWI has had difficulty getting American pictures on the screens, with tougher headaches to be faced by the industry when it tries to send in product on a strict commercial basis. Virtually the only American films being shown in Rumania are old ones still preserved by the commercial distributors. Although OWI now has a newsman in the country, it has been unable to introduce a film rep there.

Davis said heavy barriers also were encountered in France, where four government bureaus have to clear any American films offered for distribution. The result is that very old subjects, preserved by the distributors during the occupation, are again being widely screened. In the first months after the liberation these pictures were rushed to the screens to milk them dry before newer stuff should be admitted.

Even films produced under the Vichy regime are being offered to satisfy the French public's appetite for pictures, providing the films do not have too marked a political taint.

In countries like Yugoslavia, Davis said, OWI has been forced to do business with the government film monopolies. Davis made it clear he opposed such operations, but said nothing could be done at present.

Films, Davis continued, are the best medium for showing Europe what the war in the Pacific is like, and are being used extensively for that purpose. Most screenings are theatrical in this field, but non-theatrical shows largely are used "to tell the true story of American life" since, Davis said, the commercial product does not give a clear picture of this. Special films have been made to convince Europeans that there is a food shortage in the U. S. as well as in Europe.

Asked about Germany, Davis said entertainment films still are a long way off for the population since the Allied Military Government has laid down the policy that the German people should not be entertained.

Although the same policy applies to radio, Davis pointed out, there is nothing to stop the public from tuning in on the entertainment programs beamed to our troops.

When theatres are reopened in the area under American control, only selected newsreels and documentaries will be shown at first. Later on features carefully selected by AMG will be added.

VETO BATTLE AT S.F. PARLEY GIVES NEWSREELERS BREAK

San Francisco, June 13.—One of the hardest-fought battles of the World Security Conference was waged and ended today, giving newsreelers, radiomen and press an idea to windup time for the conclave. The battle was over Yalta veto formula, which vested control of the new World Security Council in the Big Five. Conference end may come between Wednesday, June 20, and Saturday, June 23.

President Truman's visit and concluding speech at the conference will be covered with everything radio and motion pix have to offer. Both film and radio industries also are prepared for complete coverage of the Senate sessions and meeting of Big Three which will take place shortly.

The reception which the film industry's coverage has met is held to be indicative of the warm welcome it will receive at all future events which stem from the conference.

Jack Connolly of the international secretariat reports that cameramen will cover the public meeting of Commission Three on the Security Council at the Opera House.

Newsreelers covered the press buffet here, where S. F. is host to visiting press, radio and newsreel men. They also shot the patriotic socialites of the American Women's Voluntary Services.

Hotel Situation Tightens

New York, June 13.—Faced with the tighest hotel situation since start of the war, it has been virtually impossible to get rooms here for the past two weeks. With bonifaces expecting the situation to grow, they explained that major reason for room scarcity is that relatives of returning soldiers are flocking here to be on hand when boats dock. ZEVIN, EX BROWNE AIDE, GETS DELAY IN SENTENCE

New York, June 13. — Isadore Zevin, former secretary to George E. Browne, ex-president of the IATSE, had sentencing postponed today until June 29 by Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard. Zevin pleaded guilty to a perjury indictment after assertedly testifying falsely when questioned by a special Federal grand jury probing the whereabouts of $1,500,000 special slush fund collected from IA members.

Zevin told the jury the fund was used to pay salaries and expenses of IA representatives. According to the government, Zevin lied, the fund having been split by Browne with Chicago mobsters now serving 10-year prison sentences. They were convicted in 1943 of conspiracy to extort more than $1,000,000 from the film industry.

THE PEOPLE LOOK TO PEACE

BIG THINGS are taking place at the World Security Conference in San Francisco. . . . Yet — many groups and many people are belittling it. . . . Many of these same people, under several group names, are likewise trying to belittle the atrocities of Nazi Germany. The reason? — well, your guess is as good as ours!

BUT — the fact is, that in San Francisco, history is being written!

It took 18 weeks in Philadelphia before our own people representing only a group of 13 colonies and 2½ millions of people, came to an understanding . . . and even then, only 39 of 55 delegates signed. Now — in San Francisco — there are 270 delegates representing 1,042,707,720 persons. But a charter will be written here!

Recognizing the importance of this conference has devoted hours of time and brought you great personalities to keep the people abreast of what's going on — to LET YOU "IN ON THE INSIDE" — to allow the people to hear history being written . . . and WE WILL CONTINUE TO DO SO, THESE CLOSING DAYS, UNTIL THE CHARTER IS SIGNED!

WARNER BROS. RADIO STATION KFWB

To continue our coverage we will give you a complete outline of ALL the delegates in San Francisco. . . . The views of your favorite KFWB personalities, including NEWSPAPER people in town are getting invites from Harry Crocker of the Examiner and a group to form a Hollywood Press Club, that is rather ambitious in scope. Effort of the organizers is to put it on the plane of the National Press Club, as well as to establish an improvement of relations with studios, press departments and personalities. They've had press clubs here before, which started under same premise and wound up being non-press for the press, but most attractive to the non-pros, who endeavor to get an acquaintanceship which they feel can be of value to them in their specific business. Newspaper people in town who have had previous experience with Press Clubs here are shying away from the invite to join up with Crocker, figuring that it will be a case of too much social and other things, and too little regard for aiding the working press, in achieving the objectives that such an organization should accomplish for its membership.

NEW theatre construction in the San Diego area is slated to add plenty of clearance headaches to distributors and exhibitors. Beefs already have been registered over the new Loma, a de luxe Fox West Coast operation which bowed in a few weeks ago, and the Linda Vista, which opened Monday, by exhibs with houses in the same zones as the newcomers. Within 30 days two additional theatres are slated to be ready for the public. Both are air-drome houses. One is being erected by R. E. Archibald on the bay front at Coronado while the other is being put up by Jerry Gallagher at El Cajon. Theatre investments are booming in the San Diego vicinity, despite indications that there will be a sharp drop in war work with resulting migration of workers from the Border town. Exhibs apparently feel there still will be plenty of boxoffice coin for theatres due to large naval base and operation there. Indicative of boom prices being laid out for houses already open is recent buy of the Ramona by Leo Hamicher, who operates the New Victory in San Diego. Hamicher is reported to have paid about $40,000 for the theatre which sold seven or eight years ago for approximately $6,500.

METRO is faced with serious shortage of leading men for its top pro- ductions which has studio execs plenty worried. Clark Gable, making his return to screen in "This Strange Adventure," has announced to lot heads he is going to take a long holiday after completion of film, and though several pictures are lined up for him, most notably "Lucky Baldwin," he isn't talking pictures until after proposed vacation. Robert Walker, too, announces that he is taking long rest after "What Next, Private Hargrove," with studio giving him six months leave, request for time off being based upon series of important appearances during past two years without. Spencer Tracy, now on vacation, is another who won't be available for some time, since he wants to do stage play in east before making another picture. Robert Montgomery, recently back from several years in the service and currently winding up in "They Were Expendable," his first film since resuming civilian status, is trying to get back into service, where Commandership in Navy awaits him, doing everything in his power to return to uniform.

ARNOLD PRESSBURGER is lining up two stories here for production in France by Companie Internationale des Producions Artistiques, company he owned for many years prior to coming to Hollywood. Scripts will be turned out here, complete and ready to go, and forwarded to his organization in Paris. Pressburger, who up until couple of weeks ago didn't know where he stood in France as a producer, has just been advised by members of his producing organization there that his studio is standing in Paris and that nearly his entire former personnel is available and ready to go any time he is ready. Producer talked with Rene Clair before latter left for Europe several ago, regarding taking over direction of one of pictures, with possibility French director may do proposed assignment while in France. Pressburger's representative in Europe wrote him that during German occupation of Paris, Nazis used his studio to produce propaganda films. French productions will not effect Pressburger's forthcoming "A Scandal in Paris," for United Artists release.

WB STUDIO BUYS 3 MILLION IN BONDS

Warners studio yesterday invested $3,000,000 in War Bonds, marking the largest Hollywood corporation purchase yet to be made in the Seventh War Loan. Individuals at the studio have also purchased an additional $323,000 in bonds since the start of the drive it was announced by E. L. DePattie, studio chairman for the Hollywood Motion Picture War Finance Committee.

Purchase by Warners puts the HMPWFC well beyond the $7,000,000 mark so far in the campaign, with only three major studios to date having made their planned corporation buys. Warners investment also puts the committee past the $100,000,000 mark for its total sales since its inception a little more than three years ago, when the industry-wide bond selling group was organized by Henry Ginsberg.

DEMAND MADE OWI DOMESTIC PIC BUREAU STAY

for the motion picture unit. He pointed out that for each dollar the government has approved for the film bureau, the industry has contributed in services and films many hundreds of dollars.

As an example of the type of service that the unit, headed by Taylor Mills, has given to the industry, Harmon cited two films which required wide clearance from various government agencies. The first was "Two-Way Street," which called for clearance by OPA, WMC and OES. OWI helped get the clearance.

The second film is the new "What Every Veteran Should Know" which Hollywood is making at the request of the government. This requires clearance from no less than seven different federal departments.

Meantime, Charles Arney, secretary of the National Association of Broadcasters, said he expected to testify tomorrow, urging retention of the domestic radio bureau, which is the funnel for all government requests for free radio time. This bureau operates with a $330,000 budget. Arney said he would point out the chaotic conditions which existed before creation of the bureau.

Also slated to plead for retention of the domestic radio bureau are Warren Repplier, executive director of the War Advertising Council, and Paul West, of the Association of National Advertisers. Advertisers are continually asked to work government promotional matter into their ads, and they also face chaos if the domestic branch of OWI is folded up.

COL. FRANK CAPRA AWARDED D.S.M.

Capra, Army of the United States, rendered service of exceptional distinction, making a valuable contribution to the war effort. He was responsible for the production of a remarkable series of motion pictures at the personal direction of the chief of staff which graphically presented the causes leading up to the present war and the responsibility of the Axis powers for the tragic consequences. He portrayed in a classic manner the true character of the German and Japanese enemy.

"He prepared a series of films interpreting the character and customs of various of our allies for the better understanding of the soldiers of our army who were to serve in intimate contact with those allies. At the further personal direction of the chief of staff he made a most important contribution through his production of the films, 'Two Down and One To Go' and 'On To Tokyo' which provided for the soldier a clear understanding of the reasons and methods for the redeployment and demobilization plans which became effective on the defeat of Germany. The films produced by Colonel Capra under the direction of the chief of staff had an important influence on the morale of the army. Colonel Capra also rendered an important service as chief of the Army Motion Picture Unit and as assistant chief of the Army Pictorial Service."

The Woman In Green

(Mystery Melodrama)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Producer-director, Roy William Neill. Assistant director, Melville Shyer. Original screenplay by Bertram Millhauser, based on characters created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. Photography, Virgil Miller. Musical director, Mark Levant. Art direction, John B. Goodman and Martin Obzina. Sound, Bernard B. Brown. Technician, Glenn A. Anderson. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman and Ted Von Hemert. Special photography, John P. Fulton. Dialog director, Raymond Kessler. Gowns, Vera West. Film editor, Edward Curtiss.

CAST—Basil Rathbone, Nigel Bruce, Hillary Brooke, Henry Daniell, Paul Cavanagh, Matthew Boulton, Eve Amber, Frederic Worlock, Tom Bryson, Sally Shepherd, Mary Gordon.

PREVIEWED at Universal studio, Universal City, June 14, 1945. Running time: 63 MINS.

"The Woman In Green" is a creditable addition to Universal's "Sherlock Holmes" series. A neatly turned plot pits Basil Rathbone as Sherlock against the sinister Moriarity, gives him a chance for some thrilling and spectacular detection. It also provides full opportunity for Nigel Bruce's always appealing comedy characterization of that famous stooge, Dr. Watson.

Story uses the Conan Doyle episode in which Holmes, stalked by Moriarity's riflemen, substitutes a bust of Julius Caesar for his own profile at the window of the Baker st. lodgings. Rest of the yarn, for the most part, is Bertram Millhauser's work. It carries plenty of suspense with Producer-Director Roy Neill making the most of the what-can-save-him-now episodes.

Hillary Brooke as the blonde-menace accomplice of Moriarity does some worthy acting and is a nice eyeful at all times. Her part is that of a hypnotist who trances Moriarity tools into committing murder. But she is plenty hypnotizing without even making the passes. Entire cast earns a good hand and is skillfully directed.

Picture as a whole is very good low-budget production that will box well in its field and leaves the Sherlock Holmes fans little to complain about.

FCC Sets Hearing On Allocation For FM

Washington, June 14.—FCC has set a hearing for June 22 for the purpose of determining the final location in the spectrum to be allocated to FM.

Commission announcement today that it would go ahead and make the determination without waiting for the outcome of transmission tests this summer, indicated that the FM people will wind up just where they want to be—in the 50-68 megacycle band. Action is a complete capitulation of FCC to the FM demands, after FCC had originally determined to locate FM in the 84-102 megacycle band. However, FCC said the tests scheduled for this summer will go on anyway in order to obtain propagation data.

PRC RELEASE. Producer, Sigmund Neufeld. Director, Sam Newfield. Original story and screenplay, George Plympton. Photography, Jack Greenhalgh. Sound engineer, Charles Althouse. Film editor, Holbrook N. Todd. Assistant director, Jack Vance. Production manager, Bert Sternbach.

CAST—Stars Buster Crabbe, with Al (Fuzzy) St. John, and Sydney Logan, Charles King, Emmett Lynn, Kermit Maynard, Edward Cassidy, Stan Jolley, George Chesebro, Karl Hackett, Michael Owen.

REVIEWED at the Hitching Post, Hollywood, June 14, 1945. Running time: 56 MINS.

"Gangster's Den" is only fair western product. Its run-of-the-mill heroics are backed with commonplace production and reception will be mild in the Saturday matinee market. There's plenty of confusion in the script, as filmed, and story line and ramifications never become quite clear.

Buster Crabbe and Al St. John operate a mine in partnership. St. John takes proceeds from mine to buy a saloon in town. There is a deep, dark secret about something under the saloon that makes it a desirable purchase. The secret is never fully cleared up, but no one will care particularly. Action concentrates more on comedy than menace as St. John operates his saloon, has help problems, etc. In the end Crabbe nails the villain of the piece, a lawyer who also is after the saloon's secret as well as the hand of the heroine.

Crabbe and St. John contribute standard heroics. Sydney Logan has the femme lead. Heading the pluguglies is Stan Jolley. Sam Newfield directed the Sigmund Neufeld production and Jack Greenhalgh photographed.

WHILE visiting army hospitals in Hot Springs, Ark., Beverly Haney, one of six Goldwyn girls making hospital tour to Texas and Arkansas, chalked up feat which apparently had been beyond entire hospital personnel for three months. Girls entertained and visited different wards, stopping by to have a few words with every service man. One wounded lad in particular didn't engage in customary banter, but after Miss Haney had failed to get a smile out of him and was passing on to next bed, he stopped her and asked if he could have an autographed picture. On way out nurse told her this was first time in three months that the lad had been heard to speak a single word. . . . Harry Brand took wife Sybil to Fuller's ranch for a much needed rest over weekend. . . . Lloyd Nolan, who is in New York, has been set for five radio guest shots in the next two weeks.

By RADIE HARRIS

PEOPLE ARE TALKING ABOUT: Paul Gallico's bouquet to Nat Wolff for his splendid adaptation of "Snow Goose" for Decca. . . . The swank supper club that took in $12 as the sum receipts of the evening after curfew time. . . . Vinton Freedley, casting himself production supervisor to Jack Wildberg for "Memphis Bound." . . . Irene Kuhn's maternal pride at the lit'ry debut of her daughter, Rene's Avery Hopwood prize novel, "34 Charlton." . . . The critical reaction to Celeste Holm and Victor Jory's straw hat debut in Stamford. . . . "Born In Texas"—died in Conn.!

ADD ARRIVALS: Irene Dunne and Jules Stein at the Waldorf. . . . Dane Clark at the Gotham. . . . Herbert Wilcox at the St. Regis.

EXCLUSIVELY YOURS: Jennifer Jones checked into the Hotel Pierre, but couldn't be reached under her screen monicker because she was registered as Mrs. Robert Walker. She dropped in at the Stage Door Canteen, spent a whole day visiting hospital wards and checked out two days later for Washington, where along with Bing Crosby and Rita Hayworth she participated in the G. I. Oscar Awards. . . . John Dall, who quit the cast of "Dear Ruth" and is now just standing by, waiting till the strike is over before he resumes his screen career at Warners, long distanced Bette Davis and asked her to put the pressure on the powers that be to let him join her USO unit, but in spite of Bette's persuasive powers, the answer came back, "nay." So until "Hasty Heart" is set to go, Johnny remains in New York. . . . Although Jock Lawrence would like Ben Washer to go back to England with him as his personal p.a. for Arthur Rank Prods., don't be surprised if Ben winds up at his former post with Sam Goldwyn. . . . Lynn Barrett, who played the ingenue lead opposite Jack Whiting in the road company of "Arsenic and Old Lace," will be heroining for Jack again when she succeeds Arliene Francis in "The Overtons." . . . Lt. Jules Epstein is awaiting orders in Washington to head overseas on a special assignment. . . . Larry and Jane Tibbett will be grandparents any day now, when their daughter-in-law, Jeanne, fills the nursery at the Doctor's Hospital. . . . Billy Riordon, who loves his job at the Stork Club with such a passion that he hates taking a night off, was coerced by his sister the other p. m. into leaving for a few hours to help her paint some summer furniture. Billy came back to discover that he had missed Gen. Mark Clark! . . . Beatrice Lillie, now resting at Jacksonville, Florida, may head for Hollywood for a few weeks visit with her pal, Fannie Brice, before heading for the C-B-I theatre. Her trip will not be entirely social—she'll entertain at all the nearby hospitals and canteens. . . . Al Jolson's name in electric lights on Broadway again when he appeared at the C.B.S. Playhouse (the former Hammerstein) to guest star with Milton Berle brought out an almost entirely pro audience, who agreed that "Jolie" is still the same "Jolie" of the Winter Garden runway days. Leading the cheering section was Jimmy Walker. . . . Now that Victor Moore is certain from the SRO business at the Alvin every night (in spite of the mixed reviews) that "Hollywood Pinafore" is set for an indefinite run, he feels he can "afford" to splurge a bit, so he and his bride have moved from the Hotel Paramount to join the "upper classes" at 895 Park ave. . . . Roddy McDowall's current visit to New York will be made complete if he can garner the autographs of Katharine Cornell and Deems Taylor to add to his valuable collection.

COLLEGE OF MUSICAL KNOWLEDGE: Wonder if Oscar Levant knows that the original music composed by Paul Bowles as a background mood for "The Glass Menagerie," and which is such an integral part of its success is, on good musical authority, "The Introduction and Allegro For Harp" with strings and woodwind accompaniment—an obscure piece by Ravel, written some 30 years ago?

SNAP JUDGMENT: A certain high pressure salesman with that benzedrine enthusiasm, was trying to sell Irving Mansfield on one of his clients for the Milton Berle etherizer.

"I can get him for you for $1500," boasted the agent.

"Are you kidding? I'll go as high as $250 for that comic, and that's tops."

The agent hesitated a second, and then answered, "I'll call you back in five minutes."

P. S. The ten percenter collected his $25.

plaintiffs answer questions.

Michael Luddy, general counsel for the IATSE, however, is expected to insist plaintiffs be required to answer questions regardless of whether one cause of action is dismissed. It is understood questions pertained as to who was involved in distribution of circulars attacking the IA, etc.

Local 44 was taken over by the international after membership had adopted a resolution refusing to work outside its jurisdiction, despite a request from Prexy Richard Walsh that all IA members assist in keeping production going after the current strike started on March 12.

PEGGY RYAN SET TO JOIN BRACKEN

Peggy Ryan has been set to join Eddie Bracken on his impending overseas tour, it was announced last night by the Hollywood Victory Committee. At the same time it was disclosed that the Bracken unit has been set by USO-Camp Shows for its first tryout performance at Marine Air Base at El Toro tonight. Other entertainers in the group are Maxine Conrad, Roberta, Gilbert and Lee and Shirley Gray.

The HVC also has scheduled Groucho Marx and daughter Marion, Vivian Blaine, Kay Gorcey, Harry Ruby, Linda Scott, Charlie Blake, Virginia Carroll and Emma Lou Welsh for a Camp Shows tour of the San Francisco embarkation points today and tomorrow. The group will plane north this morning.

Six Goldwyn Girls are due in tomorrow from a month tour of Army and Navy installations in the southwest. Since leaving Hollywood May 15 the six have traveled the length and breadth of Texas, with a five-day stint in Arkansas. They covered 13 hospitals, in which they visited every ward.

IATSE OBJECTS TO NLRB PLAN FOR COUNTING VOTES

An exception, contending that votes cast by striking set decorators in the recent National Labor Relations Board election should not be counted, will be filed with the NLRB in Washington by representatives of the IATSE. Michael Luddy, counsel for the IA, will insist that employment of strikers had been terminated by the major studios and that only ballots of strike replacements should be counted in designating a bargaining representative for all decorators.

Steuart Meacham, regional director for the NLRB here, has recommended that votes of striking decorators be counted, in the belief this tally might decide the election without counting the 50 votes cast by strike replacements. Meacham has held that 54 ballots cast by strikers are valid. If 53 of this group voted for Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421 a count of the other challenged votes would not be necessary.

The deadline for filing exception is Sunday night. It was reported from Washington yesterday that Attorney Luddy had inquired of the Board whether this meant exceptions could be in the mail by Sunday. Board is expected to reply in the affirmative, since it has been usual for it to grant extensions for exceptions when attorneys could not prepare them on time.

Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, declared no exception would be filed by Local 1421. He said the union was perfectly willing to abide by the recommendation of the local NLRB regional director, and felt sure of a victory when, and if, the ballots are counted.

Gloria Patrice Upped To Feature Player

Gloria Patrice, 17-year-old dancer, hoisted from stock ranks to featured player, with setting of terpster into a role in "Girl of the Limberlost." It will be first straight dramatic role for the dancer.

STUDIO BIGS PLANE FOR WASHINGTON

Harry Cohn, Sidney Buchman, Jack L. Warner and Darryl F. Zanuck, planed for Washington yesterday to join 11 other industry leaders for a trans-Atlantic flight to England and a tour for liberated European capitals. As guests of SHAEF, the group will observe post-hostilities problems such as redeployment of U. S. forces, American military government, prisoners of war, transportation, etc.

In Washington, where they will be luncheon guests of General George C. Marshall, the party will include E. J. Mannix, Clifford P. Work, Lester Cowan and Sol Lesser, who already are in the east. Eastern members of the party include Barney Balaban and N. Peter Rathvon.

Goldens Will Start 'Breakfast In H'wood'

Edward and Robert Golden checked into quarters yesterday at General Service studios to start preparations for filming "Breakfast In Hollywood," based on Tom Breneman airshow, which Earl W. Baldwin currently is scripting. Picture, to be produced under banner of Golden Productions, will be started in mid-August and be released by United Artists.

Join With Ettinger's

Mickell Novak and Paul Price will join Margaret Ettinger's indie flackery staff next week.

a 16-week shooting schedule. Currently, "Confidential Agent," "A Stolen Life," "The Two Mrs. Carrolls," "Janie Gets Married" and "The Time, the Place and the Girl," are at work.

James Bush Signed

James Bush was signed by Pine-Thomas for featured spot in "They Made Me a Killer." Actor will replace Wallace Ford who had to leave the cast owing to previous commitment.

HOLLYWOOD PRODS WILL MAKE PIX ABROAD

to make "An American Guerrilla In the Philippines." This island already has made pitch, with all the newspapers behind move, for other Hollywood companies to send location troupes there, and 20th-Fox is known to be interested in using same location for other films in future.

Sol Lesser, who Clippered to Europe over weekend, will make "Paris Canteen" in French capital, at least half the picture to be filmed there and remainder here. He will take a production company over there next December, after starting picture here in September.

Col. William Keighley, who also embarked for Europe over weekend, is going to France to look over situation as a possible location for an indie production he is planning, outside of his Paramount contract.

Hal Wallis was to have gone to England this spring to make one picture over these on his Paramount contract, but lack of studio facilities prevented. With war in Europe over, Wallis now will go to Britain shortly after first of year to produce picture.

Republic already has announced plans to produce minimum of six Spanish-language films in Mexico City during the coming year. While these are strictly for Latin-American distribution, studio probably will send several of its players south for appearance in some of pictures, since a number of contract players have knowledge of the language. James A. FitzPatrick has deal to produce another picture for Republic following "Song of Mexico," filmed entirely in land below the border some months ago, and has practically settled on Cuba as location site.

RKO is another studio conscious of Latin-American production. It long has been planning to make a number of pictures in Mexico City, and "Cornered," Dick Powell starrer, is to have background footage filmed by Director Edward Dmytryk a month ago while he was in Buenos Aires.

Several companies already have contacted State Department in an effort to get official okay to go into Germany to use such backgrounds for their pictures, while others are scanning other parts of Europe as source of fresh backgrounds. Concerted move is being made by majority of studios to utilize such foreign locations in one form or another, either as filming ground for an entire picture or to be used in scenes where background footage already has been procured.

RKO Plans To Revive 'Magnificent Tramp'

RKO plans to revive production plans on "The Magnificent Tramp." Studio decided to shelve property indefinitely last week after bow-out of Cantinflas, Mexican star, who was to have been starred in bilingual version, but after powwows producers felt idea of story and possibilities of picture were too strong to be discarded. Script is completed but will be tailored to measure up to whatever actor will replace Cantinflas.

ROTHACKER IS FETED BY FILM INDUSTRY FOR CENSOR JOB

Watterson Rothacker, former head of the Los Angeles Board of Review, was guest of honor last night at a testimonial dinner of film industry leaders at Perino's. Yesterday was the final day of the board's operation, censorship of import and export film being discontinued by order of Byron Price, wartime censorship heads.

Sam Katz, presenting Rothacker with an inscribed watch on behalf of those attending, lauded him for his understanding handling of wartime censorship problems as they affected import and export of films. Rothacker in turn praised the industry's record of willingness to cooperate, and cited that record as proof that the need for outside control can be considered ended.

The guest list included Y. Frank Freeman, Harold Hopper, Henry Ginsberg, Dan O'Shea, Jesse Lasky, Leo Spitz, William Cagney, George Bagnall, Charles R. Rogers, Edward Small, Walter Wanger, Loyd Wright, John C. UNIONS GET DELAY IN GOLDWYN CASE

Hearing scheduled in Superior court today on application of Samuel Goldwyn studios for a preliminary injunction restraining mass picketing probably will be continued on motion of unions involved in current studio strike. It is understood notice of request for a continuance was filed on producer attorneys yesterday, unions apparently desiring more time in which to prepare affidavits refuting testimony of violence, etc.

A temporary restraining order prohibiting mass picketing was issued by Judge Emmet Wilson. Hearing on making it permanent was scheduled for today, but no objection to a continuance probably will be registered since mass lines have been eliminated in front of studio since temporary order was issued.

ROMULO GETS ORCHIDS FROM THE NEWSREELERS

San Francisco, June 14.—Brig. Gen. Carlos P. Romulo wins hands down for the nomination of newsreelers as being the most camera-wise delegate at the United Nations Conference.

When it comes to cooperation, imagination and a high sense of theatre, Romulo can't be beaten. Such wise old cinema owls as Pete Mole, in charge of the lighting job for the conclave, tags Romulo as the smartest showman in a conference in which showmanship means much, but may have an even greater world effect in the cinematic record to be seen by hundreds of millions hereafter.

Romulo is a show when he goes into a cinema sequence. There's no hemming and hawing for him, and no reading of speeches, either. If he has something to say, he memorizes it from start to finish. But he doesn't just get it by rote—he makes an act of it. He rounds out his periods, shifts his rhythms and pitch of voice and volume, drops into dramatic gestures, halts, takes off his glasses and fixes his audience with his eyes, and generally carries the impression of total conviction.

Romulo went into his battle for "independence" written into the trusteeship sections of the charter in place of "self-government" with real savvy, doing a solo film short setting forth the ambitions of the little nations to escape the domination and exploitation of the great.

Just how much of statesmanship really is showmanship isn't clear—but Senator Vandenburg did an intensely effective camera job of high dramatic quality today at the newsreeled meeting of commission one, presenting the proposed preamble to the United Nations charter. Vandenburg showed real expression and looked at his audience with telling intensity that deeply impressed the highly critical cameramen. Camera-wise Comdr. Stassen, Lord Halifax and the Egyptian delegation were filmed.

The underground story is that the signing of the charter will come off June 22 with President Truman watching the American delegation sign. The President's speech naturally would follow thereafter. Veteran studio experts on the local newsreel staff have given the best of advice on the stage-setting now being built for the signing ceremony. The flag-encircled round table and half circle of chairs and standing space offer a highly pictorial concept, geared to the best use of lights, and provide a flexible arrangement to meet any delegation's desire as to the size of the delegation to be filmed.

Now it can be told that the first week of the conference found the going rough for the cinema crews. Some delegations were coy about being filmed, and many a wise chap had ideas of his own. Within a week after a few of the conference shots had been shown at the United Nations theatre here, the sky was the limit. Every delegation wanted to get plenty of complimentary footage.

Porter Hall, Anne Revere, George Murphy, Dennis O'Keefe and Regis Toomey have been appointed to the Permanent Charities Committee. Appointments were made by George Murphy, prexy of the Screen Actors Guild, at the request of the Charities Committee.

UNION TOPS CONFER ON REFERRAL OF JOBS

Group of studio union tops headed by Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, went to Sacramento last night to confer with War Manpower Commission officials on studio job referrals and availability certificates for strikers. Others in the group were D. T. Wayne, business representative of Studio Machinists Local 1185, and Mike Jeffers, business representative of Screen Players Union.

Sorrell declared that studios were completely ignoring the WMC order against job referrals. The WMC has ruled that studios may not issue job referrals during the strike and that no availability certificates will be issued to strikers.

Eric Johnston To NY On Film Job Proposal

New York, June 14.—Eric Johnston is due in New York tomorrow for a huddle with major film company toppers regarding his heading the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association. It is expected some decision will be reached since many of the picture company chief executives are slated to shove off for Europe Sunday, but it is not certain whether Johnston now is willing to take the high industry post. It's not a question of money, according to reports, but of Johnston's doubts if he would fit into the picture business spot.

ALTHOUGH it is understood he may remain on in an advisory capacity, Edwin Lester probably will check out of his post as producer for the Civic Light Opera Association at the close of this season. Lester is winding his eighth season with the Association and for two years preceding the formation of the group served as producer for the Civic Light Opera. There has been no discord to occasion Lester's projected move, but it is understood the producer feels the load of three or four shows produced in rapid succession each week is getting too heavy to carry. Lester also has been given offers from New York and possibly would like to branch out for himself in that direction. Should Lester wind up with the Association, which still has him under contract for one more year, chances are he would remain with them to supervise production on forthcoming seasons. He also might produce or direct one of the operettas annually, in order to keep his hand in with the company.

DESPITE the shelving of war films involving Nazis which was logical outcome of V-E Day, actors who for last few years have made their living almost entirely by impersonating hated German military and political leaders are progressing unabatedly with their careers, instead of having to step out of pictures. Case in point is Martin Kosleck, who portrayed Goebbels and Himmler in numerous films. This actor at present is playing light comedy role in "The Spider," at 20th-Fox, his first sympathetic assignment. Studio is reported so pleased with his changeover that he is up for several other pictures of similar nature. Kurt Kreuger, who was a Nazi in "Hotel Berlin" and "Paris—Underground," is another to benefit by switchover, portraying a sympathetic role in same picture. Still another case in point is Helmut Dantine, who first became known for his delineation of Nazi characters. Warners has announced that he will be henceforth starred in sympathetic roles.

AN age-yellowed script from the files of the Metro story department yesterday turned Albert Lewin's face red. Lewin asked the department for a synopsis of the De Maupassant novel, "Bel Ami" which he is preparing to produce in association with David L. Loew. He got the script, read it through and then discovered that it was a synopsis he had done himself on his first film job for the old Goldwyn company. His critique, dated Dec. 21, 1922, read: "For anyone but Eric von Stroheim this would be impossible material." von Stroheim at the time was making a reputation directing risque psychological subjects. "There is no doubt," the critique went on, "that von Stroheim could make a great picture of this material, but it is not the sort of story that censors will accept, nor the sort that the American screen public flocks to see." Lewin now is hoping the world has changed enough in 20 years so that his objections of 1922 are outdated.

CBS has turned on the full power of its short wave transmitter's 200,000 watts. Plant at Delano, near Bakersfield, has been in operation nearly a year but only 50,000 watts have been used for transmission of psychological warfare messages to the enemy in the Pacific. South America is also covered by the three high frequency transmitters operated by CBS as a government service for OWI, Armed Forces Radio Service, and Office of Inter-American Affairs. Operation of the plant, costing $1,500,000, is under supervision of Les Bowman, chief engineer for the chain's western division.

FOUR pictures in Technicolor will be shooting simultaneously at 20th-Fox with start July 9 of "Smoky" and "American Guerrilla in the Philippines" shoving off Aug. 6, greatest number of tinters over to be concurrently before cameras at this studio. Company now has trio in work, "Kitten on the Keys," "Enchanted Voyage" and "Leave Her To Heaven," but "Kitten" is slated to wind up within next week or 10 days. "Voyage" and "Heaven" will continue, however, overlapping start of both the new pictures.

(CBS News Analyst)

A big step toward meeting the new conference termination deadline set for June 23 was taken last Saturday. A United States compromise proposal brought agreement that committee level on provision for review and revision of charter. It is to be explained as follows: The regular amendment provision in a charter is such that a change required a three-fourths majority vote in the general assembly and a 7 out of 11 vote in the security council, and these seven must include all of the Big Five powers. This gives each of the Big Five a veto of amendments. A full dress constitutional convention to consider revision of the charter may be called at any time by a two-thirds vote of the general assembly, in which all members of the world organization are to be equally represented, but again this two-thirds must include all of the Big Five, thus giving each of these great powers a veto here, too. But, the decision reached in committee last Saturday modifies this. If no constitutional Convention has been called in 10 years, the calling of one shall be placed on the 10th year agenda of the general assembly. When the convention is then held, amendments may be made by a simple majority vote of the general assembly and by any seven of the eleven members of the security council. This removes the individual veto power of the Big Five nations in this particular. That is, as the history books used to say, "a good thing."

Came the ancient minstrel's tune.
Lovelorn, haunting and appealing
In the bosky dells of June.

NEW TAX PLAN TO SPEED EXCHANGE OF ACTORS

New York, June 17.—An accelerated exchange of screen talent between British and U. S. film industries is expected as result of bilateral tax agreement, known as the "Double Taxation Treaty," which is up for ratification in both countries, according to David Rose, Paramount managing director for Great Britain, currently here on business.

The agreement, endorsed by President Truman and Sir John Alexander, chancellor of the exchequer, intends to eliminate double taxation, and when ratified will make it possible for producers, directors, writers and stars to write off one tax against the other by crediting the foreign tax against the home tax when earnings come as result of exchange of talent between the two countries.

Rose is expected to arrive in Hollywood within the next 10 days to acquire story property and to line up directorial and star talent for early production in England.

Frances Langford, Groucho Marx and Tony Romano will feature a bond show at the San Francisco Civic Auditorium July 4, and Smiley Burnette is set to appear at a Santa Barbara rally tomorrow with the National Barn Dance show.

Robert Young and the Navy's Red River Bond Invasion Fleet were greeted by approximately 100,000 yesterday when they climaxed a Louisiana tour with a waterfront rally at New Orleans.

TECHNICAL GUIDANCE—For the Army Ground Forces: Lieut. Col. Roy A. Murray, Jr.; Lieut. Col. Edward H. Coffey; Lieut Col. Robert Miller; Major Walter Nye; Capt. Milton M. Thornton; Capt. Charles Shunstrom. For the combat correspondents: Don Whitehead, George Lait, Chris Cunningham, Hal Boyle, Sgt. Jack Foisie, Bob Landry, Lucien Hubbard, Clete Roberts, Robert Reuben.

CAST—Burgess Meredith, Robert Mitchum, Freddie Steele, Wally Cassell, Jimmy Lloyd, Jack Reilly, Bill Murphy, and, as themselves, combat veterans of the campaigns in Africa, Sicily and Italy.

PREVIEWED at the Filmarte theatre, Los Angeles, Calif., June 15, 1945. Running time: 120 MINS.

There isn't any better descriptive tag for the "Story of G.I. Joe" than the one hung on it by the author, the late Ernie Pyle—"the worm's-eye view of the war." The story, as produced by Lester Cowan, is just that . . . the war from the viewpoint of the slogging, sweating infantryman who, despite the airplanes, tanks and mechanical devices, still has to fight on.

The picture is screened with unequivocal realism. There is no hokum. No flag waving. No synthetic sentimentality. No bombast. Just the long days of dirt, misery and utter weariness and the shorter periods of fighting action, of killing and of daring death and mutilation.

There has been no attempt to develop a mechanical plot. The filming just follows Correspondent Ernie Pyle (played by Burgess Meredith) through the wastes of North Africa, the shell-torn villages of Sicily and along the hard-fought roads to Rome. Even the part of Pyle is not definitely a lead role, but serves chiefly to build up and maintain continuity of interest.

Director William Wellman has employed the best silent technique in creating dramatic suspense. By apt scene selection and clever pointing of each episode he has made absorbing drama out of material that, in itself, is almost starkly documentary. The screenplay by Leopold Atlas, Guy Endore and Philip Stevenson could pass the toughest test for an entertainment script; it would get across even without dialog.

Bulk of the cast are combat veterans of the campaigns depicted in the picture. The five principals, featured in the foreground of the picture, are all convincing soldiers. Especially notable is the performance of Freddie Steele, onetime middleweight boxing champion, as Sergeant Warnicki. His unremitting efforts between battles to repair an ancient phonograph, salvaged from the ruins of an Italian home, so he can hear the record of "junior's voice" mailed to him by his wife, are poignant drama. Robert Mitchum as lieutenant of the company does an equally good job with a difficult role.

In short, the film is an excellent job of picture-making.

PARLEY WIND-UP CALLS FOR BIG NEWSREEL JOB

Hamilton Field Friday afternoon. He will be met there by Secretary of State Stettinius, Governor Warren, Mayor Lapham, conference biggies and high Army and Navy officials.

The president will go to the Fairmont hotel, where the United States delegation is housed, and will meet the delegates from the 50 united nations at a reception.

Thereafter Secretary Stettinius officially will host a Presidential dinner—a relatively small affair to be attended by the American delegation.

Saturday now is set as the tentative date for the final plenary session of the conference, with the President probably speaking via the networks and shortwave from the Opera House from 5 to 5:30 p.m.

President Truman also is expected to attend a Saturday reception for Mayor Lapham's United Nations entertainment committee.

Newsreels' big job for Friday is coverage of the signing of the United Nations charter, a ceremony which is expected to take between 10 and 12 hours. It will be held in the Veterans' building auditorium.

Stage was being set today for the signing with arrangements in charge of Francis Alstock, director of the Motion Picture Division of the Office of Inter-American Affairs.

NEW PEACE MOVE IS LAUNCHED IN STRIKE

ment of the controversy cannot be reached, include the musicians, laborers, teamsters, plasterers, culinary workers, IBEW. Prexy L. B. Lindelof of the painters also would attend.

Several meetings of crafts building trades already have been held here and it is understood Prexy William Hutcheson of the carpenters has agreed to call such a meeting if requests are received from all international heads.

Speakers at the Legion meeting last night declared the plasterers had suspended work on a building at Republic and had agreed that members would not work on any permanent studio construction during the strike. Meeting of studio basic heads is said to have been suggested by Joseph Tuohy, business representative of Studio Transportation Drivers Local 399.

Unionists were told last night that good progress is being made on the proposed national boycott of pictures produced during the walkout. Leaders denied there had been any breaks in the strike front.

Carl Head, business representative of Moving Picture Painters Local 644, declared the strikers were asking Congress to investigate purchase of supplies by the studio.

An exception to the recommendation of Stewart Meacham, regional director of the NLRB in the set decorators' election, is being filed today by Michael Luddy, attorney for the IATSE. Meecham recommended that 54 votes of striking decorators be counted, but Luddy insists only votes of IA strike replacements should be counted, contending employment of striking decorators has been terminated by studios.

CONSPIRACY CHARGE AGAINST IATSE DROPPED

Despite withdrawal of a conspiracy allegation against the IATSE international by 21 members of Affiliated Property Craftsmen Local 44, Superior Judge Emmet Wilson held they must answer questions propounded by Attorney Michael Luddy at a deposition hearing.

Attorney Ben Margolis argued dismissal of the conspiracy count eliminated necessity of studio workers answering, but Judge Wilson held they must reply as to their connection with distribution of circulars, contacts with Herbert Sorrell, etc.

Conspiracy clause in injunction suit alleged takeover of local union by the IATSE was for the purpose of continuing B. C. (Cappy) DuVal in office as business representative. Judge Wilson recently refused to issue a preliminary injunction to restrain the international from interfering with the autonomy of the local, but the plaintiffs have appealed the decision to the State Supreme court.

Motion of plaintiffs for an early trial of the case on its merits will be argued in Superior court Friday.

LAB. TECHNICIANS ACCEPT WAGE PACT

New York, June 17.—Membership of Local 702, Motion Picture Laboratory Technicians, numbering 1,800 and representing employes in 18 eastern plants, voted yesterday to accept agreement reached with employers last week providing for increases of $2 to $8.50 for members now being paid from $40 to $50 weekly. Contract, running two years, is retroactive to last July.

Less than two weeks ago when negotiations had reached a deadlock, threatening a walkout, union rescinded its previous order that no one could work overtime. This step aided in agreement that finally was reached. Eastern plants do a vast majority of the printing.

By JACK HELLMAN

IT'S that time of the year when radio checks up on itself and takes stock of its accomplishments over the 39-week grind. Whatever its deductions the record isn't impressive and a quick look at the Hooper pocket piece will confirm that appraisal. Run your eye over the Top 15 in the current report and a year ago at this time and you'll find that the upper echelons haven't changed and no sleepers crashed the select circle. Where Red Skelton once roosted among the elite we now have Hildegarde (oh, brother). Other than that one change the list has the same complexion of names, now and then a commentator (aside from Winchell) would break through for a flash rating, but that's definitely a transitory situation. So, on the face of the record, radio came up with nothing new or, we might add, even promising. What comes out of the summer wash is for the hopeful.

All of which brings up the old question, "where's the new talent coming from?" The networks say that's for the agencies to worry about and the commission men toss it right back into the lap for the chain gang. It has been suggested time and again; and ignored just as often, that the nets and the agencies set up some kind of a scout system and comb the country for potential timber. Station affiliates of the webs could act as clearing houses for the talent rounded up and audition them then and there, shipping the record to Hollywood, New York or Chicago for final determination. Picture companies scout little theatre and college plays off the main stems and have made the project worthwhile and stimulating. Radio has been all too eager to milk what its got without any effort at developing new voices and talent and the joints are beginning to creak. Youth is radio's salvation and unless those with promise are ferreted out and groomed for the big time we can't expect the kilocycles to rise above their snug level after wallowing so contentedly in the pools of stagnancy.

The season would have been pretty much of a bust all around were it not for a few enterprising chaps who dared to buck the tide. There were the two Danny's—Thomas and Kaye—no balls of fire but not to be sold short, Wendell Niles and Don Prindle and not more than one or two others. So Niles and Prindle drop out, temporarily, we hope, after 26 weeks on the Blue for Hires. Give Herb Sanford a bow for a try, at least, and while he failed there may more than make up for it with Ray Bolger. There are bound to be failures but if one in ten makes the grade the effort is well worthwhile. Had it not been for the sugar cut taken by beverage bottlers, Niles and Prindle might have still stayed on for Hires. They were coming along and needed another season to groove their antics. Bob Hope or "The McGee's" weren't first season sensations.

STATION BREAKS . . . Capitol Records is breaking out into the transcription field and setting up a basic library of 15,000-cycle high fidelity music recordings for the frequency modulation trade. . . . While Bing Crosby was away the Hooperating on "The Hall" slumped 5.6 for 15-even tie with Abbott and Costello, who shed only 2.9. Joan Davis was checked in at 16.9, off 3, and Bob Burns' 10.8 was 1.8 off the last report. Jack Kirkwood averaged off 3.9 for week of June 1-7. . . . When Ken Dolan was paged three times for phone calls at the Derby, Bob Hussey cracked, "he must have preempted Lew Pollack's time." . . . For the record: Walter Winchell is top dog in the Crossley kennel and cops show money on the Hooper tote board.

GEORGE Washington Hill's "Hit Parade" will come booming out of your set with the same zippy tempo and crashing of cymbals late next month much the same as it has been doing for years but the voices will be different. Dick Todd comes crooning your way July 28 and that means Larry Tibbett has worn out his welcome. And Mr. Hill wishes he was sure Joan Edwards will be caroling ever so sweetly when the leaves turn brown in Kokomo. The little lady is heading our way soon and wants to stay here. That means Hill will have to pay the line charges and hire an accompanying band if he would pipe her in on the Parade. That's no small item, as Frank Sinatra found out, and there's better than an outside chance that the show may be moved here. Just now Miss Edwards is the apple of his eye and rather than lose her he might even follow her to Hollywood.

Footnote to the package controversy:
Frank Healey of the Lyons office saunters into one of the big agencies and immediately settles to the business of selling a Barry Fitzgerald package—price $12,000. "What's the breakdown?" the talent buyer wants to know. "Oh, that I can't tell you," hedges Healey. "Then what am I buying for $12,000?" the 15% er pursues. "Fitzgerald," counters the 10er. If packages are ever bought on such flimsy presentation the client deserves to get rooked. Buying a pig in a poke belongs to church bazaars and not in commercial radio. If that ever comes to pass you can kiss the agency boys goodbye.

HITCH hikes . . . Deal with Andy Russell for the second lead on the Joan Davis Show was signed over the weekend. He gets $2,500 weekly on a 39-week spread and will be given plenty to do beside singing. . . . Max Factor Sales Builders are so won over to the Ray Noble Show and Ed Cashman's production that they may stay on until Frankie comes marching home. . . . Armour would spot Hedda Hopper in a half hour show if the CBS time is right. . . . Southern California Broadcasters are cracking down on agencies, so-called, which collect 15% commission and in some instances kick back to the client. Regulations are being tightened and only those who can qualify will be recognized.

'GERTIE'S GARTER' IS FIRST UA PIC TO GO SINCE STRIKE

Start today of Edward Small's "Getting Gertie's Garter" is first United Artists picture of a large group held up by strike conditions to get under way. Picture was to have gone before cameras a couple of months ago, but strike caused Small to close down his organization almost completely. Binnie Barnes, J. Carrol Naish, Jerome Cowan and Vera Marshe join cast today headed by Marie McDonald, Dennis O'Keefe and Barry Sullivan.

Charles R. Rogers, Andrew Stone, Jules Levey, Arnold Pressburger and Seymour Nebenzal are among other UA producers forced to postpone start of their respective pictures due to strike. Nebenzal, however, finally gets under way next Monday with "Whistle Stop," and next UA producer to roll probably will be Benedict Bogeaus, with Paulette Goddard starrer, "Diary of a Chambermaid," slated for around July 1.

Both Rogers and Stone lost studio space commitments at General Service studio because of their inability to start when planned. Rogers postponed "My Wild Irish Rose," slated for last April, until proposed Sept. 1 start, and Stone had to switch his scheduled May rolling of "Petticoat Lane" to mid-August. Levey still is uncertain when he can go before cameras with his "Homesteaders." Golden Productions may start its "Breakfast In Hollywood" some time in July, and Pressburger is expected to take off with "Scandal In Paris" middle of same month.

Hunt Stromberg has been shooting on "Young Widow" during the strike, but actually started film Feb. 19, several weeks before strike was called. Shooting closed down after a week due to differences between Ida Lupino and producer, but some footage with other players was of use when filming resumed April 19 with Jane Russell in title role.

DEFER COURT RULING ON MASS PICKETING

Superior court ruling on legality of mass picketing in the current studio strike has been postponed until next month. Hearing on application of Samuel Goldwyn studio for an injunction restraining the use of more than six pickets at a time has been continued until July 20 by agreement of all parties concerned. In the meantime the temporary restraining order issued by Judge Emmet Wilson will remain in force.

Young man wishes opportunity to work in Motion Picture or Radio Agency; is aggressive and knows studio work. Can furnish good references.

ASCAP KILLS WIRED MUSIC IN MARKETS

American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has thrown a monkey-wrench in the plans to install wired music in markets here. Ascap toppers informed the music firm that rates of $10 per month per market would be required before licenses could be issued. With the plan calling for installations in 1,000 markets around town, fees of $10,000 per month stymied the telephone tune toppers and they have temporarily withdrawn from the field.

Survey being conducted also found that some of the grocerymen were reticent about the commercial plugs, inasmuch as they might have conflicted with display advertising in their particular stores. This point, although being smoothed out, helped to sink the wired music plan.

Grocerymen also would not agree to pay the $10 performing fee to Ascap, even though they were receiving wired music service for nothing. And the company, which was to be the source, where Ascap wanted to place the license bite, could not see its way clear to forking over $10,000 per month.

SPECIAL COURT TO PUSH BIG 5 CASE

Washington, June 17. — Word from New York that a special "expediting court" has been set up to speed the "Big Five" motion picture case was hailed here yesterday by officials of the anti-trust division of the Justice Department.

The division requested the "expediting court" because such tribunals speed up the trial and the court's opinion substantially.

U. S. District Court Judge Goddard has been handling the case. He will serve on the "expediting court" with District Judge John Bright and Circuit Court Judge Augustus N. Hand, who will preside at the trial in the fall. Special court will not start the trial any sooner, but will move it faster when it gets under way.

FILMS AS MORAL BUILDERS SEEN BY SKOURAS

New York, June 17. — Spyros Skouras, at a dinner held for Arthur Rank at Union Club Friday night, said he hoped that through the medium of motion pictures moral standards of mankind would be raised so that future wars might be avoided. He mentioned kinship between American and British films, and declared Rank also realizes picture value as a cultural force.

British film tycoon stated he knows the many difficulties in getting British pictures accepted in America, but hoped to make headway through the help and friendship being extended to him. He regretted being here at this time, however, he said, because he missed Lord Mayor of London's dinner to General Eisenhower.

Among the dinner guests were John R. Dillon, Barrington Gain, John Hertz, Jr., Malcolm Kingsberg, Roy Larsen, Floyd Odlum, Bob O'Donnell, Charles Reagan, Phil Reisman, Joseph M. Schenck, Tom Connors, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, Murray Silverstone, G. I. Woodham-Smith, Herbert Yates, A. J. Balaban.

OWI BUDGET FOR RADIO HELD ESSENTIAL

appeared on behalf of the Domestic Motion Picture Bureau.

"In the event the activities of the radio bureau are impaired or terminated for any reason during the war," said Ryan, "it is certain that an even more chaotic condition than existed prior to the development of the radio bureau would result.

"Immediately all of those agencies which have been clearing their material through OWI undoubtedly will send it direct to the stations. The volume will be so great that no station can carry all of it and there will be a wide variance of opinion as to the order of importance of the items submitted.

"It is clear, then, that such a condition would seriously impair the war effort. Unquestionably a tremendous contribution has been made to a better understanding by the public of the important war activities because of the coordination of war messages by the radio bureau of OWI.

"We earnestly request that your honorable committee report favorably the restoration in the budget of the funds necessary to maintain on an efficient basis the radio bureau of the Domestic Branch of OWI for the duration of the war."

The bureau is slated to go out the window on the basis of the $17,000,000 slash made in the OWI budget by the House. Heavy pressure now is being brought to have the Senate restore the bulk of the money.

Radio Network Plugs

Top plug tunes of the week, as logged over the major networks, NBC, CBS, Blue and Mutual, are being LISTED ALPHABETICALLY, not numerically, under a new accord between the music publishers and song pluggers union, as a means to curb the payola evil. Thus, it is figured, the normal competitive methods, sans artificial stimulation to get on top will tend to eliminate some of the petty bribery, etc.

Oscar

(A New Picture Idea)

by Charles Speer

NOTE: The following is an excerpt from a review you might read in these columns one year from now, and I quote:

Last night at its world premiere at the Chinese Theatre all Hollywood got a chance to look at itself in a new picture titled OSCAR, and lo, the looking was good. There've been pictures about Hollywood in the past, but never one like this. As a record of what the film capital has done in the war, it is superb. As sheer entertainment, it has everything: music, dancing, spectacle, and the vivid human story of three people who brought only their talent and determination to Hollywood and by hard work, won two of the highly coveted Oscars. In short, it's an honest and entertaining portrait of the industry, and the studio that made it can take bows from the trade and public alike for a type of picture long overdue.

In writing the original story and screen play, Charlie Speer took the premise that the Oscar is the ultimate goal of all sincere studio workers, be they performers, directors, musicians, or technicians. By so fluid a device, the whole story of wartime Hollywood is projected with entertaining highlights on the body of the story.

In short, the story is based on an oldtime vaudeville performer who drifts to Hollywood and bit parts. He has a granddaughter and grandniece to whom he writes constantly magnifying his success in the studios, neglecting to tell them the reason he knows the stars and directors so well is that he works in a drive-in across from the studio. When their parents die, there's nothing for them to do but come to Hollywood and live with him.

The granddaughter is an aspiring singer, and the moppet, aged seven, has eyes only for the Klieg lights. The way the old man grooms them for carers, and at the same time keeps up the deception that he's a Hollywood big shot, gives the picture its flow and pace. The two gals win their Oscars, and in a moving scene at the finale, they bestow their cherished idols on the old gent who has made the two careers possible.

But what can't be shown in this brief review is the story of Oscar as it weaves through the picture. Effective use of flashbacks of former Oscar winners, unforgettable scenes from past pictures, and the parallel story of Oscar itself and what it means in the industry, give the picture an authority and interest that has seldom been equalled.

The studios have been understandably reluctant to make pictures based on Hollywood, with few notable exceptions. OSCAR allowed them a peg on which to hang the whole story—a frank, constructive, engaging story of a great industry, that will bring in good will and a greater understanding of the sincere workers in the industry whose efforts reach the high water mark in that word . . . Oscar. Yep—OSCAR is a winner—surefire boxoffice for its title—and tops in entertainment.

NOTE: The above device of a prevue review is used to bring the story idea of OSCAR to studio heads. This is the first in a series of original story ideas to be known as THE STORY FOR THE STAR—story ideas tailored to the talents of given stars for specific studios. Studios interested in examining the original story for OSCAR for production will be sent a complete presentation of the idea on asking byphone or wire. There is a supplementary radio and television adaptation in the original presentation. Obviously, no stars could be listed in this column, but the three stars for the old man, the girl singer, and the moppet, suggest themselves automatically. Other story ideas now in preparation include— QUIZ KID, based on the radio program and a Hollywood child star; ON THE DOWN BEAT, based on Down Beat Magazine's annual poll-winning bands and designed as an annual cavalcade of swing and sweet music, in cooperation with Down Beat Magazine. The writer of these ideas is well known in New York and Hollywood radio circles, and full background will be provided on request.

MAYER GIVES 'GO' ON BIG FILM PRODUCTION

starring June Allyson and Kathryn Grayson in title roles, starting today, is first to go in big push, with "Bad Bascomb" to follow immediately. Latter, to pair Wallace Beery and Margaret O'Brien, will be made partially in Jackson Hole, Wyo., with Director S. Sylvan Simon and troupe leaving very shortly for location site.

Filmization of A. J. Cronin's novel, "The Green Years," also is set for early takeoff with Charles Coburn in one of top roles, and "The Hoodlum Saint," William Powell starrer, rolls within next few weeks under direction of Norman Taurog.

"No Leave, No Love," for which Pat Kirkwood was borrowed from London Films Co., Ltd., to star, is another high-budgeter, as is "Holiday In Mexico," both to roll this summer. "Belle of New York," which Arthur Freed will produce, likewise is penciled in for starting gun by late summer or early fall.

RKO Plans Series On 'Radio Stars On Parade'

RKO is planning to make annual series out of its recently completed "Radio Stars On Parade." Executive reaction on lot is so favorable to picture, and its possibilities for future filming, that studio already has started ball rolling for readying of follow-up film.

coin ever registered at the house on any non-holiday opening session.

Though business earlier in the day Saturday was a bit slow, the house finished it out with a sensational $15,000 and indications are that at the midnight hour tonight another $14,000 will be registered in the till, which will make the three-day figure for this attraction close to the $41,000 mark.

Should the picture hold this pace the Strand will hit around $80,000 on the week, very near to the all-time record held by Charlie Chaplin's "Circus," made many years back in the silent days.

The theatre is getting a good turnover, having had six stage shows on Friday and yesterday, while five were being given today. Theatre plans six for tomorrow, with five to be played thereafter.

While the rest of the theatres on the main stem were hurt over the weekend, especially Saturday, by the heat, the suffering was not serious.

SCREEN PLAYERS BID FOR 'EXTRA' CHARTER SPURNED

Screen Players Union will not get an American Federation of Labor charter for film extras from the Associated Actors and Artistes of America. In turning thumbs down on the SPU application, Prexy Paul Dulzell advised Business Representative Mike Jeffers the international instead is preparing to issue a charter for extras to the Screen Extras Guild.

At the same time Jeffers, who returned from Sacramento yesterday, declared the State Federation of Labor was maintaining a hands-off policy in the union fight for control of extras. He said the Federation had recalled C. J. Hyans, who was loaned to the Four A's as an organizer and Hyans was in no way connected with SEG. It is understood, however, the Four A's is sending its own organizer here.

In a letter answering Jeffers' application for a charter, Dulzell stated:

"We are in receipt of your telegram dated May 22, requesting issuance of a charter from this international upon conditions laid down by you.

"It is the unalterable determination of the international board of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America in accordance with its past practice in creating all existing branches that the holding of a democratic election of all eligible members and the adoption of a democratic constitution shall be a perequisite to the issuance of any charter. These purposes of the Four A's you have rejected.

"It was also manifest to you that a branch so created would receive full and complete autonomy as enjoyed by the other branches of this international. It is the responsibility and obligation of this international under its charter from the AF of L to organize and to protect all performers including motion picture extras.

"The international board has taken action to issue a charter to a new branch presently known as the Screen Extras Guild with jurisdiction over this field, which charter will be delivered to a duly elected and constituted administration of motion picture extras. All performers in this field in the motion picture industry in Los Angeles and Hollywood are eligible to affiliate and to exercise their democratic rights."

Issuance of the charter is expected to further complicate affairs of extras, many of whom now belong to three organizations, the Screen Actors Guild, Screen Players Union and Screen Extras Guild. SPU was certified by the National Labor Relations Board as the bargaining representative for all extras and already has signed inteim agreements with some 33 independent producers. SEG, on the other hand declares SPU does not represent all the extras and that its officers and constitution were selected without giving all former B members of the Guild an opportunity to participate. SEG tops have indicated the NLRB will be asked to rescind its certification of SPU.

A Congressional committee currently is investigating actions of the NLRB and other government boards. Business Representative Jeffers and Attorney Alex H. Schullman, of the SPU, have been invited to appear before the committee on June 26.

HEAT WAVE GIVES N. YORKERS BAD DAY

New York, June 17.—That old bugaboo, the "heat wave," was a bit too much on Friday for the workers in the home offices of picture companies, so at noon the employes were given the green light to "fade" for the weekend.

Also, cooling systems generally seemed to be out of whack. In the morning there was a tradeshow of "GI Joe," and the cooling system in the projection room broke down, giving the reviewers an uncomfortable session, which was followed by another cooling system breakdown in the afternoon when the reviewers were looking at "Rhapsody In Blue."

Heavy business generally taxed the theatre cooling plants with extraordinary crowds militating against the effectiveness of theatre refrigeration, which has sort of worn out during the war period.

Metro Plans Musical Of 'Huckleberry Finn'

Metro is to make musical version of Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn." Sally Benson already has written treatment for Arthur Freed, who will produce, and preparations for film's rolling will start immediately Freed returns from New York in 10 days. At this time it is problematical whether "Finn" or "Showboat" will go first. Plot will revolve around the feud in Twain novel.

'Heartbeat' Start Set

Hakim Brothers "Heartbeat" to be directed for RKO release by Sam Wood goes into production on June 28. Film stars Ginger Rogers with Pierre Aumont is male lead.

ZANUCK TALKS WITH TRUMAN ON NAZI RE-EDUCATION

Washington, June 17. — Prior to taking off with the producers on the trip to Europe, Darryl F. Zanuck conferred with President Truman on the job the motion picture industry could do in the re-education of Germany. Zanuck, who with several others has seen the President before in this connection, told Truman he believed the industry could and should take a vital part in the job.

He envisioned the production of films which would be primarily of an entertainment character but which would show clearly what life is like in a democratic nation like the U. S.

"Films that would be best for the German population," Zanuck told newsmen, "would not be merely propaganda but would be pictures that the American public also would enjoy seeing." He gave, as example, Metro's "Human Comedy," which could teach democracy to the Germans.

20th-Fox biggie stated Truman was very much interested in the subject.

Only three studios and two organizations have made investments to date. These include $3,000,000 studio buy by Warners, the $1,000,000 investment by Universal studio and $750,000 by 20th-Fox studio. Hollywood Canteen has invested $200,000 and the Screen Actors Guild $50,000.

'GRINS AND BITTERS' TURNS INTO WOW AS BOND SELLER

One of those "let's start a show" things called "Grins and Bitters," put together as a bond drive gimmick, is turning out to be something special in Army shows, according to Nat Young, Universal music adviser. In four performances in valley towns the show, a fast-moving musical revue, has picked up nearly $2,000,000 for the Seventh War loan on a buy-a-bond-for-admission basis. The take at the Van Nuys Woman's Club auditorium Wednesday night was $500,000.

Performers are soldiers, Wacs and civilian employes from Camp Haan and Santa Monica Redistribution Center. Show is written and produced by Pfc Jack Noonan and directed by Corp. William Nichols. Scenery and settings are by Pfc Martin Schreiner and musical arrangements by Pvt. Hugh Jackson.

Young is working with show as guest conductor of the Redistribution Center band, and Jack Brooks, Universal songwriter, has done special song numbers.

Idea of the show, as stated on the program, is based on Quentin Reynolds' gag: "Give the people at home a break . . . whatthehell, they're our allies, too, aren't they?"

BRISKIN TO N.Y. TO SEE CAPRA ON DISTRIBUTION

Sam Briskin heads for New York on Friday to meet Col. Frank Capra, his partner in Liberty Pictures, just out of the Army, and to discuss the proposition of distribution of films they contemplate making.

Briskin discussed release through United Artists when Ed Raftery was here a month ago, and now desires to talk with Ned Depinet of RKO.

Indications are that the unit probably will tie in with RKO, as preliminary talks already have taken place here and in New York. Report has it that there is a possibility of blending the Liberty unit with that of the Rainbow organization in which Leo McCarey, Bing Crosby and a number of others are interested.

Probably first film that Liberty would do is the Eric Hatch "Flying Yorkshireman," which Capra wanted to make while he was at Columbia before going into the Army.

MANY contract players find themselves cooling their heels on studio lots, cast in small bits or used as atmosphere. With current shortage of male stars, studios have recently gone into build-ups for actors on hand. However, the lot of the femme players remain the same. Every so often recognition from outside sources causes producers and directors to start re-examining merits of their own femme players. Barbara Bates, for an example, has gone practically unnoticed for more than a year at Universal. A bit in "Salome" resulted in a cover for her in Life mag together with an inside layout, a couple of weeks ago. Exploitation trick served to focus attention on her and now all studio tops want to use the young Denver player. Producer-director George Waggner had a special part written for her in "Alibi In Ermine," Charles Barton is going to use her in "Way For a Lady," and Ford Beebe is casting her in "The Daltons Ride Again."

WITH "National Barn Dance," picturization of 11-year-old radio program which Walter MacEwen produced for Paramount as one of his final films for company, already reported having grossed well over million dollar mark, principals of air show have written MacEwen that they would lige for him to produce another film with them, centering around airer. MacEwen, who left Paramount shortly after completing picture, now is associated with Jesse L. Lasky on RKO production releasing deal. Paramount holds no commitment to make another picture with "NBD" program, so possibility exists Lasky and MacEwen may do follow-up feature after they complete several properties they now are preparing.

TELEVISION facilities of CBS in New York will be made available to national advertisers on a "working partnership" basis for the testing, development and presentation of video programs. No charge for time will be made while there is no measurable circulation, but there will be a fee of $150 an hour for use of the studio and to defray part costs of lighting, cameramen, stage hands, announcers, producers and maintenance. In announcing the cooperative plan, CBS declares its objective is to "achieve the optimum of effectiveness with video as media of entertainment and advertising."

Dividends In Pic Industry On Skid

Washington, June 18.—Film industry dividends are definitely on the skids this year. Stockholders received payments of only $5,400,000 during the first five months, contrasted with $6,700,000 for the same period last year, according to department of commerce figures.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

General of the Army, Dwight D. Eisenhower, has returned in triumph to his native land and it might be well to examine the qualities of this man who carries the burden of American occupation of Germany, the man himself behind his five stars and military glory. Lord Wavell once lectured at Cambridge University on generals and generalship and said he had searched history for a satisfactory definition of "the good general." His search carried him back to a wise man named Socrates. There is no room here for that long definition, but here's its gist: The main burden of a general has more to do with administration and planning, diplomacy and public relations, concern for his men and knowledge of his adversary, that it has with the direction of a battle. In all these items and many more Gen. Eisenhower has demonstrated superlative ability; he has been a supreme coordinator when coordination of the Allied effort in Europe was essential to Allied success. And he returns to a task in Germany where his ability and experience will be again put to test.

THREE U.S. JUDGES WILL DECIDE BIG 5 CASE

New York, June 18.—One of the last acts of Attorney General Francis Biddle, designed to speed up the coming trial of the government's case against distributors and possibly to toughen the situation for distribs, resulted today in the appointment of three Federal judges to hear and decide the suit. Biddle will be succeeded July 1 by Tom C. Clark, assistant attorney general in charge of the criminal division of the Department of Justice.

Outgoing Cabinet member, who has been adamant in his insistence that the Big Five be divorced from their theatre chains and that other reforms be invoked, last week filed what is known as an expediting certificate with Judge Learned Hand, president justice of the circuit court in New York, asking him to name three judges to sit on the government anti-trust case. It is slated to go to trial Oct. 8.

Judge Hand today designated a circuit court associate, Judge Augustus Hand, and two district court judges, Henry W. Goddard, who has had jurisdiction of the case from the start as well as the decree, and John Bright.

TRADESHOWN at studio, Westwood, Calif., June 14, 1945. Running time: 107 MINS.

"Captain Eddie" is good run-of-the-mill film fare that probably will do better at the box office than it does with the snootier film critics. As the purported life story of Eddie Rickenbacker it starts out with excellent exploitation possibilities which will supplement the natural draw of the American hero type of story.

The yarn is done in cutbacks with well-handled sequences of the famous Pacific crackup and rescue of Rickenbacker and his party opening and closing the show. Fred MacMurray's portrayal of Rickenbacker is especially good in these scenes.

The same goes for the work of Lloyd Nolan, Richard Conte, Richard Crane, Charles Russell and Stanley Ridges, his companions in the Pacific sequences.

The drama, aside from these sequences, is streamlined Horatio Alger. Rickenbacker's youth in the days when the conservatives were just beginning to insist that the automobile would never supplant the horse gets a generous portion of the footage.

Darryl Hickman makes an appealing role of Rickenbacker as a boy mechanic, enthusiastic about that new contraption, the automobile, and already avid to fly.

Producer Winfield Sheehan has dodged most of the war activity of the famous ace of World War I, Rickenbacker's experiences as a fighting flier being sketched in only briefly. He has put his chief dependence on developing the nostalgic appeal of family life in the early 1900's.

Lloyd Bacon's directing keeps the story from dragging, even in the quieter passages, and works Eddie's boyhood flying experiments and the misadventures of the early-day motorists for full measure of comedy.

As the life story of Rickenbacker the film probably contains more showshop than biography—but then, biography isn't always the best entertainment.

Mr. Muggs Rides Again

(Drama)

MONOGRAM RELEASE. Producers, Sam Katzman-Jack Dietz. Director, Wallace Fox. Original story and screenplay, Harvey H. Gates. Photography, Ira Morgan. Production manager, Mel DeLay. Film editor, William Austin. Art director, David Milton. Musical director, Edward Kay. Sound engineer, Thomas Lambert.

CAST—Co-stars Leo Gorcey and the East Side Kids, with Huntz Hall, Billy Benedict, Nancy Brinckman, Bernerd Thomas, George Meeker, Minerva Urecal, Pierre Watkin, Johnny Duncan, Mendie Koenig, Bud Gorman, John H. Allen, Milton Kibbee, Frank Jacquet.

PREVIEWED at the Vista theatre, June 18, 1945. Running time: 63 MINS.

The East Side Kids go dramatic in "Mr. Muggs Rides Again." For fans used to slapstick antics from this group of sidewalk urchins, it will come as a distinct, and not too favorable, surprise. Because of past entries, the "Mr. Muggs" is sellable as supporting material but creates no new standards for the series.

Plot pulls all stops in dishing up a curious melange of hearts-and-flowers dramatics and develops so many tangents as it unfolds that it's hard to follow. Script and direction lay it on thick in telling of a jockey who is framed and suspended for refusing to throw a race, how he fights his way back to riding again. In between, Leo Gorcey, the jockey, and his gang save an old lady's stable from attachment, nurse an ailing steed back to health, reform a former pal temporarily gone wrong, and wind it all up with a standard celluloid finish by booting the old nag home a winner.

Incongruous as is the character of Gorcey in this East Side Kids opus, he does a forthright job of it. Huntz Hall bats out his usual dopey role of Glimpy in expected fashion, and Billy Benedict shows up well as Skinny. Nancy Brinckman adds little to the femme lead part as love interest with Bernerd Thomas. George Meeker, the heavy; Minerva Urecal, the femme stable owner; Johnny Duncan, Mendie Koenig, Bud Gorman, John H. Allen and others turn in standard work.

Wallace Fox directed the Sam Katzman-Jack Dietz production from the Harvey H. Gates original script. Ira Morgan photographed.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

"MY WEEK"

(With due apologies to Mrs. F.D.R.)

By RADIE HARRIS

TO LUNCH AT VOISIN WITH KATHARINE CORNELL, the day after she had played her final performance of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" at Halloran Hospital, and the day before she was to leave for a much needed rest lasting until October at her summer retreat in Martha's Vineyard. Of her plans for next season? None. At the moment, she is too tired to even recognize a good play if she read one. She has an option on a period play, "Second Lady," but there is nothing definite about a production. Gilbert Miller has sent her Vina Delmar's new play, with the memo that if she likes it well enough, he will wait indefinitely for her to do it. There is still the possibility of "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" for the Pacific, but if circumstances should prevent, the G. I.'s, when they become civvies again, will have a chance to catch up with this major theatrical treat. For when the curtain rang down on "The Barretts," in its final performance at Halloran Hospital, "Kit" was not saying goodby to her favorite heroine. Because of the timeless love story, she plans to revive it every so often for the rest of her career, so that the mothers who saw the original version, ten years ago, and brought their children to the 1945 revival, will come back again in 1955 with their grandchildren. In telling of her experiences visiting the hospital wards overseas, "Kit" once more proved her terrific sense of modesty. Not wanting to embarrass any G. I.'s who didn't recognize her, she never announced her identity. When they questioned her about her uniform and asked her what she did, she would answer, "I'm with the U.S.O." "Do you know Brian Aherne?" "You mean that tall English guy in the movies?" "Sure, Sure," was their retort. Whereupon "Kit" would answer very simply, "Well, I'm appearing here in a play with him."

Tennyson, when he wrote, "True humility, the biggest virtue, mother of them all," could have been inspired by Katharine Cornell.

TO A BON VOYAGE PARTY FOR ED "ARCHIE" GARDNER (through the courtesy of Y. & R.) prior to his USO overseas tour. Ed stalled in California for two days, so that Jinx Falkenburg, who goes along with him, could have a 48-hour honeymoon with her groom, Col. Tex McCrary, before he, too, shoves off in the opposite direction—the Pacific. Both Tex and Jinx dropped in for a few minutes and spent most of those minutes being snapped by the lens hounds, which for Tex proved a tougher chore than anything he faced in the Pacific. He's that kind of a self-effacing guy! Jinx wore her happiness all over her and looked like an ad for Technicolor in a tomato red jersey sports dress. Ed dressed up for the occasion in his white apron with the autographs of every guest who has visited "Duffy's Tavern." When the drinks were passed around, this "very good Eddie" waved the tray away airily and said, "Never touch the stuff!" His liquid diet now consists solely of Coca-Cola—the reason he was able to pass his physical. Seeing Ed again, I couldn't help but remember the time he was married to Shirley Booth, and they were in the midst of one of their frequent friendly separations. Shirley moved to the Algonquin and one evening Ed came to call. As he framed himself in the doorway, the sight that greeted him was a bevy of girls in various stages of negligee—a process shot of "Girl's Dormitory." Ed took in the scene and then, turning to Shirley, popped this $64 question, "Tell me, darling, do you prefer marriage—or college?"

TO THE DRESS REHEARSALS OF "OUR TOWN" AND "DOUBLE DOOR," two USO productions now alerted for G. I. scrutiny. To the hep boys in uniform who are theatre wise, and to those neophytes who have never seen "round actors" before, both these offerings are out of Broadway's top drawer—in fact, superior to some of the current fare playing to a $4.40 top. It was to be expected that Raymond Massey, as "Commentator" of "Grover's Corner" would contribute his usual skillful performance, but the surprise element is the supporting no name cast. A tip to talent scouts is to catch the calendar for the homecoming of Carolyn Wall, and nab her p.d.q. In the role created by Martha Scott, she's an actress with star dust in her eyes. Special mention is also due Caroll McComas, who took over the role of "Mrs. Gibbs" on a 36-hour notice, and came through with an amazingly fine performance—her first since she retired, some 12 years ago. How the third act of this Thornton Wilder play, which is entrely devoted to "Death," will be accepted by servicemen is a moot question. Should it get the Army green light, there is NO QUESTION how the boys will appreciate the homey elements of "Our Town," which to so many of them will symbolize "Their Town." As a double feature attraction on the same bill, Ray Massey reappears as "Abe Lincoln," with a speech that is so timely, it might have been written today. Robert Sherwood himself has written a special introductory explanation to his isolated Lincoln-Douglas debates scene from his play, "Abe Lincoln In Illinois," but it is only long enough for Massey to put on his wig, stovepipe and frock coat. But even without the Lincoln schnozzola, he still IS Abraham Lincoln.

In "Double Door," Elizabeth MacFadden's mystery melo, there is another find for those decriers of "Where can we find real talent?" Her name is Peggy Lyons—she has just come back from six months overseas as part of a dancing unit, and this is her first attempt at a speaking part. Under Harold Winston's directorial guidance, she gives a performance comparable to the best of any leading lady on Broadway. And Dan Lounsbury, playing opposite her, is a leading man who should find no difficulty in landing a job when he makes a happy landing back on the Main Stem.

KROUSE RETIRES FROM IATSE ON HALF PAY

Louis Krouse, general secretary-treasurer of the IATSE, has been retired on one-half his annual salary, it was learned here last night. William P. Raoul, of Atlanta, formerly assistant to the IA prexy, has been elected by the general executive board to fill the post. Krouse found it necessary to retire because of a general breakdown in health.

In a letter to heads of studio locals it was stated that Raoul, seventh IA vice-prexy, had been elected to the post in compliance with the IATSE constitution. Labor tops were puzzled over this announcement, since Carl Cooper, head of the downtown stagehands, was seventh veepee, having been re-elected at the last convention.

Some local IA leaders interpreted the move to mean that Cooper had resigned as seventh veepee, been replaced by Raoul, presumably not a member of the board, who then was elevated to the Krouse post and Cooper re-elected as veepee.

HOLDOVERS AID IN HOLDING UP B.O. TAKE

Los Angeles first-runs are receiving only light assistance from current new bills on the week, but two of the holdovers still are registering potent box office to help shove overall total for the seven days up to estimated $235,000 or better.

"Valley of Decision" at the Los Angeles, Egyptian and Fox Ritz, closing its second frame last night with estimated $57,000 in the kitty, which was less than normal drop from its first week's take of $69,626. "Between Two Women," heading double bill at Loew's State, Grauman's Chinese, Uptown and Carthay, is clocking fancy $41,000 estimate for its second and final week.

"Murder, He Says," at the Los Angeles and Hollywood Paramounts, looks like $34,000 on the week. "Escape In the Desert" at Warners Hollywood, Downtown and Wiltern, is sighting for only $36,000 despite high-pressure radio-ad campaign. "Patrick the Great," doubling with "Strange Illusion" at the Guild, United Artists and Wilshire, has a spotty $22,500 coming up.

"Salome, Where She Danced," winds up a light run at the Pantages and Hillstreet theatres tomorrow after one week and four days. Andy Kirk's orchestra with the Charioteers on the Orpheum stage pushed "The Kid Sister" up to estimated $24,500 for the week closed last night.

REPORT OF HYANS' RECALL AS ORGANIZER IS DENIED

Reports of Studio strikers that C. J. Hyans had been recalled by the State Federation of Labor from assignment as organizer for the Screen Extras Guild were denied last night by Jack Dales, western representative of the Associated Actors and Artistes of America and executive secretary of Screen Actors Guild. Dales explained that C. J. Haggerty, secretary-treasurer of the Federation, had been confused with request for a previous assignment for an organizer to the American Guild of Variety Artists.

Statement given out by the SAG said:

"Mr. John Dales, Jr., western representative of the Four A's, today corrected an erroneous statement emanating from Sacramento to the effect that C. J. Hyans, whom the California Federation of Labor loaned the Four A's as an organizer for the Screen Extras Guild had been withdrawn. Dales said he had checked the story with Mr. Haggerty, secretary-treasurer of the Federation, who had authorized him to correct the error.

"Mr. Haggerty explained when he was questioned concerning Mr. Hyans' appointment, he thought the question referred to another Four A request for State Federation assistance for another Four A affiliate. Haggerty said Mr. Hyans was appointed and is now working for SEG in Hollywood."

Announcement that Hyans had been appointed and had opened SEG headquarters on Las Palmas at Crossroads-of-the-World, was published exclusively in Daily Variety. SEG tops disclosed they now have 2,000 members, have adopted a constitution, which has been forwarded to the Four A's, and currently are awaiting word from the Four A's for a democratic election of officers prior to issuance of an American Federation of Labor charter by the Four A's.

Rep Goes All Out In Hiring Local Talent

Republic is going all out in hiring local radio talent in expanded exploitation program for "The Cheaters," which is slated for release next month. Studio starts cutting platters today with Joseph Schildkraut, Billie Burke, and Ann Gillis, who are featured in the Joseph Kane production, being joined by Frank Graham, Rosemary Kelly, Dave Vaile, Adele Mara, Bill Pennell, Bob Barrow and the St. Luke's Boy Choir. Original music, composed by Walter Scharf, studio music head, will be used for the transcriptions.

Irving Sindler Struts As Nephew Honored

Irving Sindler did plenty of strutting yesterday on Goldwyn lot, where he's prop man on "The Kid from Brooklyn." His nephew, Pfc. Jerome L. Sindler, of 343rd Infantry, won Bronze Star Medal for bravery under fire, which resulted in destruction of enemy gun positions and capture of 250 Germans last April at Rarin, Germany.

Martha Elba Back To Mexico After Test

Martha Elba, Mexican actress brought here last week from Mexico City by 20th-Fox to test for real-life role of Rusty in "American Guerrilla In the Philippines," has returned to southern capital for Clasa Films commitment. She is tops in the running right now for part, but final decision rests upon consideration of further tests being forwarded by company reps in Guatemala City, Colon and Havana.

NATIONAL SCREEN REVAMPS DISTRICTS

National Screen Service Corp., in a re-alignment of its sales districts, has split its 31 branch offices into seven districts instead of the previous four. Along with new setup, company has promoted four branch managers to district managers and elevated four salesmen to branch manager posts.

Under the new shuffle Bernard Wolf, Los Angeles branch manager, becomes manager of the West Coast district, comprising Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle and Portland exchanges. Ben Ashe, local salesman, moves up to managership of the branch office here, succeeding Wolf. Both are due in this week from regional sales meeting in Chicago.

New setup has Jack Cohen as eastern district manager; William Bein, central district; Leo Abrams, northeastern district; Charles Lester, southeastern district; Louis Patz, midwest district; Bernard Wolf, west coast district. No appointment for the southwestern district has been announced as yet, but territory will comprise Dallas, Oklahoma City and New Orleans.

20TH FOX CALLS OFF PRODUCTION OF 'GUERRILLA'

Production of "American Guerrilla In the Philippines" was sidetracked yesterday by 20th-Fox.

Reason given by Production Manager Ray Clune is that transportation difficulties have developed and the cost of filming the picture on Puerto Rico locations chosen would be prohibitive.

Announcement brought moans from numerous members of the cast and technical crew who last week were given "shots" to ward off tropical ailments in preparation for the trip. They are suffering more or less illness and discomfort from the injections and now learn that it was all for nothing.

Clune said the plan to film in Puerto Rico has been entirely abandoned, but that the picture will be shot elsewhere. Further plans for the production will be held up until Darryl Zanuck returns from Europe.

Report is that the picture will be filmed in black-and-white, instead of in Technicolor as originally intended.

Thiele Gets Rep Chore

William Thiele will direct "The Madonna's Secret," on which he collabed with Bradbury Foote, as his first chore for Republic, under new writer-director contract just inked. Film is slated for production in August, with Stephen Auer handling producer reins.

casts" to Windy City. Aligning himself with balance of drama boys Sunday, coincidental with Guild's announcement of its series for 1945-46, he headlined his column, "Theatre Guild Shirks Its Duty To Chicago."

Announcement by Guild that subscription renewals are now being accepted for series which includes "Hasty Heart," "Bell For Adano," "Foolish Notion," "Dark of the Moon" and new production of "Winter's Tale," to be directed by Iden Payne, appeared with Pollak's yelp that "the Guild isn't doing right by Chicago, it's getting money-hungry, it doesn't give a hoot about Chicago, etc."

"Is the Guild unable to take a small loss by letting 'Jacobowsky and the Colonel' stay another few weeks, instead of folding it up on us Saturday in its fifth week, final week's gross being $18,500?" Pollak asked.

"On the evidence," he summed up, "the Guild has left itself open to two charges. It has seemed to neglect its responsibility to the second largest city in the country. It has displayed a lack of initiative and a fear of even minor theatrical risk in the time of its greatest financial prosperity. Has the Guild lost its pioneering courage?"

N.Y. COURT RULING VITAL TO AUTHORS

mously that if the authors recovered damages against a film company for infringement of their play, the producer of such play is entitled to 50% of the damages so recovered. Louis Nizer appeared for McClintic.

Suit involved the Edward Sheldon-Margaret Ayer Barnes play, "Dishonored Lady." McClintic, in collaboration with Gilbert Miller, produced the play in which Miss Cornell starred. Later Metro produced "Letty Lynton," starring Joan Crawford. Alleging that film was patterned after the play, the playwrights sued Metro, claiming copyright infringement, and ultimately recovered $172,413. McClintic claimed he was entitled to 50% of this amount as producer of the stage play, while the authors contended their recovery was for the film rights.

The five judges of the Appellate division unanimously held that "recovery from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer company was not, as defendant Sheldon urges, in the nature of a penalty imposed upon the fringer which recovery defendants alone might retain. On the contrary, it was just compensation for the wrong perpetrated upon those who owned the motion picture rights of the play. . . . Plaintiff was entitled to his one-half share of that compensation."

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, June 18.—Political propaganda has the spotlight this week in our old city of Tenochtitlan, so old and wise that it looks on indifferently at photos of candidates to the Presidency, posted on walls of venerable buildings and modern atrocities. Who will be our next President? Since he has already been chosen, (or shall we say appointed?) and elections are still a long way off, let's talk about our cinema industry.

Paco Miller, ventriloquist, has copyrighted two screenplays. Oh, yes, everybody in Mexico writes for the movies: producers, directors, actors, singers, dancers, bullfighters, ventriloquists, and even a few professional writers.

The Rodriguez Brothers' production, "Captain Malacara," starring Pedro Armendariz and Manolita Saval, will be released this week. Such a lovely girl, Manolita, if she would only stop over-acting!

Tito Davidson, former technical adviser with 20th-Fox, and for last two years scripting here, adapted Blasco Ibanez's "La Barraca." Now he has been appointed attache to the Chilean Embassy. Sounds like a reward.

Leonora Amar has been signed by Films Mundiales. The Argentinian Roberto Ratti will direct her first pic. Will she copy the accent and singing tone of the Argentine or speak English "a la Portuguese?"

Last Sunday box office receipts at our leading cinemas were very good, with Mexican films at the Magerit, Metropolitan, Chapultepec and Palacio Chino. . . . Cantinflas has renewed his contract with Posa Films up to 1950. . . . Spanish cinemactress Rosita Moreno on her way to Panama. . . . Director Irving Rapper and composer Leonard Bernstein at Acapulco. . . . Autograph hounds at the Reforma lobby waiting for Deanna Durbin's much announced arrival. . . . William Rowland has just signed Malu Gatica for stellar role in "Officer's Club," to be filmed both in English and Spanish. . . . Gonzalo Elvira leaves for Spain, where he will produce pictures for the mother country. Director Paco Elicas also Spain-bound, having signed with Spanish studios. . . . Arturo de Cordova and Dolores del Rio to co-star in next Grovas and Mauricio de la Serna production, Antonio Momplet directing. . . . Ramon Pereda, veteran producer, director and actor, getting ready to start shooting of "Papa Lebonard." . . . We hope it won't be quite as bad as his last pic. . . . We also hope that actor-director-husband of star Mapy Cortes will choose a better comedy for her next time. . . . Really, "La Picara Susana," now playing, is yawn-provoking, and not even Mapy's charm saves it. . . . There must be something wrong with me today, I can't think up nice things about anybody. . . . Maybe it is the political propaganda, after all.

PICTURE EQUIPMENT EXPORT BAN END NEAR

WPB is backing it. Now that L-267, the order governing the rationing of the equipment, has been lifted, there appears no further reason why the ban should not be terminated. Adams contended export would consist principally of spare parts.

Since plenty of aluminum, steel and motors now are available, the European shortage of parts could be greatly alleviated, according to Adams. Great Britain also is reported getting ready to permit export of the equipment.

Adams, who left tonight for a visit to the Eastman plant at Rochester and also will visit Ansco, said he would confer with George Schaefer of the WAC before returning to Washington. Purpose of the trip is to iron out manpower kinks which may have developed, so as to speed up the production of raw stock in the factories.

"Thus far," Adams said, "everything looks fine, with workers on a one-week rather than a two-week vacation schedule. Production is shaping up so that the summer drop in production probably will be less than 20,000,000 feet."

Last year the drop was 50,000,000 feet and Adams had said he hoped to hold it down to 30,000,000 this summer.

WPB continues to work closely with the Army to rush additional raw material to the Kodak-Pathe plant in Paris and the Gaevert factory in Belgium, in order to keep up raw film production schedules there. Adams pointed out that the French government allocated about 45% of its total film production to SHEAF.

"Our program," said Adams, "is being formed in an attempt to overcome the world-wide film shortage." Along these lines WPB has recommended that any raw stock the Army has on hand in Europe, and which it does not plan to use, should be made available to liberated countries or to FEA, rather than be returned here.

To date the Army has declared surplus only of about 10,000,000 feet of 35mm. stock, most of it negative.

Adams disclosed that J. Arthur Rank spent a day in Washington recently.

BORZAGE RAPS GANG PIX IN HAYS LETTER

Producer-Director Frank Borzage rapped gangster films and recommended that Hollywood "grow up" in an open letter to the Hays office, declaring "nothing can do more harm to this country and the movie industry at this particular time."

Letter warned against films glamorizing gangsters and dealing with black markets and other subjects giving "wrong idea of American life as during the 1930's," urged production of educational films "which bring healthy profits" and suggested system of voluntary censorship. He cited "Wilson," "Song of Bernadette" and "Going My Way" as movies of which Hollywood "can be proud."

PAINTERS CHARGE 9 MAJOR STUDIOS 'UNFAIR'

Charging employment of 873 studio painters was terminated by the major studios because of their union activities, unfair labor practice charges were filed against the nine companies yesterday with the National Labor Relations Board.

Complaint, filed by Attorneys Frank Pestano and William Esterman, claims that 68 painter members of Moving Picture Painters Local 644 were discharged by Samuel Goldwyn studios, 70 by Columbia, 116 by Paramount, 86 by Metro, 85 by Universal, 169 by Warners, 120 by 20th-Fox, 113 by RKO and 46 by Republic.

This is the third union group to file unfair labor practice charges against the majors in connection with the current studio strike. First filed were for members of Screen Set Designers, Illustrators and Decorators Local 1421, involving about 400 men, and Studio Machinists Local 1185, involving about 600 technicians. Workers were notified of their dismissal shortly after strike of decorators was ordered on March 12.

NEW YORK MILLIONS GREET EISENHOWER

New York, June 19.—New York's millions turned out to welcome Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower today. Times Square was mobbed but movie theaters did little business until mid-afternoon, after the parade was over.

Special eventers from the four networks and indies covered the reception from beginning to end and NBC and CBS also gave television treatment. Most film companies closed down for the day.

Guesses ranged from 6,000,000 to 8,000,000 on attendance figures for reception and parade.

NY LEGIT OPENING

OH BROTHER

New York, June 19.—Maximilian Becker and Peter Warren brought Jacques Deval's comedy, "Oh Brother" to the Royale tonight, but the starring names of Arleen Whelan and Hugh Herbert were insufficient to suggest that the comedy has any box office possibilities.

Already a Paramount property and also backed by the film company, "Oh Brother" deals with a swindler and his scheme to acquire an inheritance. Herbert gets some laughs as the swindler with his usually eccentric mannerisms, but FILMERS in the know in New York still persist in decaring that anything regarding producer affiliations with J. Arthur Rank remains nebulous. Rank, according to confidants, has received many offers, although he has tried to give the impression that he received none at his various press conferences there, in Chicago and Canada. They point out that it is doubtful that he has set any deal as yet in this country. They point out that Spitz-Goetz recently signed a releasing deal with RKO which ties them for a year; that Sam Goldwyn has also a deal with that concern to run some time, and that there is no possibility that Floyd Odlum, who controls RKO, will join him when he himself just bought 25,000 shares of Disney stock, because he wants to hold rein there to keep the Disney output clearing through RKO.

SAMUEL GOLDWYN is serving notice that he will soon revert to the type of dramatic productions which have made industry history in the past. His long string of significant films were broken by a trio of musical-comedies "Princess and the Pirate," "Wonder Man," and "The Kid From Brooklyn." The producer, whose record of dramatic successes include "Street Scene," "Wuthering Heights," "Little Foxes," "Dodsworth," and "Arrowsmith," has close to a million dollars tied up in five story properties all dealing with significant themes. "The Bishop's Wife," for which he paid Robert Nathan some $200,000, will head his list of coming productions. His other expensive properties, all of which have scribblers busy turning out screen plays, are: Gwethalyn Graham's "Earth and High Heaven," MacKinlay Kantor's "Glory For Me," James Thurber's "Secret Life of Walter Mitty," and Lion Feuchtwanger's "Simone."

PUZZLING legit musical producers at the moment is the dearth of new femme lead singing talent. What with the services taking up most of the male voices, it would be natural to assume that male leads are scarce. However, several male vocalists of light opera calibre have made their appearance these last couple of seasons. Not so with the distaff thrushes. Producers look for a sharp crop of girls in the next two or three years but none is ready for lead roles so far. Not only are there headaches in casting for the leads, but finding understudies for the spots is even more difficult. Chorus voices have been tested, with disappointing results, but the producers have to take what material is at hand and hope that the present vocalists hold up until something new comes along.

AN Independent producer who is set shortly to start a picture for major release is in coin trouble. He had his picture all financed, when he approached the sponsor of second money on the production to cut his percentage for the loan. The latter could not see it that way, burned and withdrew his coin. So the producer, highly sensitive, started looking around for money to replace what was lost to him. It has been a difficult task and some half dozen people are around town on his behalf to get a "second-man," and only yesterday three of them approached the same party to interest him in the project, but he blew cold with the multiple solicitations.

"BETWEEN TWO WOMEN" the Metro picture starring Van Johnson, which is getting second week in first run houses was one of the "Dr. Kildaire" vehicles and originally titled "Dr. Red Adams." When the sales group in New York got a flash at the picture they decided a better title to sell it would be "Between Two Women," and a smart exploitation campaign was inaugurated. This will be responsible for this opus costing around $350,000 hitting a $2,500,000 domestic gross.

EXTENSIVE research in the development of improved packaging material for film is on the post-war program for the plastics division of the Reynolds Metals Co., according to E. M. Demand is for a moisture-proof, flexible wrapping material that will withstand high temperatures and humidity of the tropics and the cold of the Arctic.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

Whatever else results from the Moscow trial of 16 Poles arrested last March by the Russians, it is almost certain to end in further discrediting of the Polish government-in-exile. Generally, they are charged with diversionist activities against the Red Army, but there are many ramifications, including the alleged murder of 594 Russian officers, terroristic and propagandistic plotting behind the Soviet lines. All along it has looked as though the Soviet government had a substantial case against the accused Poles, especially after Moscow announced an open trial would be held. But it must be conceded that the wholesale confessions—admitting complete or partial guilt—were something of a surprise. These confessions from the men on trial center on the admission that they were ordered by the Polish government-in-exile to work against the Russians and try to divide them from Great Britain and the United States. An exposition of such charges will not add lustre to the Polish cause.

PRODUCTION CUT TO BE FELT IN FALL, BELIEF

New York, June 19. — Major film company execs report that sharp contraction in current production, combined with slowly shrinking backlogs at some studios, indicates a strong possibility of a severe film shortage for theatres next fall.

Effects of slowdown in production during last three months is expected to be felt in September, October and November releasing schedules. Pictures now being released are mainly those started before the studio strike began.

Distribution execs state that exhibitors will have to revise frequent practice of pulling a picture after second week when grosses chalked up would have been considered good for first week in previous years. If strike continues into July, it is contended, shortage will be felt into December and later.

It is anticipated that any product shortage would chiefly affect subsequent runs at the beginning. If there should be any radical decline in box office attendance figures, calling for more frequent program changes, first runs also would be affected in time.

TRADESHOWN at studio, June 15, 1945. Running time: 104 MINS.

Filmization of John Hersey's best-selling "A Bell For Adano" has been turned out with a dramatic directness that immediately establishes picture as a class production of high point interest value. Much of the simplicity and emotionalism of the book has been caught in its transference to the screen, and picture emerges a sensatively-directed and atmospherically-produced piece of box office workmanship, filled with individual gems of acting and generally deserving of attention.

This is the first time American Civil Administration in a liberated area has been glimpsed in action on the screen. In unfolding plot, spectator gains a full appreciation of what this branch of the service is accomplishing, narrative opening with the arrival of American Major Jappolo (John Hodiak) in a little Italian town of Adano to take over and once more bring order and full pattern of life to its tired and hungry inhabitants. What he has to face in the way of problems of the populace and Army red tape, is told fetchingly through the skillful direction of Henry King and the showmanship helming of Louis D. Lighton and Lamar Trotti collabing on the producer end.

Scripted by Trotti and Norman Reilly Raine, story is a compelling dramatic study of a stricken town and its people, painted with a compassionate stroke. Picture is humanized through the warm portrayals of its many characters; the major's approach to his assignment, and first the suspicions, then the enthusiastic welcome accorded him by the town's citizenry, who most of all want the return of their bell, stolen by the Nazis, around which their entire lives were patterned and regulated. Into the film's 104 minutes is poured a human interest story which will intrigue popular fancy.

Hodiak in the role of the major makes the most of a difficult characterization, and William Bendix as his aide contributes an equally admirable delineation. Gene Tierney is the girl, Tina, and plays her well. Montague Banks is a standout among supporting players, others in this category including Richard Conte, Roy Roberts, Hugo Haas, Marcel Dalio, Fortunio Bonanova, Roman Bohnen, William Edmunds and Glenn Langan. On technical end, Joseph La Shelle's photography is interesting, Lyle Wheeler and Mark-Lee Kirk share art direction honors and Alfred Newman's musical score points up dramatic interest. Other credits rank similarly.

The Naughty Nineties

(Musical Comedy)

UNIVERSAL RELEASE. Producers. Edmund L. Hartmann and John Grant. Director, Jean Yarbrough. Original screenplay by Edmund L. Hartmann, John Grant, Edmund Joseph and Hal Fimberg. Set decorations, Russell A. Gausman and Leigh Smith. Technician, Robert Pritchard. Musical director, Edward Fairchild. Musical numbers staged by John Doyle. Makeup, Jack P. Pierce. Gowns, Vera West. Film editor, Arthur Hilton.

CAST—Bud Abbott, Lou Costello, Alan Curtis, Rita Johnson, Henry Travers, Lois Collier, Joe Sawyer, Joe Kirk.

PREVIEWED at Universal studio, Universal City, June 19, 1945. Running time: 76 MINS.

The thousands of merry villagers who get their laughs from the antics of Abbott and Costello can, and probably will, lay their money on the line at the box office with the assurance that "The Naughty Nineties" will give them full value in entertainment.

Production is fashioned strictly as a vehicle for the burlesque gagging of the two slapstickers. Bud and Lou make the most of the chance to display their stock in trade, using most of their familiar, time-tried routines and adding a few new twists here and there. They even work in the entire "who-s on first, what's on second" gag, a burlesque silly that seems to wow the Abbott and Costello public however often it is repeated.

Four writers get credits for the story (five if you include Felix Adler's added comedy sequences), but that doesn't need to disturb anyone. The yarn really isn't that heavy. It is another of those sagas of the Mississippi showboat. Melodramatic plotting gives logical reason for the chase, pratt-fall and slapstick operations of the two comedians. And the showboat setting is natural background for the musical numbers.

Comedy highlight of the show probably is Costello's portrayal of Little Eva in the showboat staging of "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

Four of the songs are old-timers popular in the nineties. They are staged in the manner of the period. Three originals by Jack Brooks and Edgar Fairchild—"Uncle Tom's Cabin," "Rollin' Down the River Road" and "I Can't Get You Out of My Mind"—are tuneful numbers in the same mood as the old ones.

Lois Collier is an appealing personality in the romantic femme lead and handles her two song numbers adequately. Rita Johnson, the woman "heavy" of the piece, is convincing in the wicked siren part.

The entire cast gives an effective performance and is skillfully directed by Jean Yarbrough.

Edmund L. Hartmann and John Grant have freshened up the somewhat trite showboat setting and story by expert production.

WASHINGTON HULLABALOO

By FLORENCE S. LOWE

Washington, June 19.—The controversy over whether non-theatrical films adversely affect the box office seems to have been pretty well settled in the negative—at least to the satisfaction of the Argentine. Originally the commercial film people of Rio protested strenuously against the wide showing of OIAA 16mm. films, calling them unfair competition to the picture houses. Just recently, however, the Rio office of CIAA and the American Embassy there received letters signed by the combined commercial film distributors of Argentina.

The letters withdrew the complaint and admitted that a survey showed non-theatrical pictures stimulated box office biz. OIAA has always contended its program was making Latin-America film conscious and creating new audiences. And now the money boys admit it!

Elmer Davis tells this one. The American Ambassador in Belgium recently screened "Fighting Lady" for a very select audience. What surprised the diplomats and brass hats more than anything was the scene where the fliers, about to embark on a dangerous mission, are fed a substantial breakfast of beefsteak, etc.

Davis, who was present, explained that American civilians would react in the same hungry fashion.

Samples of typical films used in American war loans, transcriptions of radio bond shows, posters, etc., will be displayed at the Palais de Glace, in Paris, in a war loan exhibit to be held in connection with the French reconstruction bond drive, reports Ned Shugrue, recently back from France.

Shugrue, director of special events and motion pictures for the Treasury War Finance Division, went to Paris at the invitation of French Ministry of Finance officials to advise them on the coming drive. Selection of our material to be sent over and the representative to accompany the material have not been made yet.

In addition to the U. S., Great Britain, Canada, China and Russia have been invited to participate in the exhibition.

While he was in Paris, Shugrue renewed acquaintance with Neil Agnew, Spyros Skouras, Mickey Rooney, Lon Broderick and other American industry names.

"Gone With the Wind" is now being screened in French theatres, and the reaction is terrific. Army Psychological Warfare branch had first banned the film from showing there because it was felt it might gave an impression of internal strife in the U. S.

Paramount has been chosen to produce an entertainment short for the next U. S. and Canadian bond drives, and it probably will be along the lines of the sensational "All-Star Bond Rally."

In addition, our Eighth War Loan will feature a short on the economic angles of war bonds. Henry Blankfort is due in soon to huddle with Ted Gamble and other Treasury officials on a script.

creased income from certain countries whose markets have been closed on account of the war. Offsetting this he admitted is the tendency in many countries toward nationalistic control of picture imports—matters to be influenced by our national policy and the Bretton Woods and San Francisco conference proposals.

(2) There is good reason to believe consumer expenditures will generally exceed pre-war levels and motion picture receipts have, in general, benefited in proportion to consumer savings and expenditures.

(3) War has developed many unusual devices which may modify the amusement industry, particularly as regards television. Paramount has kept in close touch with these developments and is prepared to take advantage of those which may prove useful.

Balaban's statement was read by Austin Keough, veepee and secretary of the company, since Balaban now is in Europe. It called particular attention to the decrease in Paramount long-term securities from $122,000,000 in 1930 to present $17,400,000; told how $6,753,844 was paid to common stockholders last year at $1.80 per share. The statement also stressed that Paramount and consolidated subsidiaries have about $5,000,000 more cash and government securities than are needed to meet all current liabilities. Since Jan. 1 cash has increased by about $4,000,000, while consolidated debt and film inventory each have decreased about the same amount.

The stockholders re-elected the present directorate by a huge margin with the exception of the late John Hicks, whose place is filled by Charles M. Reagan, domestic sales chief. Directors elected are Balaban, Leonard Goldenson, Stephen Callaghan, Harvey Gibson, A. Conger Goodyear, Stanton Griffis, Reagan, Duncan G. Harris, Edward L. Weisl, John D. Hertz, Keough, Earl McClintock, Maurice Newton, E. V. Richards, Adolph Zukor and Y. Frank Freeman.

HIGH COURT VACATES WOW TRANSFER

Washington, June 19.—Supreme court today vacated transfer of radio station WOW, Omaha, from Woodmen of the World Life Insurance Society to a private syndicate. Decision was 5-2, with the Nebraska court ordered to stay its decree pending action by Federal Communications Commission.

The state court charged "constructive fraud" in the deal. Supreme court ruled there was no indication of fraud and that the state tribunal could not take action pending FCC ruling. Case involved the right of state courts to trespass on FCC authority. Supreme court apparently felt there had been such a trespass, and said it should not take place unless actual fraud in connection with transfer of a station property is proved.

On the left sleeve of the uniform worn by passenger conductors, brakemen and flagmen are the insignia indicating length of service; a star for twenty-five years, a bar for each five years.

The proud possessors of "stars and bars" help to form the solid foundation of a railroad's personnel. Because of their intimate knowledge of operating rules, equipment and facilities . . . the many situations and problems they have met and solved . . . they are of tremendous assistance to younger men.

Among the 65,000 Union Pacific employes there are approximately 7,000 "old timers"—representing all departments—with twenty or more years of service. These experienced employes have, in a large measure, been responsible for the enviable record maintained by Union Pacific in the face of wartime conditions.

The transportation of many thousand trainloads of troops and materials over the Strategic Middle Route, uniting the East with the West Coast, calls for the wisdom and cool judgment of maturity coupled with the ambition and tireless energy of younger employes.

Union Pacific is proud of all its employes, regardless of length of service, for the job they are doing to help speed the hour of victory.

overall quality of U. S. films has improved. The better films have included a fair proportion of themes either directly or indirectly connected with the war. Complaints registered have been leveled chiefly at overdone war theme films."

Order of popularity of American films with metropolitan audiences in Argentina are: (1) pictures with star names, regardless of the theme; (2) pictures made by famous directors; (3) romance and serious drama; (4) light comedies; (5) historical themes, but not when they deal with very localized U. S. history.

Order of popularity with rural audiences: (1) adventure stories; (2) horse operas; (3) heavy melodramas; (4) musical and slapstick comedy, but nothing sophisticated.

As of June 1, 1944, Argentina had 1,611 film houses, of which 1,436 were operating. About 65% of the theatres run full time and the remainder, mostly in the interior, are open only weekends and holidays.

TWO-YEAR plan is being put into effect by 20-Fox, in building up a backlog of Technicolor location footage for future reference and use. Anticipating transportation difficulties for at least another year and possibly longer, depending, of course, upon duration of Jap war and how long trains will be routed to the military, studio plans to shoot excess footage whenever a Technicolor company goes on location, so that vast library of such backgrounds may be available whenever a picture needs such footage. Company figures that enough may be stored up during next two years to last indefinitely, and which sometimes will eliminate need for a costly location trip. Excess footage already has been exposed during "Leave Her to Heaven" troupe's recent stay at Bass Lake, in High Sierras, with more to be made when company goes to Arizona within two weeks; when "The Enchanted Voyage" locationed in New Orleans and in Louisiana bayou country; on "Where Do We Go From Here?" trek to Sherwood Forest; and forthcoming "Smoky" location in Utah.

ALTHOUGH legit advertising has been based upon the major premise of hypoing ticket sales, producers are giving attention to the effect of their spiels on shaping critics' views of their productions. Gimmick which brought it to the foreground is the long-discussed billing of "Oklahoma" as a "play with music" instead of billing it as a musical, operetta or musical comedy. Billing for "Oklahoma" was stressed that way, because it was originally presented as a straight legiter, "Green Grow the Lilacs." However, the advertising angle was that the book was strong enough to stand alone. With operetta, the critics are supposed to close their eyes to the literary qualities of the show. This also holds true with musical comedy and light opera. In the comedy line, it implies there will be more humor than either music or book. By setting the billing in such a manner, producers feel that critics will take a tacit stand on their reviews of the show.

BING CROSBY will toss dinner party and afterwards hold showing of his "The Great John L." for sports editors in number of key cities, to plug his first effort as a producer. With drama pages considerably curtailed in space, Crosby is making pitch for additional print coverage on sport pages. First affair probably will be held in San Francisco, with Crosby hosting, followed by Los Angeles spread. Actor plans to be present at as many dinners as his shooting schedule will allow, and in those cities where he cannot attend, James Edward Grant, who wrote script of picture and was co-producer with him, will act as host.

FOUR years in the making Metro's "The Yearling" will be completed this summer by Clarence Brown who is shooting the film at Ocala, Florida. Victor Fleming started the picture four years ago, and after around $500,000 was spent, including a location trip, the picture was shelved. A deer was the stumbling block, as through the picture it grows from a day old to a young buck with antlers. To date two-thirds of the footage has been completed and Brown expects to wind his work by August 1. Picture will cost beyond the $2,000,000 mark.

CBS has a staff of 39 covering the war as correspondents, analysts and commentators.

HAROLD FENTON, construction boss for David O. Selznick, had a crew of 18 carpenters and 7 painters working out at the RKO-Pathe lot yesterday. In an effort to get "Duel In the Sun" off the shelf and resume shooting June 25, the crew toiled on four interiors all day. To hurry things along, Fenton is taking a crew of painters over to Metro today to work on exteriors. Director King Vidor was also seen on the lot.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

As I indicated yesterday, it is becoming increasingly clear that one purpose of the trial of the 16 Poles in Moscow is the discrediting of the Polish Government exiled in London. The Russian prosecutor has stated he would not ask for the death penalty for the defendants—only prison terms—since they were "mere puppets" of the London Polish Government. Outright acquittal has been recommended for three of the sixteenteen. It is a part of Russian foreign policy to have a friendly Poland on her western border. The Kremlin does not believe such friendship could flow from a Polish Government that might derive from the London Government. And it has been interested to produce evidence in this trial that would accredit that belief in foreign eyes. In this connection, it is significant that no member of the present Polish Government in exile was invited to participate in the Moscow discussions aimed at working out a new basis for the government of Poland. The Polish Government in London is not taking this sitting down, but its voice, regardless of the merits or demerits of its song, is like one crying in the wilderness.

WILDBERG-DAHLBERG PLAN FOR LEGIT THEATRE TOLD

Coast legit production will get a shot in the arm if plans by John Wildberg and Gilda Dahlberg are carried through. Broadway producing pair currently have plans to build a legit theatre in Hollywood with an eye to staging new top-rank shows here rather than in New York.

Sites now are being looked over and will be decided upon later when Wildberg returns from New York, following opening of "Belle Brodie" this fall. Wildberg will leave Friday for the east and announced he would put two troupes of "Anna Lucasta," another of his Broadway shows, on the road, with one starting out in October and another in January.

Plans for the legit house call for sites to be chosen either in Hollywood or somewhere on Wilshire blvd. Both producers want to hypo this area as a second legit producing center of the United States.

Lewis and Young Will Produce 'Peter Pan'

Russell Lewis and Howard Young have completed negotiations for rights to produce Sir James Barrie's "Peter Pan" as a play with music. Composer and lyricist have not been set by the producing team. Plan calls for play to be produced here in the Spring of 1946, with junket to follow to Broadway.

METRO RELEASE. Producer, Jerry Bresler. Associate producer, Herbert Moulton. Director, Arch Oboler. Adapted for the screen by Arch Oboler from his original story, "Alter Ego." Photography, Charles Salerno, Jr. Musical score, Bronislau Kaper. Recording director, Douglas Shearer. Art direction, Cedric Gibbons, Malcolm Brown. Set decorations, Edwin B. Willis; associate, MacAlper. Film editor, Harry Komer.

CAST—Features Phyllis Thaxter, Edmund Gwenn, Henry H. Daniels, Jr., Horace McNally, Minor Watson, with Addison Richards, Kathleen Lockhart, Francis Pierlot, Sharon McManus, Gladys Blake, Will Wright, Oscar O'Shea, Virginia Brissac.

TRADESHOWN at the studio, June 13, 1945. Running time: 65 MINS.

"Bewitched," screen adaptation of Arch Oboler's radio play, "Alter Ego," fits into the film horror groove. As such it will hold up its end of the twin chiller bills in houses catering to the horror addicts, although the terror aspects are not as strong on celluloid as they were on the air. This may be due to fact that radio sound effects, coupled with listener imagination, can be more vivid than when backed with the screen's visual accompaniment.

Oboler's writing and direction are both calculated to build the mood and he uses tricky photography and sound to further the psychological study of a girl with two personalities, one good and one evil. A stronger contrast between the two could have been built by more extensive portrayal of the evil and therein lies a shortcoming of the screen development.

Phyllis Thaxter gives an interesting reading of the troubled girl, essentially good but dominated by the evil personality to the point of insanity. She flees from family and fiance in an effort to escape, meets a young lawyer whom the bad character wants, is forced to kill her fiance, is sentenced to the electric chair and then saved at the last minute when a psychiatrist frees her from the evil domination.

Edmund Gwenn is the psychiatrist, recounting the story as one of his cases. He does his usual competent work. Henry H. Daniels, Jr., is the fiance and Horace McNally portrays the young lawyer. Other capables in the cast include Addison Richards, Gladys Blake, Oscar O'Shea, Kathleen Lockhart, Minor Watson and Virginia Brissac.

Jerry Bresler's production gives suitable mounting for release intentions. Photography by Charles Salerno, Jr., musical score by Bronislau Kaper and other technical aids are all aimed at sustaining an eerie mood.

Gill, Jr., Doing Story For Rep's 'Mexicana'

Story job on Republic's "Mexicana," now being produced and directed by Al Santell and co-starring Constance Moore and Tito Guizar, is being handled by Frank Gill, Jr., who wrote the studio's successful musical, "Brazil."

Gail Russell In Lead

Gail Russell has been set for the femme lead opposite Alan Ladd in "Calcutta" at Paramount. June Duprez will have the other femme spot in the Seton I. Miller production.

'Gangbusters' Due Back

Phillips Lord's "Gangbusters" returns to the air next fall under sponsorship of Waterman pens. It goes on the American network.

Play Review

SCHOOL FOR BRIDES

"School For Brides" opened last night at the Mayan theatre on Hill street. Geographically it was two blocks above Main st.; by actual content it was two alleys below it. Unfortunately, this epic in bad taste probably will have a run because audiences are prone to buy almost anything now . . . even bad burlesque passing itself off as legit.

Critics from coast to coast have blasted the show, yet it has managed to run on, chiefly on the strength of demi-clad damoisels, ad lib dialog and ad nauseum humor. It is a typical example of "jackal" production eating on the leftovers of something morbid left behind by the tradition of good theatre.

There are some people in the cast who probably hold Actors Equity cards, although most real theatre-goers will hold this point to disputation. As for direction and alleged playwriting, the less said the better. What has been perpetrated at the Mayan is not only an insult to the intelligence of anyone over six but it is a high crime against show business in general and legit theatre in particular.

Wallis Delays Start Of 'Discharge' Pic

Hal Wallis has set back production of John Farrow's original story, "Dishonorable Discharge," until sometime next year, from slated late 1945 start. Producer will put either "The Crying Sisters" or "'Love Lies Bleeding" before cameras in September, followed by "The Searching Wind" in October, third picture to roll shortly afterwards. With windup of this trio, Wallis goes to England about March of 1946 to produce "Whenever I Remember" for Paramount.

Arrange Distribution For 'Boy, Girl and Dog'

Distribution arrangements for "A Boy, a Girl and a Dog" have been completed by W. R. Frank, with Film Classics handling selling of the picture in all territories except Minneapolis and Des Moines-Omaha. North Star distributors will handle the film in Minneapolis and Frank personally will sell the film in the other two cities. Frank leaves for Minneapolis Saturday on film sales and to look over his circuit of 17 theatres.

20th-Fox Sets Start of 'Nob Hill,' 'Quilligan'

Reissue of "Call of the Wild," Clark Gable starrer, other half on both bills.

'Now It Can Be Told'

ONE of those "now it can be told" stories: John Alton, Republic cameraman, disclosed yesterday that film he was fired for shooting back in 1928 was put to valuable use in the invasion of North Africa. Alton, working for a film company in 1928, was aboard ship lensing scenes off Algiers. Lunch bell sounded and in his mad dash for the table he left the camera turning, accidentally filming the entire entrance to the port of Algiers. Though Alton was discharged, the film was saved, and turned to excellent use by the invasion fleet 14 years later. . . . Ann Carter has been given a book inscribed by the cast of "Two Mrs. Carrolls" for her work in the Warners film. . . . Anatole Robbins has moved into a new building for his greasepaint factory.

She carried a white alligator bag with tortoise trim.

Mary Meade, one of six Goldwyn Girls on recent hospital tour, has been signed on for Kay Kyser's projected overseas trip. . . . BRACKEN SUES MCA ON RADIO PKG. OWNERSHIP asking for judgment on the following counts:

That MCA has been guilty of a breach of fiduciary obligation to Bracken and that general agency contract is no longer of any force or effect.

That Bracken is the sole owner of "The Eddie Bracken Story" and MCA has no right, title or interest therein.

That MCA be permanently enjoined from asserting or claiming it has any right or interest in the radio show.

Accounting and repayment of $7,000 collected in commissions by MCA.

That Bracken have judgment for his costs herein incurred and for such other relief as may seem just and equitable.

It also is charged in the complaint that a proposal was made by MCA to Bracken that instead of him paying 10% commission on the gross proceeds an agreement be signed whereby 60% of the net would go to Bracken, 20% to Producer Mann Holiner and 20% to MCA. It was suggested by MCA, according to the complaint, that such a financial arrangement would be more advantageous to Bracken, but that Bracken declined the offer and notified MCA that he did not desire to have MCA and Holiner as partners in ownership of the package.

Bracken's attorneys also filed an answer to the action in arbitration filed by MCA.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

We've heard it so often that we're calloused to it but it's the lot of a radio critic to be dressed down with something like, "Oh, you can do it better," after a sour notice. There's only one way to bat that one down—it's not our racket. Victim of the "undeserved" notice, generally the director, invariably puts in with, "don't get me wrong, I can take it." Now that's just dandy and gives us an idea that even he should like. It has only one purpose, constructive criticism, so there's no quarrel there. To improve the breed of summer shows so that some may see the light of autumn, the thought occurred that perhaps directors, or producers, whom we feel are better equipped than the headman on the summer program under scrutiny, should wield the scalpel. Production values or shortcomings that evade the perception of the critic would stick out like a sore thumb to the journeyman. Naturally every producer is eager to make each show better than the preceding one so what better help could he get than honest, criticism from a fellow cue-flipper. As a starter we asked one of the top comedy producers to put down on paper his reactions to last Sunday's kickoff of "Meet Me At Parky's." The "guest critic" will go nameless for obvious reasons but rest assured that he and the others will be out of the top drawer, producers who have been identified with successful shows of the genre assigned to. So here's how Parky's tee-upper struck his professional fancy:

"First show Sunday missed the boat. It sounded like every corny joke was crammed into the half hour to be sure of studio laughs. Boys, the show has been bought, it's on the air. Relax. Do something to try to keep it on. Characterize Parky, go for humor, make it his show. It seemed to me that Opie Cates' grandfather directed the show. You may have a good stooge in Opie but don't kill the guy in one day. He had so much to do he almost swallowed his clarinet during his solo. Sneak him in intelligently and slowly. David Street should not be given long speeches to read. Let him sing. Betty Rhodes handles herself nicely, both in singing and reading lines. Parky's voice kept going down in the mud, at times so badly I couldn't understand him. His dialect should be watched carefully. All in all I would say that the direction was bad and too many times voices were off mike. If they are interested in 13 weeks only, good luck. If they want to build the show to last, they should listen to "Gildersleeve," add music and singing and mix well. Then they might win a ribbon."

STATION BREAKS . . . C. B. DeMille's contract with Lux Radio Theatre expires June 30 and it is reported he would like to have a new one. Ticket was first signed in May of 1936 and in nine years the coin was hypoed from $1,350 to $2,050. . . . While Nate Gross is holidaying here Karin Walsh will preside over his Chicago radio program. . . . Radio Writers Guild is "on the move" to improve the welfare and fiscal status of network news writers, editors and staff writers. Sam Moore, western v.p., is asking increases based on length of service with the minimum monthly scale to start at $265, most of the nets' maximum. . . . Jim and Marian Jordan have been cited by National Catholic War Veterans for the clean entertainment broadcast by "The McGee's." Those are our sentiments, too, with a personal accolade to Don Quinn, who in our book is still the top situation comedy writer in the biz. . . . Al Capstaff getting into the "hossy" set and has dated up his brood mare with Seabiscuit.

Local indies will be jolted off their turntables and forced to meet aggressive competition when the new owners of KMTR assume operation of the station. This warning is not just the usual thing expected of changed ownership; we just happen to know how Don Fedderson operates. Young and full of ideas, he and KFWB's Harry Maizlish had the big nets hopping to match their coverage of the United Nations Conference in Frisco. When the papers come through from Washington, it will be Fedderson who'll run KYA up north and KMTR for the new owners, Ted and Dorothy Thackrey, who have controlling interest in the New York Post and whose two separate corporations will hold the majority stock in the two transmitters. If the FCC approves the call letters, KLA, and gives KMTR a power boost to 5,000 watts day and night, Fedderson will take the ball from there. He has some interesting plans in mind for the station's improvement and if only half of them materialize the other indies will know the chips are down and the decks cleared for a good, clean fight.

We're reminded by a somewhat obscure AFRA actor that it's not only in high places that the nets and agencies have been derelict in their duty of nursing along new talent to carry on for the fading veterans. He complains that it's almost impossible to get a break on a big show, that a dozen or so topliners land all the lush jobs that pay more than the basic minimum. It is too well known in the trade that when a player is sought for a network commercial the nod invariably goes to those on the preferred list. It's the easy way out for the agency booker and gets a sound seconding from the show's producer. Why, they contend, should they have to play along with second-stringers when there are finished performers around. It might not be a bad idea to spread the work lest AFRA impose some kind of limitation on the number of jobs a member can take.

HITCH HIKES . . . After hearing LaGuardia on the air even Hildegarde would be a relief. . . . Charles Luckman (Pepsodent) and Stu Sherman, agency exec, check into the Bevhills hotel July 2. . . . Leo Sherin ("Ukie") goes to New York next week to help write the Kraft Summer Show and make some guest appearances.

GENERAL STILWELL'S 'OWN SHOW' PEPS 7TH WAR LOAN

DON LEE NET BUYS OUT PACIFIC STOCK

Outright purchase of stock in the Pacific Broadcasting Co. has been consummated by the Don Lee network, it was announced yesterday by Lewis Allen Weiss, head of the Coast chain. Time for the network was bought through Pacific, and, according to Weiss, the concentrated operation will result in more revenue for the individual stations. Weiss, A. M. MOVIES FOR U.S. MARINES GET PRIORITY

Okinawa, June 20.—Movies for Marine Corps units get a top beachhead priority and follow only the ammunition, food and other essential supplies.

DANGER IN PUBLIC SALE OF ALIEN FILMS TOLD

tive in Washington, pointed out there was no censoring body, but said his organization would not object to the films being unloaded if some proper agency such as OWI or the National Board of Censorship found the films free of Nazi propaganda. Gordon McDonough, Hollywood's Congressman, agreed with the stand.

"There may certainly be a danger in indiscriminate release of these pictures," McDonough commented. "I think they should be thoroughly censored. Such organizations as OWI or the National Board of Censorship should see everything offered before it is sold. There could be no valid objection to the Alien Property Custodian selling material free of propaganda."

Rep. Ellis E. Patterson (D), of Beverly Hills, however, is strongly opposed to the sale of any of the films. He plans to make a statement in the House tomorrow. In it he will charge that the purpose of those who made the German pictures was to Nazify all who witnessed them.

"I believe they should be destroyed or suppressed," he said. "To anyone who has seen any German films made under Hitler and Goebbels, it is obvious that not even the travelogs or cartoons would be free of propaganda. If they are wanted for their artistic value, then our studios can do better. These films glorify free love, the Hitler youth and the Prussians and tell how Naziism freed Europe. They are all bad."

Principal objection to the batches of film, according to Bryson, is that they might be grabbed up by organizations of Nazi sympathizers in this country and used for their purposes. He saw no objection, however, to studios purchasing the films for any story material that might be useful. He pointed out that the stories could be made over and produced here with elimination of any propaganda angles they originally had.

Stetler, the company's advertising manager, said the company merely paid for the time as a public service, but had no connection with the program.

OPA Chief Chester Bowles said he wanted no Reds on his staff, but that he had heard no complaints about any of the scripts prepared by Weiner. Scripts are to be offered in evidence tomorrow.

Have You Seen The Government Report On The Hollywood Strike?

This is MUST reading for Everyone who wants the TRUTH!

Here are just a few lines from the Report of the National Labor Relations Board under the heading: "Background of the Dispute":

"In the instant case, there is no showing that the employees failed scrupulously to observe all the terms of their contract so far as affiliation with another labor organization was concerned. It was the Producers and not the Employees who failed to observe these provisions. This failure persisted over a long period of time and in the face of repeated importunities by the employees. It even persisted beyond and in spite of the recommendation of the War Labor Board arbitrator . . ."

". . . It was only after this lengthy process that the strike occurred, which the Producers now claim breached the very same contract, which they themselves had refused to observe . . ."

". . . That the employees were willing to arbitrate and that the Producers were not is strongly indicated by the conduct of each with respect to War Labor Board Arbitrator Tongue."

"THE SET DECORATORS DID NOT STRIKE BECAUSE THE PRODUCERS REFUSED TO CHANGE PROVISIONS OF A CONTRACT. THEY STRUCK BECAUSE THE PRODUCERS REFUSED TO ACT IN CONFORMITY WITH A CLEAR PROVISION OF THE CONTRACT."

OWENS of large record collections apparently will not have to worry about junking their libraries when the war is over. Although there has been much to-do about music on wire spools, the disc firms themselves are planning an extensive push of platters in the post-war era, with new methods of recording being developed now. Machines will have new improvements, along with higher fidelity discs. One new gimmick being pu tinto commercial shape is the long-playing platter. By means of new recording methods, a 14-inch record will be able to spin two and one-half hours without having the needle lifted or without repeating. Spin for the disc will be slower and it is understood gadget can be attached to present machines, which will enable them to play the new slower moving discs, which turn almost imperceptibly. New pick-up heads are being experimented with to give truer tone to recordings and the whole impetus of the recording industry will be toward the wax wafer rather than the wired spool for home consumption.

POSSIBILITY exists that Cantinflas, Mexican film comedy star who recently bowed out of RKO picture commitment, may do one or more pictures for Republic in Mexico. Company recently announced it would make minimum of six Spanish-English pictures in Mexico City during coming year. Tito Guizar, under contract to Republic, has long wanted to produce pictures for Latin American market, pointed toward their peculiar needs and tastes, and will talk to Herbert J. Yates, Republic head, when latter returns from New York in few weeks regarding his going to Mexico to take over one or more of series. Guizar and Cantinflas are cousins and have contemplated for some time making picture together if Guizar could wangle an American producership. If Guizar does get assignment from Yates, it is probable Cantinflas will appear as star.

YESTERDAY Dana Andrews, working in Otto Preminger's "Fallen Angel" at 20th-Fox had a scene in which he was supposed to check over several newspapers. Sequence was being shot when somebody suddenly realized the sheets were black with war headlines. Action stopped while other papers that carried no front page war news were substituted. With current history geared to high-speed there is no telling just what will be timely and what won't when a picture is released. Filming a picture so that it won't be too "dated" when it hits the screen is a major headache for producers and directors. Which is leading some of the film folk to speculate as to how some of the film that has been held as "backlog" for so many months is going to fit the times when it is finally released.

WITH the current print paper famine, studio camera heads are concerned with the big influx of foreign emissaries expected down here with the ending of the San Francisco Conference. Word has come down from highest sources to show every courtesy to visiting diplomats who are expected to tour the studios in droves. The acute shortage of print paper has handicapped the still men in their every day work as it is and the problem of shooting the visitors with players and execs poses a new problem. Some of the camera heads are asking OWI for an emergency allocation of paper to cover the period of the diplomats' visit. As an alternative, one head has suggested turning the negatives over to OWI and letting that agency make its own prints.

DENY DISMISSAL OF INT CONTRACT SUIT

New York, June 21. — Federal Judge Samuel Mandelbaum today denied move of International Pictures for dismissal of $1,105,000 breach of contract suit brought by Samuel Sager and Harold Evans Hartney, involving production of a film based on Ferry Command of Army Air Forces.

International moved to have suit dismissed for lack of jurisdiction, claiming it does not transact business in this state. Move was made to quash service of process as improperly made. Court stated order should provide for special master to hear and determine issue.

Court held that although salaries, purchase of literary material and hiring of actors and actresses likewise is transacted in California, continued course of conduct of International is sufficient and substantial enough to bring it within jurisdiction here.

While scribes and actors labor in creation
Of drama in a picture studio,
There is more drama in a railroad station
Where old folks wait and young men come and go.

The railroad station is a playhouse humming
The whole day long with high dramatic scenes,
Where throngs await the coming and the going
Of sturdy sailors, soldiers and marines.

A picture star may simulate emotion
And make you feel a sympathetic thrill,
But nothing like a mother's fond devotion
When she proclaims: "Yoohoo! Here comes my Bill"

DRIPPING SKIES RETARD SHOOTING ON LOCATION

Dripping skies forced four companies on location to suspend shooting yesterday, all returning to the studios for indoor shots.

Biggest closedown was Columbia's "The Kansan" with cast and crew of nearly 1,000 returning from Malibu location to work on the sound stages. Also switched to interiors at Columbia was "Girl of the Limberlost" troupe, scheduled to work at the Columbia ranch.

Paramount's "The Trouble With Women" was locationing on Occidental college campus, but final outdoor scenes had to be held over until the first "weather-permitting" day. Samuel Goldwyn's "The Kid From Brooklyn" also returned to shelter from location.

Columbia's "Bronco Busters" stuck it out, however, and continued shooting at Corrigan's ranch near Chatsworth.

WARNERS SECURE $37,000,000 LOAN

963 over the same period last year.

New financing is slated to be completed before Aug. 31, 1945, end of Warners fiscal year. As a result, he said, Warners American properties and subsidiaries will be free of mortgage debt.

Warner said the new loan will be payable in 20 semi-annual installments ending May 1, 1955, with interest rate of 2% until Nov. 1, 1952, and 2½% thereafter on the balance.

He said the present loan plus cash from the Warners treasury will be used to pay off a $7,000,000 loan previously obtained and approximately $21,000,000 on the mortgaged indebtedness of the company and its subsidiaries.

Net operating profit for six months ending Feb. 24, 1945, was $4,605,088 after taxes were deducted, out of gross income of $68,228,262 for same period. Gross income for corresponding period in 1944 was $69,629,010.

This six-month profit is equivalent to $1.24 per share compared with 94 cents for the corresponding period last year.

Warners also disclosed that banks participating in the loan are: New York Trust Co., Guaranty Trust Co., First National Bank of Boston, Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust Co., Union Trust Co. of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania Company for Insurance on Lives and Granting Annuities of Philadelphia, Bankers Trust Co. of New York, National City Bank of Cleveland and First National Bank of Minneapolis.

out at a commission meeting in the Opera House, with the delegate attendance quite slim and the public, anxious to get in out of the rain, outnumbering delegates 50 to 1.

Work was being completed today under direction of Pete Mole in readying the auditorium of the Veterans building, where the charter will be signed. Decorations and fittings are all blended in such fashion it will give the newsreel photographers opportunity to do a perfect cinematic job as the various delegates append their signatures to the document during the eight hours required for this ceremony. Newsreel men and women, possibly 50 of the latter, will witness these ceremonies, and plans also are being made to broadcast a portion of this great event.

There will be no broadcasting from Hamilton Field Monday when President Truman arrives here by plane from Olympia, Wash. Efforts were made to do some broadcasting, but after numerous conferences with State Department officials it was decided to hold off on this phase. Likely that Bill Raey of KFWB, however, will be aboard a Navy blimp to give a word picture of the coming into the airport and landing of the plane. Newsreel boys, with Francis Alstock and Jack Connolly, newsreel contacts for the State Department, were at the airport today making a survey for camera and sound setups to record arrival of the President.

Newsmen, cameramen and radio announcers started flocking in today from various parts of the country. Hotels are filling up again. Feeling is that with final polishing of the script, even though what was expected to be accomplished under leadership here of the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt, the delegates as a whole will depart acclaiming this prolonged and dragged-out conference a success.

The public will have little chance of witnessing the final session when President Truman addresses the conference. State Department has been resisting heavy pressure for ducats, and those fortunate enough to get the nod will have to have strong diplomatic recommendations, vouchings and bear checking up by the security officers of the conference. Many Hollywood people have asked for tickets for this session, but it is likely only a few will be privileged to pass through the portals of the Opera House.

The alleged press, or crashers, who brought the press visas to over 2,600 for the beginning of the conference, are out in the cold for the windup. The State Department, before issuing the new red cards, puts an applicant through a stiff inquisition and is practically sure when the credentials are issued the person is of the working press.

Pathe News ran into a union situation today when it was learned they intended shooting silent at the charter signing and use sound from Universal newsreel. Unions heard of it and vetoed the idea, and meeting was held tonight to notify Pathe it would have to provide its own sound accompaniment to its screen visualization.

Attending yesterday morning's session from Hollywood were Ida Koverman, Robert Montgomery, Mrs. Joe E. Brown, Col. Tom Lewis and Major Peterson.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

The fall of Okinawa is not only a blazing emblem of another American victory in the Pacific. It is also a portent for Japan, and simultaneously a warning to Americans that the total defeat of Japan will not come quickly or easily. For the Jap warlords, there is the knowledge that American air and naval bases lie only 325 miles from their home islands, within good striking distance of their military and industrial facilities. Okinawa's harbors are large enough to provide a valuable staging area for amphibious operations against Japan itself or the Chinese mainland. But to Americans there is the realization that the conquest of Okinawa took three months, the longest and bloodiest of the Pacific island campaigns. How long it will take to defeat the Japanese armies on their home islands is unpredictable, but the Okinawa operation points up the difficulty and sacrifice to be expected with every further advance toward the source and storehouse of Japan's military power.

BROADWAY RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Una Merkel's friends who were SO worried about her since that tragic accident are delighted now that she's back from Florida and in harness again. She starts rehearsals in Harold J. Kennedy's "Home Is the Hero," with tryout skedded at Stamford, two weeks in Washington and Philly and then on to Broadway. Bonita Granville is being sought for the other femme lead. . . . Hal Wallis' newest ultimate gasp, Lisbeth Scott, will have the fashion editors in a dither when she's unfurled to the public at a special preview performance of "You Came Along," at the New York Paramount. She'll wear no furs. No jewelry. No hat. No cataract of orchids—just a simple white wool daytime sports frock topped by a black coat of raincoat material. . . . Warner Bros. are tossing a press soiree in the Vanity Room of the Sherry Netherland today for Ida Lupino, and with those other "fair and Warner" stars, Anne Sheridan, Dane Clark, Andrea King and Helmut Dantine plus Charlie Einfeld in town, it will be quite a gathering of the clan. . . . Celeste Holm is taking her "cuts" before she checks into 20th-Fox. She's at the Mt. Sinai hospital for a minor op. . . . Edmund Goulding, who has been quietly working on his play, "That Ryan Girl," while rumors have been flying thick and fast about who's going to produce it—who's angel-ing it, etc., etc., says that he's going to produce it HIMSELF, with Richard Krakeur as his production assistant. . . . Hollywood got the first gander at Rouben Mamoulian as a benedict, when he trained in with his bride, Azadia Newman, on the City of Los Angeles yesterday. . . . If Linda Barrett hadn't come to Paul Zinner's rescue by taking over Arlene Francis' role in "The Overtons," the show would have folded. And what was Mr. Zinner's reward to Miss Barrett for her splendid pinch-hitting job? He fired her after a week, when he was able to get Judith Evelyn.

Intimates of Gloria Swanson confide that Bill Davey will soon be Gloria's 5th Ex. . . . Now that Martha Scott has been released from the road tour of "Soldier's Wife," don't be surprised if she succeeds Margaret Sullavan and Betty Field as "Sally Middleton" in "Voice of the Turtle." Incidentally, Martha and Carlton Alsop are trying to sell their Coldwater Canyon home so they can buy the late Raymond Moore's beautiful house at Dennis, Mass. . . . Before shoving off for overseas, John C. Wilson tagged Dean Murphy for an important straight role in the Allen Lerner-Fritz Lowe musical, "Day Before Spring." . . . The newlyweds, Judy Garland and Vincent Minelli, have sublet Martin Block's triplex penthouse on East 57th Street as a honeymoon hideout. . . . No one working with Beatrice Kaye on the "Teel Variety show" felt too badly when she wasn't renewed—she was THAT tempermental. Spot will be taken over by "Life of Reilly." . . . The Milton Berles only wish that stork rumor were true. . . . If all the guests in the dining room of the Hotel Alden on Central Park West are a little goggle-eyed these nights, it's because Betty Grable and Harry James, neighbors at the Beresford Apartments down the street, often dine there on cook's right out. . . . Margalo Gillmore wanted to call the book she is writing "Bows" (short for "Barretts of Wimpole Street," but Katharine Cornell suggested "Pass It Around"—which is what the G. I.'s yelled out when she kissed Brian Aherne at every performance!

A "GENIE" FOR JEAN: It's still a beeeg secret, but the comedienne who will follow Joan Davis on her etherizer is not anyone of the possibilities already mentioned, but a comparative unknown named Jean Carroll. A few weeks ago, Miss Carroll was appearing at Loew's State, right under the schnozzolas of every agent in town. No one spotted her. Last week, a scout from MCA caught her in Washington and after turning a few handsprings in the aisles, sent for the potential sponsor and a few hours later Jean was clutching a contract at $750 per. No wonder that she believes she's already under the influence of "ether" and will wake up any minute!

A "GREEN" BOUQUET: Mitzi Green's debut at the Copacabana brought out such a mob that Monte Proser had to stand outside on the sidewalk where he was inconsolable, not because of the SRO business, but because his new "Ball and Jane" was on the way back to LA. Everyone in the packed room, including Dean Murphy, Russell Patterson, Jules Stein, Betty Bruce, Frances Lastfogel, George Givot, Herb Rosenthal, Jacqueline Susann, Harold Winston, Bert Wheeler and Ted Husing agreed that Mitzi has never been more socko than she is now, at the ripe old age of 23. With her streamlined figure, her voice better than ever, she delivers a variety of songs (none of them the usual repertoire, but specially written material and interpolates her priceless imitations of Margaret Sullavan, Sophie Tucker, Fannie Brice and Hildegarde, the last named, so devastatingly brilliant, that it had the ringsiders applauding throughout. There's no doubt about it that Mitzi's return to the New York scene, from where she's been absent too long, will create more interest in her now for stage, scren and radio than since her parents, Rose Keno and Joe Green first introduced her as part of their vaude act when she was a moppet of 5. Joe Green has passed on, but Rosie, now the doting grandmother of Mitzi's 17-months-old youngster still is in the dressing room, justifiably proud of the daughter she named in honor of another celebrated artist of her day—Mitzi Hajos.

OUT OF ALLEN'S ALLEY: New wonder boy of Broadway is Irving Mansfield, former writer-producer for Fred Allen, and now producer of the Milton Berle show. Mansfield was called into the Berle airer after it was flopping and made it one of the outstanding shows of the season. Result: Broadway is now paging him to produce practically every big time musical show for next season, with Hollywood also baiting him with four figure offers, as combo comedy writer and producer.

MEMO TO A. U.: Your "Broadway Runaround" next week will be your "Hollywood Runaround."

lets by July 1, when commercial announcements will be started via the hookups.

Headed by Carl Crow, firm is putting the horns into groceterias for nothing and will make no charge for services. Costs are expected to come from commercial accounts, which will pay for spot plugs. Plan calls for Debra Fisher, distaff announcer, to give a short talk on the virtues of one product each time. Spots will be spaced every five to 10 minutes.

Currently Paragon is using public domain and BMI tunes, with license for the latter in negotiation. Ascap tunes will not be used until some basis for charge can be estimated. Ascap's board of directors is expected to take up this new use of music at its next meeting in New York.

Transcription library of "free" tunes made by C. P. MacGregor is being used by Paragon. Company plans to use nothing but transcriptions for its music, with minute breaks between songs utilized for commercial inserts.

Paragon will not solicit advertising by usual methods, but will give sample advertisements over the wires for one month. Sales and advertising executives of top firms will be asked to listen and gauge results in the markets. First commercial contracts then will be drawn up to start Aug. 1, by which time Paragon execs state, they expect to have 200 stores in operation.

TRUMAN AND 10 STATESMEN WILL WIND UP S.F. PARLEY

San Francisco, June 21. — Secretary of State Stettinius revealed today that 10 statesmen from as many countries will precede President Truman in closing plenary session, now slated to begin at 4 p.m. next Tuesday afternoon. These 10 men will have greatest newsreel and radio coverage, probably, of any individuals of this generation—at least, for this event.

Lord Halifax will speak for Great Britain, Ambassador Grymko for Soviet Russia, Dr. Wellington Kee will represent China and Secretary Stettinius the United States. In addition, there will be speakers—probably chiefs of delegations—representing six other nations. Paul Boncour will speak for France, while speakers will be announced for Brazil, Czechoslovakia, Mexico, Saudi Arabia and Union of South Africa. Each will speak in his native tongue over worldwide networks, without translation.

President Truman's speech will provide the finale.

There are plenty of newsreel possibilities and radio jobs in parliamentary routines still to be accomplished. First, probably coming Monday, is anticipated unanimous approval of the charter by all nations. Then comes signing of the charter, which will begin Monday evening and continue Tuesday morning, unless somebody upsets the apple cart.

Newsreel coordinators are in a final mad scramble to get additional raw film stock, and have been keeping wires hot to New York for setting up priorities. Still scheduled now is business of completing newsreel coverage of President Truman's arrival in San Francisco, new parade route taking him for some miles through principal streets in the heart of the city.

We call upon you as the leading public official in Los Angeles to call together all the disputants and to demand that they settle the controversy immediately on a basis as fair as possible to all the parties concerned.

REFUSAL of Metro to raise the pay of a stuntman on the Abbott and Costello picture at the insistence of Lou Costello has brought about strained relations between the comic and the studio and there is grave doubts that the option will be exercised on the picture the comics owe the Culver City plant. When Costello's plea for the upped coin was refused, he is reported to have walked off the set and announced he was off to the races and wouldn't return for the five retakes, which would have required about three hours. He made good his threat and left with Bud Abbott for personals in the east. Metro will release the picture, "Abbott and Costello in Hollywood," without awaiting their return to retake the scenes. Preview reaction was that it's the best A & C picture since "Buck Privates," which was one of Universal's biggest money makers and clinched cinematic stardom for the team.

WITH the pic industry being given major credit in making the femmes clothes-style conscious, designers are in a hubbub with reports that the most comprehensive fashion designing program ever undertaken for a single sequence in a film is being projected at 20th-Fox. Five expert designers are busy at work for a fashion show sequence in "Kitten On the Keys," a musical tinter. Sequence, which director Gregory Ratoff starts shooting today, shows Maureen O'Hara as a dowdy, conservative clothes minded gal who learns about modern, chic dress from the style show. The five designers, Rene Hubert, Bonnie Cashin, Kay Nelson, Yvonne Wood, and Edward Stevenson, have created five costumes each, for streetwear, luncheon, cocktail, sports and evening wear. An interesting camera trick will be employed by lenser Edward Cronjager to accentuate the accessories worn by the player. As the fashion show progresses, the camera will block out everything on the eight models except the clothes and the accessories. As the film will be released in January, the fashion show highlights advanced spring styles for 1946.

THAT department stores and retail outlets are expecting flood of mer- chandise as consequence of reconversion start is observed by Warners studio exploitation staff in setting record number of window tie-ups for "Rhapsody In Blue." For last few years, stores have been hesitant about tying up windows with films because of scarcity of merchandise to advertise. Now, however, with trickle of materials beginning to hit stores, advertising managers have resumed interest in plugging merchandise in windows and are willingly cooperating with Warners on tie-ups on "Rhapsody" in order to focus attention on displays. Experience by home office exploiteers is reported similar, with Fifth Avenue emporiums blanketed with window displays tying in with New York opening of George Gershwin lifer.

METRO figures it has one of best comedy teams in years in June Allison and Robert Walker. During the filming of "Her Highness and the Bellboy," pairing Hedy Lamarr and Walker, in respective characters, studio saw possibilities of joining actor and Miss Allison, who had smaller role in same picture, as a screen team. Couple was immediately cast in "For Better, For Worse," retagged "John and Mary," and at sneak preview the two are reported to have evoked more popular response than any other recent Metro product. Company now is searching for other properties in which to co-star pair.

IT'S IN THE BAG--PEACE CHARTER SIGNING ALL SET

San Francisco, June 24.—It's in the bag—barring the unforeseen—the finale of the United Nations Conference that is building the house of peace. President Truman's arrival, cinematic highlight of the conference, is slated for 2:30 p. m. tomorrow, while the signing of the world charter is slated to begin at 6 a.m. Tuesday, with 156 signatures to be affixed to the historic document before the lenses of newsreel cameras that will grind for at least 10 hours in recording this historic event.

President Truman will be greeted by chairmen of the delegations of the 50 United Nations, and will stage a speedy tour of the Hamilton Field Base hospital thereafter, greeting veterans newly returned from Okinawa. A motorcade of 75 vehicles will accompany him on his trip to San Francisco, with a blimp going overhead to take aerial sequences, and an anticipated tumultuous greeting in downtown San Francisco and the world-famous financial district on Montgomery st.

Jack Connolly, Francis Alstock and Col. A. E. Holland of the international secretariat have laid plans for complete coverage of the event. From the moment of the President's dramatic arrival to his speech over nationwide networks and worldwide short-wave facilities, to the moment of his departure and the post-conference sessions that follow, the newsreelers will be working at feverish tempo, seeking to record history for all the nations of the world.

This is it—the finale and the most newsreeled and radioed event of the year—and just a terrific batch of hard work for motion pictures, radio and the working press until the blessed moment the delegates and all go home.

by signature, speech and photos. Following that he will rush from the Veterans bldg. to the Memorial Opera House where at 5:45 Tuesday afternoon he will make his speech closing the 63-day job of the thousands of United Nations delegates and workers who formulated and perfected a unity plan under the banner of the United Nations Conference for International Organization.

President Truman will talk 15 minutes and bring the world's greatest show to an end at 6 o'clock sharp, with the diners around the country getting a good appetite as they listen over all networks to the finale of this meeting.

The charter went into the hands of the printers late Saturday afternoon. It is being printed in the five official languages of the conference: English, Russian, French, Chinese and Spanish. The printers expect to have it bound and ready to be turned over to the signatories late Monday evening. Then the signing will start in the auditorium of the Veterans bldg., with the chairmen of the delegations parading in a body, making their formal speeches while the newsreel cameras grind, and the signatures are appended to the charter, anywhere from two to 15 signing for each delegation.

Ensign Stanley Meyer, of Capt. A. J. Bolton's public relations office, who is aide to Admiral Hepburn, will be in charge of the procedure of the delegates who sign. He will have them in a room adjoining the auditorium, awaiting their turn, and bring them on in rapid order. It is figured it will take about 480 working minutes to complete the job photographically, and should the soundoff be early enough before midnight, an adjournment will be taken at 2 a.m. Tuesday morning until 8 a.m. The networks will have about two broadcasts of signing of the charter during that period, with the newsreel men and about 50 reporters being the only people outside of the delegates in the room during proceedings.

The security for Tuesday will be very tight when President Truman goes on the podium at the Opera House to make the closing address of the conference. New press cards will be handed out for the day and there will be a limitation to those attending, though the press list was reduced from 2,600 to around 600 a month ago. It is likely that number will be cut in half for Tuesday's event.

All newspaper people will be limited to their seats and boxes, there will be no roaming about, and those who will have that right have been checked over by the United States Secret Service and given special credentials. Just one news photographer will be permitted on the main floor of the Opera House. He will be an Acme man, who drew lots with the others, and photographs taken when President Truman talks will be distributed in a pool.

The newsreels during the past four days have ground out, and by Tuesday night will have used, around 100,000 feet of film. The pictures shot by the newsreel men of the various delegations will be cut in Hollywood, after which they will be turned over to OWI and CIAA to distribute to the countries of the delegations which participated in the signing. The individual reels should run around 1,000 feet and are to be released in theatres and schools to give the people and children a chance to visualize the finale of this meeting.

Col. Tom Lewis and his aide, Maj. Marty Peterson, who were here from Hollywood, made a recording of three enlisted men querying members of the American delegation on the charter, its value, etc. Those who answered the questions of GI Joe were Secretary of State Stettinius, Senators Vandenberg and Connally, Congressman Sol Bloom, Dean Gildersleeve and Archie MacLeish. The record will be cut this week and sent overseas by Armed Forces Radio Service to both Army and Navy.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

The task of liquidating the European war has only begun. Different countries are able to approach the solution of that task in different ways. In Britain, solution is sought through resort to the ballot box. Eventually the same means will undoubtedly be used in the low countries, Scandinavia, France, Italy, Greece and Poland. But it is noticeable that in Northwestern Europe where democratic traditions were most deeply rooted and successfully applied, there is less political instability than elsewhere in Europe; though even in Belgium, King Leopold is having his troubles. Opposition to his return is directed less against his throne than against the man himself. In other countries, especially Poland, where pre-war democracy was a travesty, France where its life was in jeopardy, and Italy where it had been ground in the dust, democratic recovery will be uneven and arduous. It will provide one of the most exciting political dramas of our time.

WHETHER Paramount directors and producers fear an actor shortage or have just gone on a typing spree isn't quite clear, but anyway they have drafted three persons out of the technician ranks for acting jobs in the last week. She still keeps her job as film editor—so if her part is lost on the cutting room floor it's her own fault.

Forced to postpone production because of the war and lack of studio space, Rose stated the way now is clear for Paramount to make at least one picture in England in remaining months of 1945.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

From out of the type foundry at Mannie Manheim's knee and through the mails rolls an idea that has enough merit to warrant sober cogitation among the tradesmen. In a nub, he would gather up the clan in solemn conclave and call on expert opinion to right the wrongs of radio and improve the quality of shows generally. But let Mannie tell it, it's his baby.

"This seems to be the season when the boys in radio are taking their pens in hand to expound their pet theories and cop a plea for their particular plan. As I sit on my summer hiatus, I am stricken with an idea that I hope the boys in the biz will consider before they toss it out. My idea stems from the San Francisco Conference. As I write this, the meeting up north sounds like it's been a success. Men and women from 48 countries gathered around a big table and actually made some headway to help save the world.

"In simple, plain words, I advocate an annual convention of the radio industry. I want the sponsors to be represented. I would like to have a guy like George Washington Hill get up before all the writers, directors, actors, engineers, etc., and tell us all what he thinks about radio. What he thinks should be done to improve our programs. I'd like to see a two- or three-day meeting of radio writers. I'd like to have Don Quinn talk about situation comedy, and I'd have Norman Corwin speak on the use of sound and music. I'd have a directors' symposium. I'd have everyone in a big hall when the man who knows the most about television gives us a talk and a demonstration. I'd also invite every important comedian . . . Jack Benny, Fred Allen, Edgar Bergen, Bob Hope, and the rest. I'd have Bing there to tell us what he thinks about the future of radio.

"Who who would sponsor such a meeting? Well, there's the Radio Writers Guild. And then there's AFRA. If transportation remains difficult, my plan could start with regional meetings, but a national convention where everyone gets an opportunity to talk and listen is the better plan. Of course, the advertising agencies would be represented by their top men. The talent agencies, too. Get a guy like George Gruskin to discuss the problems of the man with the package! Let all the problems that pass through your column be settled at this convention! Maybe Fred Allen would advocate the elimination of studio audience. You recall he mentioned it once before.

"I feel that radio would be better if we all were stimulated once a year at a convention where everyone connected with the industry would have an opportunity to learn more about it. Maybe we could hit the level a little."

"They're suckers not to let him take a radio show." It was an agent doing the talking and offhand you might say he had a tangent to go on. Crux of his argument is that a weekly audience of five or ten million can't be written off too lightly and where could an actor getting a cleaner and broader exploitation break. All well and good but keep an open mind until you hear the studio's side. It goes something like this: A day's shooting costs in the neighborhood of $25,000. On day of the star's show he would have to knock off early for rehearsals and the broadcast which would of necessity disrupt production. On his broadcast day the actor is more engrossed in his radio script and his detached interest in the picture invariably calls for retakes, and that's added expense. If he doesn't get off in time he sulks and that also is reflected in the budget. So, what price radio? That, they contend, is not an isolated instance but of general occurrence. For fading stars, they say, it's like a shot of andrenalin but the current favs are not in such dire need of a rivivifier. Looks like a photo finish from our perch.

G. W. "Johnny" Johnstone discharges his last official act for the American Broadcasting Co. with close of the United Nations Conference in Frisco tomorrow. His resignation as director of news and news features, submitted June 5, was accepted over the weekend by Chet LaRoche, vice-chairman of the chain. Called into New York by LaRoche for a desk-side chat, Johnstone told him he had been thinking for some time of other plans and he believed this was the time to make them effective. He hopped a plane the next day for Frisco to wind up his duties and will announce his future plans later in the week, which intimates say "will be very interesting."

STATION BREAKS . . . Jack Meakin leaves Foote, Cone & Belding production staff at month's end to free lance. He has been directing the Hoagy Carmichael show and has had a long career in radio as agency producer and network music director. . . . Jim Doane is packaging "an idea show" for the dramatic talents of Agnes Moorehead. . . . Shirley Ross and Ken Dolan hop off next month on a South American pleasure trip. . . . All callers were told "they're in conference," which they were, trying to decide whether the comic should take the intro from the grand lady or vic versa. After two hours it was still left dangling. . . . Les Mawhinney has been named director of news and special events for the Don Lee chain as a reward for his bangup job in heading up the KHJ news room. . . . Both KFWB and KMTR (there go Maizlish and Fedderson again) will broadcast "American Caravan" program from the Philharmonic tonight. . . . A low bow to the "Information Please" panel of John Kieran, Cilfton Fadiman and F. P. Adams, with guestars Bea Lillie and Reggie Gardiner, for passing their vacation with the boys overseas on the Atlantic side. We know of no other USO unit that will be better received by the GI's, always hungering for knowledge which will be doled out in generous doses. . . . Frank Ford is winding up his "Parade of Stars" series for NBC sales promotion campaign.

STUDIO SALVAGE CLIPS IN NEW PIC PLAN

which were sheared from musicals before release, and combine such specialty numbers in five-reel features which can be played as companion feature with other company product.

Studios for years have filmed too many specialties whenever they made musicals, knowing that such footage would of necessity have to be trimmed from picture to get it down to proper length. Very often two sequences would be made of same player, studio depending upon audience response to determine which of two would go into finished film. Other number might have been on par in quality with one selected, but decision rested in other specialty.

First to carry through with new idea is reported to be Metro, which has assembled deleted clips of entertainment from number of its past musicals into a vaudeville film revue. Footage was first shown to studio execs, who were so enthusiastic over its possibilities that sales department was called in. Sales heads waxed equally enthusiastic, so specialty footage of George Murphy as emcee was made up, to knit together separate entertainment units.

With very little additional expense, Metro now has five-reel supporting feature which it can release on its regular program, thus recouping losses which heretofore have been regarded as irredeemable.

Same plan is to be followed by other studios, too, in effort to cash in on past losses. Majority of studios can turn out a supporting feature with practically no expense involved, cost of production already having been struck off.

20TH-FOX PLEA IN 'SWEET ROSIE' CASE DENIED

New York, June 24.—Federal Judge Murray Hulbert denied 20th-Fox's motion for summary judgment and dismissal of Composer Maude Nugent Jerome's suit against company for alleged infringement of tune, "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," in pic of same name.

20th-Fox had asked for dismissal on the grounds that Columbia was proper party in action, and not composer. Company further asserted that the pic rights were sold to Columbia in 1925 by Herman Starr who allegedly bought rights from Composer Jerome and the publisher of the tune in the same year. Starr's contract with composer gave him the right to make one or more film versions and to assign others. Columbia made film in 1926 and it was pointed out that Starr did not license 20th-Fox.

Ruling that Columbia was given right only to protect copyright on its own film against infringement, Judge Hulbert held that Columbia is not proper party to sue and that plaintiff, Composer Jerome, could sue for infringement of the song copyright under the rights she reserved in her contract with Starr.

Sutherland, Morey Finish 'Legend' Story

John Sutherland and Larry Morey, producers of Daffy Ditty cartoons for United Artists, have completed the words and music for "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" in book form for the presentation on Broadway as a light opera. Arrangements are being completed for an October opening in New York.

Fox West Coast Circuit To Book 'Dillinger'

Deal has been concluded for Fox West Coast to book Monogram's "Dillinger" over entire circuit and playdates start in July. Film, biggest grosser in Monogram's history, has been set for a two-week stay at the Orpheum theatre here, opening on July 10.

Radio Network Plugs

Top plug tunes of the week, as logged over the major networks, NBC, CBS, Blue and Mutual, are being LISTED ALPHABETICALLY, not numerically, under a new accord between the music publishers and song pluggers union, as a means to curb the payola evil. Thus, it is figured, the normal competitive methods, sans artificial stimulation to get on top will tend to eliminate some of the petty bribery, etc.

Denver, June 24.—Trio of theatres are slated for construction as soon as building restrictions let up and materials are available, two definite and third in tentative stage.

of the current "Valley of Decision." Only outside film to play the houses during the year was "Since You Went Away," which ran a total of four weeks from Oct. 10 to Nov. 6, 1944.

Metro opened the showcase policy in the three theatres with "The White Cliffs of Dover," which drew in total of $210,748 in four weeks. Biggest grosser during the 12 months was "Meet Me In St. Louis" which, due to New Year's holiday business, hit smash gross of $284,877 in five weeks and two days. Lowest grosser during the year was "The Clock," which pulled only $114,336 in three weeks. The current "Valley of Decision," according to indications from its first two weeks' take of $126,825, will set a new non-holiday record in the daydaters. Picture already is ahead of the first two weeks of any other Metro film in the trio, with the exception of "St. Louis."

SURPLUS ARMY RADIO STUFF TO SCHOOLS

ROXY, MUSIC HALL MAY TRY CLIFF HANGER PIX

Film serials, long confined to the minors and the sticks, may be tried out at the Roxy and Music Hall. Idea is, according to word received by Morgan Cox, Universal serial producer-scripter, to program the cliffhangers regularly on Broadway if test screenings show audience demand.

Only three companies—Universal, Republic and Columbia—now are making serials. They are turned out for release largely in the small towns and the second-string city show shops.

Exhibs, toying with the theory that people in New York are not so different fundamentally from the folk on the farm lanes, insist there is nothing fantastic about showing the what-can-save-em-now's in the swank Broadway theatres.

Cox points out that chief serial audience is kids and that kids are kids, whether they live on Park avenue or in Three Corners.

ICCASP TOLD NEED OF PIX STRESSING THEME OF PEACE

New York, June 24.—With the war, Hollywood has assumed world citizenship, and its responsibilities must continue after V-J Day, Theodore Strauss told the Independent Citizens Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions conference here at the Waldorf. He called upon Hollywood to follow the enlightened policy of economic cooperation with other countries and to make films in behalf of lasting peace as it did to prosecute a victorious war.

A panel of speakers addressed the conclave on various subjects pertaining to the represented groups. John Grierson called for film centers shooting pix dealing with town planning, health and child welfare, with the Federal government providing greater sponsorship. Prof. Franklin Fearing stressed use of educational films for popular as well as formal educational purposes.

Clifford J. Durr, FCC commissioner, attacked the "balance sheet" philosophy of radio which some would use instead of proper public service concepts. He demanded that radio be "free" of economic domination and greed as well as of government censorship.

Gilbert Seldes of CBS stated that television's possibilities promise additional work for professionals. Other speakers included Peter Lyon, Press Radio Writers Guild, who read paper prepared by himself; Anton M. Leader and George Heller; Robert Swezey, MBS veepee; Walter Greaza, Equity; Margaret Webster, Robert Porterfield, Abram Hill, Theron Bamberger and William Feinberg.

PRES. TRUMAN GRABS SPOTLIGHT AT PARLEY

San Francisco, June 25.—San Francisco is the proudest city in the world. The star of the United Nations Conference for International Organization is here, and the town has gone completely nuts. More people lined the roadway from Hamilton Field to the Fairmont hotel, over which passed the procession of cars, led by that in which President Harry S. Truman rode, than ever before congregated to meet and salute an important dignitary.

Though it was not an official holiday in the bay city, everything seemed to have stopped, business and social, from the time the plane bearing the Presidential party from Portland arrived, until into the night. It was a fitting climax to this INDIAN sign on movie biggies passing through Chicago is apparently off, according to word from Windy City. At least dailies in Chicago are giving news of filmdom's tops more play than they've accorded 'em during last few months, following the Sun's blast at Maria Montez last April 10 when she lost some hatbags while enroute from New York to Hollywood. Film Row and public relations officers of the various railroads here quit sending out releases announcing arrivals of stars and studio execs, after Miss Montez drew page one ribbing for traveling during wartime with 21 bags, two of which were mislaid enroute, and since then it's been strictly a matter of hush-hush. To cue let-up in criticism from vox-poppers, et al, despite pleas by Office of Defense Transportation to civilians to take it easy in touring department, visitors who have been written up during last week include John Hodiak, George Murphy, Judy Garland, Vincente Minnelli, Connie Haines, Donna Reed, Tony Owen, Andy Russell, Jesse L. Lasky, Edgar Bergen, Ellen Drew, Ozzie Nelson, Harriet Hilliard, Boris Karloff, John Wayne, Tom Conway, Anthony Quinn, Bud Abbott and Lou Costello. Where they're getting the space remains a mystery, but fact remains that they're getting written up and plenty.

ARMY is so convinced of therapeutic value to recuperating servicemen of shows with wounded-vet casts that it is trying out a series of such enterprises at Birmingham General Hospital. First presentation is under direction of Natalie Schafer, former Broadway actress, who daily is rehearsing an all-soldier troupe for delectation of other servicemen quartered there. Studios will be petitioned to allow troupes at hospital to try out original plays owned by picture companies which never have been tried out before audiences, for future shows, with studios reported interested in move, as means of clocking audience reaction.

REPORTS from Paris indicate that the most popular films with the French people at present are the "Why We Fight" series, which Col. Frank Capra produced for the War Department prior to his discharge as assistant chief of the Army Pictorial Service. Further indication that the reports are true are substantiated in letter from Parisian friends received this week by Charles Boyer who had done the French narration of the series released in France under the title of "Pourquoi Nous Combattons." Actor also did the French commentary on "Fighting Lady," and "Memphis Belle." Letters say that Frenchmen wait in long lines to see these pix as well as news reels from the United States.

PRODUCER-DIRECTOR Frank Borzage's blast against gangster pictures drew an answering barrage yesterday from Trem Carr, Monogram head, whose release of "Dillinger," based on the life and death of the latter day outlaw, is cleaning up at the boxoffice. Carr pointed out that "Dillinger" emphasized "crime does not pay" angle and depicted the gangleader "as an inhuman, ruthless individual." Also cited endorsement given picture by National Board of Review and other civic organizations. Carr asserted movies should "become realistic and approach this problem in the manner in which we may best cope with it."

PETE SMITH is getting plenty of assistance on production of "Bus Pests" at Metro, most of it unsolicited but nevertheless enthusiastically given. With tag cueing what picture is all about, there isn't a person connected with short either in cast or crew who hasn't come forward with at least one suggestion for picture, and ever since title was announced Smith's phone has been constantly ringing. Suggestions come from studio tops to lowliest messenger gals, with Smith now having enough material to make a dozen features on subject.

Retakes

By GEORGE E. PHAIR

Along comes good old summertime with sweet vacation days
When weary toilers cease their toil and dream of woodland ways.
They dream of leaping trout beside a gurgling waterfall,
Of bosky dells and distant hills
they dream—but that is all.
They yearn to travel far away but haven't got the gas,
And in despair they hang around at home and mow the grass.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

San Francisco is a landmark in world history today. President Truman will address the United Nations Conference and chairmen of the 50 delegations will sign the charter for their countries in a full and significant ceremony. And what site could be more fitting than this city of the West, what scene more appropriate for the completion of a new world charter than a great city of the New World which won its independence from a monarch who also tried to be absolute? This city itself has long been equally famous for its cosmopolitanism and its capacity to rebuild after disaster—even as the world must rebuild. And the charter in itself is homage to the idealism of Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

LOWDOWN ON LATIN AMERICAN RADIO GIVEN BY OIAA

Washington, June 25.—Office of Inter-American Affairs has compiled in booklet form for advertisers and agencies data on rates time for sale, etc., of the Latin-American radio stations. Compilation is based on a questionnaire sent to all Latin broadcasters, but there are gaps in the information since some stations failed to reply and a few gave incomplete answers.

Nonetheless, the booklet is the first attempt to supply the industry in this country with anything approaching a comprehensive roundup on the stations below the border. Increasing interest of U. S. manufacturers in pushing their products in Latin-American country makes the booklet timely. One interesting set of figures lists the number of stations and number of receivers in each country. Another tabulation covers peak listening hours in each country.

Julien Bryan, who has been in D.C. for some days with his new series of five OIAA films on American life, apparently has no Hollywood ambitions. Said he recently: "To h—— with Hollywood. With all its faults, give me government any time."

Matter of fact, Bryan's new stuff, based on life in a small Ohio town, with each of the five shorts specializing in one facet, is said by many to be good theatrical material. Since Bryan reserves theatrical rights in his contract with OIAA, some portion of the series may yet reach this nation's screens. Thus far the pix have been scored only in Spanish and Portuguese, but there are plans to translate them into practically all of the world's tongues for widest possible distribution.

The long promised return of the Italian market to our industry is about to become a reality. OWI plans to quit the field about midsummer. Frank Beckwith, who heads the foreign version division of OWI films, reports that our officials continue to be amazed at the sweet propaganda job the Nazis did in occupied Europe. They poured it on to the tune of $100,000,000 a year for films alone, according to our best estimates.

Now that showings of OWI film subjects have been okayed by our military for the Germans, the films will be specially edited in Britain.

Joe," the Lester Cowan production.

Opening of the string marks Blumenfeld's invasion of this territory and is expected to touch off a battle royal over product with circuits already established here. Repercussions also are expected to be felt in the San Francisco area, where Blumenfeld operates a large circuit, due to Fox West Coast having houses in both territories. Indications are that efforts will be noted, too, within the UA production-distribution setup itself, possibly influencing future second-run product deals.

Each of the partners will have a one-third interest in Music Hall Theatres. UA brings in an exclusive first-run franchise to the group, while G & S contributes the two top houses of its circuit.

Some months back Blumenfeld grabbed up the lease on the Tower theatre from Metropolitan, which had operated it for years, and only recently took a lease on the Colony. Setup gives new company a downtown theatre, the tower; two on Hollywood blvd., the Hawaii and Colony, and the Elite in Beverly Hills.

Houses will lose their present identities, becoming known as the Music Hall theatre in each location. String gives company approximately 3,500 first-run, day-date seats, and plans call for enlargement of the Colony and Elite so total seating capacity will hit 4,000.

Cliff Geismann, Blumenfeld's city manager in San Francisco, takes over city management of the four houses here. He formerly was manager of the Golden Gate, RKO theatre in Frisco, before joining Blumenfeld.

Blumenfeld trains in today from the north. Reports here indicate he also is shopping for several additional theatres in this vicinity. Negotiations are understood to be on for the Adams and Fremont, both neighborhood houses on W. Adams. Some months back Blumenfeld had sought to purchase the Million Dollar, Vogue and Pan Pacific theatres from Harry Popkin to add to the Tower for a day-date setup, but deal failed to reach the closing stages. Popkin's theatres currently are being negotiated for by Metropolitan Theatres and Fox West Coast, although no deal actually has been inked.

Down Mexico Way

By LUISA MARIA ALVAREZ

Mexico City, June 25.—Films Mundiales has been glamourizing the newly-arrived Leonora Amar in a big way. We hope the Brazilian gal lives up to all the adjectives. It seems that Miss Amar, after completing picture with Films Mundiales, will have role in a Hollywood production starring Errol Flynn.

Our ex-Congressman Pedro Tellez Vargas, who has been vacationing in the penitentiary, made arrangements for the Charles Boyer-Marlene Dietrich film, "The Garden of Allah," to be shown at our Big House. The inmates will have a chance to see it, free of charge, naturally, before the cinema public of this city. What with radio stars entertaining, excellent cinema programs and no rent to worry about, the gentlemen of the penitentiary must feel quite happy.

The Directors Union has officially protested against insulting references to Cantinflas and Mexican films made by Argentinian playwright and critic Segundo B. Gauna, recently published in the trade paper, "Cine Argentino."

Santiago Reachi, producer of Cantinflas starrers, will visit Madrid, a sort of exploration trip, while Cantinflas plans a few days in Buenos Aires. He may want to find out if the majority of Mr. Gauna's countrymen share his opinion of our comedian and our pictures.

Norman Foster has sued Producciones Mexico for breach of contract. Production manager Ortiz Monasterio states that no contract has been signed with Mr. Foster.

"Bernadette," dubbed in this city at the Fonomex Studios and previewed at the Magerit this week, seems to prove that dubbing is better done here than in Hollywood. I have a feeling there have been too many Spaniards at the dubbing end over there. It isn't only their accent that differs.

Director Julio Bracho, shooting scenes for "Cantaclaro" in Vera Cruz, down with malaria. . . . Producer Francisco Hormaechea's "Por Culpa de Una Mujer," with Carmelita Molina, Abel Salazar and Fernando Soler, ready for release. . . . Director Roberto Gabaldon locationing in Yacapixtla, and including large numbers of native Indians in cast of "Rayando el Sol." . . . Radio station XELA offers a new program of cinema news and gossip, in care of the Catalonian writer, Vincente Verni. . . . Some of his out-of-town admirers want to know if the star wears his charro togs when broadcasting. I tried to find out Sunday, but his Mexico City admirers, mostly feminine, blocked the traffic.

Seattle Chatter

Seattle, June 25.—William Allen of Tacoma has been appointed manager of the newly-acquired Sterling theatres in Longview and Kelso. Included are the Kelso, Longview, Columbia and Vision theatres. Vision is now being built.

When run of "Suds In Your Eye" winds up at the Repertory Playhouse this week it will have had the longest run of any play in the 18 years of the Playhouse's history—a total of 14 weeks.

MIDNIGHT MATINEES STIR RUMPUS IN SEATTLE

Seattle, June 25. — Controversy over amount of pay for acts doing midnight matinees at the Palomar vaude-filmer and Rivoli, burlesque, both Sterling Theatres (Danz), has led to houses being put on the unfair list by the American Guild of Variety Artists. Theatres in turn have given notices to musicians and stage bands of the discontinuance of their services, and all stage shows, as of July 1.

Arthur Kaye, special representative of AGVA, on arrival here issued ultimatum that a full day's pay must be paid for the extra performance, or else midnight shows eliminated. John Danz, president of the Sterling chain, offered to pay for half day. He contends the basic contract calls for 30 shows by acts—that only 28 are given, and that the extra midnight show brings the week's total only to 29.

Musicians' local has protested, placing the matter in the hands of Petrillo, because cancellation of stage shows will separate nine men from steady pay jobs at the Palomar alone. Stagehands also are protesting.

It is reported that Kaye claims Sterling refuses to negotiate with AGVA, which led to house being called unfair. Record and other sources, however, do not uphold such a contention. Carbon Weber, musicians' business agent, says that Kaye's arbitrary and uncooperative manner is cause of the whole beef; that he (Kaye) refused to work with local unions.

Glett has been in film business since 1919 when he started with Far Eastern Film Company in New York. Was later with Goldwyn and with United Artists in distribution end. He had previously produced 22 Edgar Guest shorts independently.

3-WAY WAR OPENS ON S.F. THEATRE TAX PLAN

San Francisco, June 25.—The $1,200,000 annual bite that San Francisco's post-war planners proposed putting on the city's amusement industry with a 4-cent head tax met a triple frontal attack today. City's theatres stated their case before sub-committee of Mayor Lapham's post-war planning committee, declaring proposed tax unjustly discriminatory, singling out the amusement industry as the sole industry in the city to have what virtually is an income tax levied against it.

Edward D. Keil, attorney for the California Theatres Association and spokesman for the theatres generally, declared the theatres "would be willing to go along with a form of tax that hit everyone equally."

Charles Hardy, international representative of the Building Service Employes Union (AF of L), pointed out that the janitors he represents eventually would suffer by loss of jobs if the increased prices reduced theatre patronage. City Planning Commissioner George Jones, speaking primarily as a representative of the AF of L Citywide Labor Council, objected to the tax bite on the grounds the tax plan put only one-third of the tax on property while labor would have to pay two-thirds in the form of a consumer tax.

Keil insisted the tax bite plan had been drawn up "without giving theatre operators and others who must furnish much of the money to be used a chance to be heard."

Vining Fisher of the important Downtown Association strongly opposed adoption of the report until his association and others could be heard. The tax was intended as part of a way to liquidate a proposed $70,000,000 post-war improvement bond issue.

Other groups meanwhile are reported biding their time, waiting until the question reaches the Board of Supervisors (if it gets that far), before bringing out their big guns. Leland Kaiser, who presided over earlier hearings, left the city last Saturday night for New York.

Beyond the local problem of fighting off a new tax bite, the amusement industry generally is interested in the outcome of the San Francisco battle, since success in this 4c tax here might mean a wave of municipal theatre taxes and could open the door for raising the ante by bigger admission taxes later.

OBITUARIES

GARY BRECKNER

Gary Breckner, 49, veteran radio emcee, died yesterday morning at Community hospital in Redlands from injuries received in an auto accident on the highway between Beaumont and Redlands. He was rushed to the hospital with a fractured skull and both legs broken, but died several hours later. According to police reports, his car was struck by another, which allegedly failed to make a boulevard stop.

Breckner came to radio in 1928 after a stage career in which he appeared with Elsie Janis and other musical comedy stars. He started as a sports announcer and later he branched out as emcee and for years handled interviews for CBS from Catalina Island. A cavalry captain in the last war, he tried for active duty shortly after Pearl Harbor but was rejected on account of his age. He then joined the War Department in a civilian capacity and handled pickups around the country for "The Army Hour." He held down the public relations office here for the War Department's radio division for several months, and then returned to commercial radio as co-emcee of the RKO studio show. When John Conte was called to the service he took over his duties as emcee of the Maxwell House show and also subbed for Tom Breneman on "Breakfast In Hollywood" during his two weeks' vacation.

Surviving is the widow and a son, Robert, a Naval lieutenant, whose wedding here he attended Saturday night.

MRS. SARAH ENGEL

Mrs. Sarah Engel, 76, mother of Harry Engel, now associated with Earl Carroll, died last Tuesday in New York after a lingering illness.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN STEALS SHOW AT S. F.

nine-week shindig to have the star arrive on the eve of the finale to give the show that ending which the world is waiting for—the signing of the world charter by the delegates of the 50 nations.

It was a big day for the newsmen, newsreel, photographers and radio. A selected group from the fourth estate, some 100 approved by the Secret Service, were at Hamilton field to meet the plane, which slid onto the concrete runway of the field at 2:30 on the dot.

President Truman stepped out, met Secretary Stettinius and the American conference delegates. The cameras began to click, both still and newsreel; radio commentators grabbed their mikes and the world was getting the record of the arrival of the top-kick of this big opera. Following that the President was introduced by Secretary of State Stettinius to the 50 heads of United Nations delegations.

All photography was pooled on the route to the Fairmont hotel. Newsreels had men along the line of the 159-car cavalcade, while the radioers spotted themselves likewise. Still photographs and color films also were shot on the way and will be distributed among members of the pool. Likewise the news stories along the route, as only eight men outside of the members of the President's party, which included five Washington correspondents, rode along the line of parade. Newsreels got about 2,500 feet of film. Radio was supplied by all networks, with most of it being regional along the Coast. President Truman had a state dinner by the American delegation tonight, which preceded the final plenary session of the conference in the Opera House. Session was for the purpose of ratifying the charter.

Delegates were a bit disappointed that the starting of signaturing of the charter did not start tonight. Being printed in five languages and needing proofreading before the plenary session, first signatures will start at 8:30 tomorrow morning in the Veterans building. Following that the President will be taken across the court to the Memorial Opera House, where he will rest until about 5:45, when he is to make his closing talk to the delegates, which will be on the 63rd day.

Tomorrow night many of the delegates going east plan to leave, with others waiting until Thursday or Friday. Those who came out on special train will return east via Los Angeles. Arrangements have been made to give them a day's looksee at the studios under the auspices of the Motion Picture Producers Association.

RANK WARNS H'D OF STIFF COMPETITION FROM BRITAIN

in from the east with his entourage.

American film companies can definitely look to distribution competition from Rank. While he declared himself in no particular hurry about forming such a setup in this country, he indicated he does plan his own distribution company at some later date. While he does not contemplate establishing any theatre chain or production outfit in the States at this time, Rank also indicated he will let the future decide whether he enters these fields in this country.

Rank, whose entertainment enterprises in the United Kingdom are gigantic, stepped on reports that he is planning, or had been approached by producers like David O. Selznick or Samuel Goldwyn, on production-distribution alliances. "I met Mr. Goldwyn socially in London and Mr. Selznick socially in New York. Our meetings were purely social and no such business talks have occurred."

He revealed that the Hollywood production code is forcing a few changes in "Henry V," which will be roadshown in this country by United Artists. Some of the Shakespeare dialog failed to pass, and alterations will be made to conform.

Speaking on this incident, Rank said he looked for the Hollywood production code to be adopted, either formally or informally, by British producers as one of the steps toward eliminating handicaps preventing freer exchange of product.

"I hope there will be quite an exchange of players between our countries," Rank said. "It would be advantageous to both." Rank pointed out with pride that "we have several very good stars" and mentioned Stewart Grainger as a top money draw in England. Going into the exchange-of-talent subject further, he declared the elimination of double income taxation would prove a great help in getting American players. Any talent signing is not likely to extend beyond directors, players and writers, he said, due to English union problems that would make difficult the importation of Hollywood technical experts.

Rank said he had sent five technicians to Hollywood to study improved methods, and believed that British producers should come to this country to better acquaint themselves with American audiences. By visits to the middle west and other sections, and not by a round of Hollywood, British producers would come to know audiences and entertainment likes and dislikes, he declared.

Rank does not favor the British quota system and is looking forward to 1948 when it comes to an end. "The idea is to eliminate barriers between our countries" and put production on a basis of quality competition, he stated.

He doesn't believe that television offers any threat to theatres. Having large interests in television concerns, Rank states that the see-hear medium will be ready for showing in theatres in his country in about three years.

Rank's production interests plan to turn out between 20 and 30 pictures during the next year, and he has 10 slated for American distribution. United Artists will handle nine and 20th-Fox one. Canadian film production will be confined to documentaries and children's films, he said.

England faces much construction after years of blitz warfare and Rank does not look for rebuilding of studios or theatres there in the immediate future, as homes, etc., will be given the green light first.

Rank's favorite picture to date is "The House of Rothschild." It's not "empty" entertainment but entertaining as well as having substance, he said.

Queried as to his reaction at the flurry caused by his trip to this country, Rank said: "It surprises me, a simple Yorkshireman, to get all this talk."

Rank and his party of G. I. Woodham-Smith, John Davis, Barrington C. Gain and Jock Lawrence, remain here until July 5 before leaving for Pebble Beach to try out the famous golf course there. Group was feted by the Producers Association yesterday at a luncheon and will be fed again today by the Society of Motion Picture Producers at Perino's. A cocktail party was given by Universal last night in Rank's honor.

Ann Dvorak was set yesterday in Jules Levy's "Trail Town" as co-star with Randolph Scott and Barbara Britton. Actress will play part of entertainer.

MAJOR studio, with script it's proud of, sent manuscript to certain agent for submission to male star whom company believed perfect for top role. Few days later, script was returned by agent, with statement that his client wouldn't do picture. Pressed for a reason, agent admitted he hadn't even shown script to his client, even though he (agent) concurred with studio in opinion that role was tailor-made for actor. When studio execs expressed amazement at this seemingly outlandish reasoning, agent went on to explain that he knew his client, moment he read script, would want to do picture, but because of income tax it would be money out of his pocket if he did it. Despite this very considerable loss—client is in $150,000-a-picture class—actor would be so entranced with part that he couldn't say no, so he had instructed agent not to show him any more scripts for remainder of year, knowing his weakness for wanting to do good roles. Any more income for year would be just that much money—and more—out of hand, so such protective measures had been taken by both actor and agent.

CRACKING the downtown sheets with a radio personality has been the toughest assignment to plague a press agent, but dusting off an old dodge occasionally turns the trick. The sheets, wire services and some newscasters yesterday gave a free ride to the warmed-over gag about Edgar Bergen losing Charlie McCarthy. He was the original, no less, and insured for $10,000, vouchsafed the planter. Some years ago Cholly was "kidnaped" in New York by a playful columnist and the story widely printed. The pseudo abductor was howled down for his trouble when it was revealed that the dummy he hid away in a closet was not the original Charlie but a copy. At the time it was said that the original Charlie is never taken on trips but locked up in safe here. Bergen's affection for the original Charlie would make a better story than the phony kidnaping.

FOR the first time on record in the industry, the private sketches and reproductions of gallery paintings of a famous artist have been made available to a pic production for authenticity in designing costumes. Director Jean Renoir, son of the noted French impressionist painter, Pierre Auguste Renoir, has turned over to designer Mme. Barbara Karinska, his entire collection of his father's works. Mme. Karinska is utilizing the collection as an authentic guide in creating Paulette Goddard's 30 changes of costumes in the Benedict Bogeaus production, "Diary of a Chambermaid." The Renoir masterpieces are said to provide in exact detail models for what the chicly gowned Parisienne was wearing in 1885, period of the story.

WITH producers, directors, technicians and front office execs flocking to Europe for a looksee, among other things into the film situation there, some here are of the opinion that the Pacific and Far East market is being overlooked even though the war still is on there. Leslie Fenton, of Mutual Productions, for one, is making preparations to obtain clearance for a projected trip to that area. His tour would take in New Zealand, Australia, India and if possible the Philippines and China. Major objective would be to study film conditions and trends there as well as to size up competitive angles.

THE idea of stereoscopic motion pictures has concerned inventors for a long time. And now John Alton, cameraman, and William K. Howard, producer, on Republic's "A Guy Could Change" say they have worked out a third dimension illusion with lighting effects. They're trying it out on their current picture and say that it creates an impression of depth heretofore unattained in the movies. Alton has also devised a disappearing track for the camera for use in receding shots.

In days of old when all the world was in a well-fed mood
And eating was a vulgar thing, it was considered rude
In social conversation to discuss the theme of food.

The mention of a lamb chop was considered indiscreet,
For people spoke of books and plays but not of things to eat,
But now they sit around and talk of butter, eggs and meat.

TRADESHOWN at Warners Beverly Hills theatre, June 18, 1945. Running time: 143 MINS.

No one can accuse Warners of trying to short-change the audiences with "Rhapsody In Blue." Paul Whiteman and the orchestra doing "Rhapsody In Blue" and Oscar Levant doing the "Rhapsody" and "Concerto in F" on the piano are, by themselves, worth the price of admission. Anything more than that in a picture is strictly 13 to the dozen, or "pilon," as the Mexicans say. The film gives the extra value and more in Gershwin music. Criticism, if any, is that Producer Jesse L. Lasky has crowded an over-generous measure of Gershwin tunes into the show. Picture runs two hours and 23 minutes—and that's a lot of blues for even the most ardent Gershwin fan to take.

Gershwin's life story is detailed without too much interpolated hokum, but here again the material could be deleted in the interests of action. Paris episodes of the musician's career, already compressed by use of montage, might well be shortened as less vitally related to his major musical compositions than the other sequences.

Robert Alda makes himself acceptable as Gershwin from the first scenes and does an excellent acting

Blackouts

With 1,639 performances behind it, that Hollywood institution, Ken Murray's "Blackouts of 1945," has launched its fourth year with every indication that grosses will continue to hit the high level of the last three years. Thanks to Murray's showmanship, class variety talents, and good, solid fun, "Blackouts" is as much a "must" on the list of things to do in Los Angeles, both for the natives and visitors, as any of southern California's natural attractions.

The continual injection of new acts as old turns move on insures something new for the repeat trade, and there's plenty of the latter. But without playing down the other talent, it's still Murray's show. He's on to avert any letdown, lends his talents informally to the other acts and generally ties it together solidly. If he's not careful he might have a lifetime job on his hands. There's no end in sight yet for this run if the standard remains the same.

Marie Wilson is the only remaining performer of Murray's original cast, and she has yet to miss a performance. Her physical attractiveness and calculated comedy dumbness are as much a delight at the end of the third year as they were way back in 1942 when first put on display in the original "Blackouts."

Among new acts not seen at the third anniversary performance are Josephine Tuminia, opera singer; Harris and Shore, a standout comedy ballroom team; Davidson and Watters, badminton experts; Ted and Flo Vallet, jugglers; Karl Kiffe, drummer, and Danny Duncan, skinny comic who participates in a number of the skits. They all fulfill the variety standard set by "Blackouts." Among the holdovers are the four amazing Lipham youngsters and their acrobatics; Daisy, the dog; Wilbur Hall and his eccentric fiddling; Alphonse Berge and his lightning costuming; Jan Rubini and his violin; the class piano team of Bill Hoffman and Jose Ortiz, and the Elderlovelies.

Anniversary performance had Charles Coburn sitting in the poker game for the umph-teen time, and Jack Oakie socking over the Bridal Night blackout. New skits include the tailorshop to-do with Ken Murray, Danny Duncan, Lew Hearn, Jack Mulhall and a live camel, and Old Sweethearts.

"Blackouts of 1945" still is the best entertainment buy for the money in this show town.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

No event in the world of today is of more transcending importance than that taking place in San Francisco. At the first stroke of 12 noon yesterday, Dr. Wellington Koo, acting chairman of the Chinese delegation, touched his brush to paper to begin the first signature of the United Nations Charter. The Conference has been exhausting, but inspiring, for all who have had the opportunity to participate in it in any capacity. The Charter which has resulted from it carries the promise that the people of 50 nations will also soon have an opportunity to participate in its working. This will be a greater opportunity than any of us at the Conference have had. Yet we will want to share in it, for the opportunity is really a privilege. In our hands will be placed an instrument which if wisely used, can do something for civilization that has not been done before. Here's to the challenge . . . may it be well met.

BIGGEST SHOW ON EARTH—S.F. PARLEY—CLOSES RUN

plauded and cheered for some three minutes, the national anthem was played by an Army band, and Secretary of State Edward Stettinius, president of the conference, at 5:30 p.m. promptly rapped his gavel and declared the conference adjourned.

It was a busy day for the various branches of the fourth estate. The newsreel boys went into action at 11:55 this morning grinding out film showing the various members of the conference signing the Charter. At 3:15 the American delegation marched into the auditorium of the Veterans' Building, accompanied by Truman, and signed the Charter. The President stood to the right of the chair where the signator affixed his John Hancock and congratulated each of the American delegation as they arose from the chair.

Congressman Sol Bloom, the only Jew who appended his signature to the Charter, was a bit laborious in penning his name on the two books so President Truman, as Bloom was affixing his name to the second book, cracked "mark with an X, Sol" and there was terrific mirth and laughter.

The radio boys got into the Charter signing event and broadcast from the auditorium with NBC, having a nationwide exclusive by being able to get wires into the room and doing its descriptive narration as the Americans were signing from 3:15 to 3:30. American did a round table on its headline hour over the net with Edward Tomlinson discussing the Charter with Dr. Herbert Vere Evatt, of Australia and General Romulo of the Philippines. They also broadcast the opening portion of the final session with the talk of Secretary Stettinius and Dr. Wellington Koo's addresses.

All of the four networks carried the address of President Truman as well as KFWB and KYA.

The Memorial Opera House was heavily policed during the final session. Secret service men, Army and Navy intelligence men, and FBI and San Francisco police detectives were spotted all around the building in and out, and once a guest was in his seat and tried to get out, he was told by one or the other, to stay put until the end of the show.

This nine-week shindig has brought about an international expenditure of around $15,000,000, with most of it having been disbursed in San Francisco. The town was highly complimented in a resolution for its hospitality by the French delegation and the conference had it delivered to Mayor Lapham by direction of Stettinius.

More Wordage, newsreel footage, and radio time was used at this conference than at any affair in the history of the world.

Delegates started departing from here tonight, with their work completed, excepting one committee that had a cleanup job to do tomorrow. The newspaper people will rest a day or two and then wend their way home via Hollywood on special trains. The Hollywood contingent of radio and newsreel men pull out of here tomorrow and by Friday San Francisco will have washed up the conference with its hotels, eating places, theatres, etc., then taking on the patronage of the Army and Navy boys who will invade the town prior to shipment into the Pacific. Hotels are turning over around 50 per cent of their rooms for occupancy of the armed forces, and after a two-week trial the Government will decide whether that is sufficient or whether it will be necessary to take over a greater portion of the hotels here to handle the uniformed people who are enroute into the Pacific.

President Truman is in Independence, Mo., today, and San Francisco is most proud that he came here to attend the most historical event in the history of the world.

in mind or merely for future reference, is proving to be a gold mine for producers.

Not alone is this background reelage of exterior scenes. Some of it is of room interiors, and those studios which own such footage not only do not have to worry about lack of technicians to construct sets, but are experiencing considerable saving in construction expense. By filming whole sequences on process stages, entire sets need not be built, which right there is a saving of thousands of dollars.

One studio, which had shots of a Chicago hotel interior in its film library, used this for entire sequences in a picture, it is reported. Footage gave producer 17 different roomsets for his picture, contrived through shooting background stuff at multiplicity of different angles, and he was able to have sets which his budget wouldn't have permitted had it been twice or three times what studio allowed him.

Studios stand to cash in enormously if such practice is followed in future picture-making. With process photography now almost technically perfect, there will be little need for big sets to be built if cameras can limn on celluloid real architecture for future use on process stages, with this applying both to interiors and exteriors. Location trips, on many occasions, too, can be eliminated. Number of studios already have started library of Technicolor background footage for this very purpose.

New York, June 26. — Gala press preview of Warners "Rhapsody In Blue," based on life of George Gershwin, whose music once formed a parade of hits down Broadway, was held tonight at the Hollywood theatre here. Wallace Mahyna of the Third Army, a Purple Heart wearer, who bespoke the servicemen's gratitude for movie industry's release of new pictures for the foxhole circuit.

"We get a big kick out of you people seeing this picture six months after we saw it in Europe. We saw the world premiere of 'Rhapsody In Blue' for that matter; it was the first picture we saw on German soil.

"And the thrill we got wasn't only from the swell entertainment, but because it was showing in a place where Gershwin music had been burned. It did a big job for our morale and we hope it does the same for yours." Sergt. Mahyna brought down the house at conclusion.

George Gershwin Jubilee bond auction preceded the preview, with Times Square mob buying a million dollars worth for largest purchase ever made at War Activities booth there. Bidding was handled over walkie-talkie hookup, marking first use of portable equipment at a theatre. Meanwhile three Broadway signs flashed ads of "Rhapsody," backed by 100 window displays.

Warners execs who came east to supervise event and attend sales and advertising meetings were Major Albert Warner, Charles Einfeld, Joseph Bernhard, Ben Kalmenson, Mort Blumenstock and Samuel Schneider.

With "Conflict" breaking 30-year record at the Strand, Broadway almost converts to Warnerway this week.

job in this, his first motion picture role. Oscar Levant plays both the piano and Oscar Levant in a way to stir enthusiasm. Joan Leslie and Alexis Smith are skillfully sympathetic in their treatment of the lead femme roles. Morris Carnovsky and Rosemary De Camp earn special mention as Father and Mother Gershwin, as does Darryl Hickman in the role of Ira.

Al Jolson repeats for the screen the hit he made with Gershwin's "Swanee" song in a Winter Garden show.

Production, lavish, ambitious and complicated, has been handled without a hitch by Jesse Lasky. Direction by Irving Rapper and musical direction by Leo F. Forbstein have neatly synchronized drama and music.

Film can count on a ready-made audience of Gershwin music fans as box office nucleus. And what with the list of important figures of the music and show world playing themselves in the picture, exploitation and marquee-name possibilities are legion.

Rank also has been considering distribution plans, but he may not close any deals, except possibly for one or two picture outlets, until several months after his return to England. OPA Files Suit Against Hollywood Nitery Ciro's, in a suit filed by the OPA yesterday, was charged with overcharging on tax collections on food and beverage tabs. OPA claims the nitery collected an excess of $4,114.55 in taxes between July, 1944 and March, 1945. H. D. Hover, Ciro's topper, stated in reply to the suit that the nitery always has made a practice of charging to the nearest nickel, either way, and that the OPA had not taken into account the undercharges, which balanced out. Ciro's, Hover said, now is charging to the nearest penny and a staff of accountants is computing tabs to see how the figures belance in relation both to over and undercharges.

ALTHOUGH Darryl F. Zanuck, who is in Europe at present touring atrocity areas with 15 other producers, has voiced opposition toward the proposed U. S. ban on film entertainment for Germany, he reportedly is dropping production plans for a projected pic slanted toward German consumption. For more than a year Zanuck has nursed plans for a film dealing with benefits of living under a democracy and what would develop if enemies were victorious in their attempt to destroy a nation's democratic way of life. Developments already had reached the stage where two screen writers, who were in service, were loaned to 20th-Fox by the War Department to do the story. Film was to have had sufficient entertainment value to lift it out of the level of mere propaganda and was to have had a general release in the U. S. With the government's current view on the matter, the whole deal has been nixed.

HARRY HOLLAND, operator of Bishop Theatre, Bishop, California, is a smart man when it comes to showmanship. Learning that Universal's "Frontier Gal" troupe would be on location in the mountains near town for several weeks, he immediately booked as many Universal pictures as he could obtain. An exhibitor for 30 years, Holland says it's his experience that picture people can be expected to attend films made by their own studio, while on location, especially if they worked on or appeared in picture. Product already shown includes "Patrick the Great," "Salome, Where She Danced," "The Climax" and "Frisco Sal," with "Here Come the Co-eds" slated for late this week and "That's the Spirit" also set. Bishop Theatre is only one within radius of 60 miles.

"THE Kid From Brooklyn," Danny Kaye Technicolor starrer, is being filmed literally here, there and elsewhere. Main body of the troupe, with Norman Z. McLeod directing, is on location in the Santa Monica mountains. On Stage 6 at the Goldwyn lot the Goldwyn Girls are being rehearsed by Dance Director Bernard (Babe) Pearce in the Sunflower Dairy number. Vera-Ellen is rehearsing her "Hey, What's Your Name," number on Stage 1. Virginia Mayo is working over "You're the Cause Of It All" on Stage 2, and Lou Forbes is recording with a 60-piece orchestra and a male choir on Stage 7. Altogether the production now covers 24 acres of location and four sound stages, with more than 500 persons employed.

RADIO's coverage of the United Nations Conference in Frisco has been warmly praised by Willett Kempton, radio relations officer for the conclave of nations. All networks and the indies, KFWB and KYA, Frisco, which linked up for the meet, won the commendation of Kempton and other Conference officials for their factual and uncolored coverage of the nine-week session. Not once was it necessary for the state department to haul a newscaster or commentator on the carpet for being out of line. It was the most thorough and comprehensive job ever done by radio and also proved the most costly in network history.

HAL ROACH, BRITON SUE FILM CLASSICS

Both suits demand accounting of monies allegedly collected by Film Classics.

Roach's suit asks $50,000 damages and cancellation of contract entered into during July, 1944, charging Film Classics with giving false statements showing Roach's share of gross to be $19,135 over $10,000 advance. Complaint alleged actual share was difference between $10,000 advance and amount sought in suit. "No part was paid although demanded," the suit charged.

Agreement was for Roach to receive $10,000 advance against gross collected from films distributed by Film Classics, 35% of gross taken in U. S. and Canada and 25% in other countries.

Wilson's suit charged Film Classics with illegally collecting money in territories allotted to Wilson for distribution of seven reissue films. Wilson claimed he obtained contract in 1943 to reissue "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "A Star Is Born," "Made For Each Other," "Nothing Sacred," "Dancing Pirate," "Becky Sharpe" and "The Young In Heart" in Great Britain and European countries.

Rogers Replaces Hale In 'Don't Fence Me'

Republic will replace Monte Hale, originally set to star in picture, with Roy Rogers, in "Don't Fence Me In," as result of fan demand that latter be cast in film bearing title of song he introduced. It hands you a pain in the spine.

MUSIC HALL WILL EXPAND THEATRES IN SO. CAL.

lished house for which Blumenfeld now is negotiating.

Blumenfeld denied his entry into Los Angeles theatre circles after successfully building a 32-theatre circuit in northern California, can be termed an "invasion" threat to established circuits here. He pointed out that United Artists had long lacked definite first-run dates in the territory and the new combination will be used for the exclusive showcasing of that company's product.

This will result in greater first-run rentals for the individual producers distributing through UA, both Blumenfeld and the releasing company believe. It also will ease the tight booking situation locally, relieving UA sales executives here of many headaches in trying to line up first-run dates that are agreeable to the producers.

Blumenfeld stated his present plans do not contemplate expansion of Music Hall Theatres to take in secondary runs. Original four houses in the group will use only UA product, giving them a single-bill, indefinite screening for maximum returns for all concerned. Policy has proved successful in San Francisco, where Blumenfeld operates four first-run theatres.

The Tower, at Eighth and Broadway; the Colony and the Elite all will be closed for alterations and refurbishing before the premiere opening Aug. 1 with "The Story of G.I. Joe." Only the Hawaii, ace Hollywood blvd. house owned by Galston & Sutton, will retain its present identity. The Tower becomes the Downtown Music Hall. The Colony will be known as the Hollywood Music Hall, and the Elite becomes the Beverly Music Hall.

Blumenfeld's lease on the Tower becomes effective July 4. Current lease, held by Metropolitan Theatres, expires night of July 3. Blumenfeld will shutter house until premiere. The old Colony, having seating capacity of approximately 500 now, will be expanded to about 1,400.

Outline of plans for Music Hall Theatres was given yesterday by Blumenfeld, Galston and Sutton at a trade press conference at the Ambassador hotel. Also attending were George Bagnall, UA production chief; W. S. Callaway, UA western district sales head, and Sid Ross, UA's Los Angeles branch manager.

Cliff Giesman, who moves from city manager of Blumenfeld theatres in San Francisco to management of the new group here, is due Tuesday to supervise preparations for the big opening. Extensive advertising and exploitation campaign, using newspapers, radio and billboards, is being worked up to plug new combination as the showcase outlet for UA product in Los Angeles.

THE PASSIONATE CONGRESSMAN

Boston, June 27.—Considerable sex, some hard drinking and a few pretty good comedy lines are sprinkled over a rather serious discussion of the Negro question and working democracy in "The Passionate Congressman." According to Playwright Lee Harrison Falk, there are two kinds of congressmen: the sensible and the passionate. The sensible goes along with the machine and is re-elected; the passionate bolts the cause and crusades and loses the election.

Neil Hamilton, in a fine performance, plays the title role. After 10 years in Washington he gives up his night club life, neglects his mistress-secretary and tries to introduce a bill putting an embargo on goods across state lines whose manufacturers have discriminated against employes because of race, color or creed. He is disinherited by his political boss. His campaign arouses tremendous support and he is defeated only by 500 stuffed votes. But he has won a greater victory and the boss appears due for some embarrassing questioning.

While Falk has approached his question with sincerity and high purpose, much of the play is verbose with a strange blending of flip comedy and serious crusading.

Edmon Ryan gives a straightforward and convincing portrait of a sardonic newspaperman, with George MacQuarrie, John McKee, Frank McNeklis, Louise Valery and Nick Harris outstanding among the supporting players.

S.F. THEATRE TAX PLAN DECLARED PREMATURE

San Francisco, June 27.—All efforts of the San Francisco Post-War Planning Commission to put a 10% tax on theatre admission or four cents a head tax, is reported to have been done prematurely without careful study, with the result Mayor Lapham added Richard Spier, general manager for Fox West Coast, to this panel, and additional meetings will be held. Likely that the proposed plan to make it a tax spread over a 30-year period will be abandoned for the 90 theatres here.

It was pointed out to Mayor Lapham and the City Supervisors that it was unjust and not an emergency tax, and that it would be discriminatory due to fact that 20,000 business people would not be included. The money that was to be derived from the tax would have amounted to around $3,500,000 annually and would have been applied to pay interest and amortize over the 30-year period a $70,000,000 bond issue for post-war planning.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

Well, it looks good to be home! San Francisco is a great and noble city. Its cuisine is renowned, and justly so. Its people did a superlative job of making everyone in any way connected with the United Nations Conference comfortable and happy. And the Conference itself marked a great milestone in human history. No one with any historic sense could fail to thrill at having some small part in it. But, after nine weeks, it's over. And it's good to be home, which is, by the way, in Pasadena. Now all I have to do to learn what really happened at the Conference is to work my way through its documents which will occupy about five feet of shelf space in my office. Even so, it's good to be home. And that's the way it looks to Sterling at this moment.

$200,000 LAWSUIT OVER 'ROGUES' GALLERY' SET

Suit for plagiarism asking damages of $200,000 will be filed this morning in U. S. District court by Attorney Ben L. Blue on behalf of Edmund J. Holden as an outgrowth of the use of "Rogue's Gallery" as a summer radio vehicle for Dick Powell. Defendants named are F. W. Fitch Co., NBC, L. W. Ramsey agency, Music Corp. and Maurie Lipsey.

Complaint charges Holden owns copyright to the title, script and format and previous to acquisition of "Gallery" by defendants for broadcasting had the property on file with U. S. copyright office and registered with Screen Writers Guild. Protests by Holden against use of the title and format were ignored, the suit alleges. Actual damages of $100,000 and exemplary damages in the same amount are asked.

LIGHT AND AIRY

By JACK HELLMAN

It's one of those cuties with a clincher to put a smile on anyone's lips. The principals must remain anonymous so nobody gets hurt. Independent packager was told by an agency head if he could land a certain picture property there's a firm offer awaiting him. He mused for a minute that the studio (and a tough one with radio) must surely own the rights but nothing ventured, nothing gained. He looked into it and sure enough it was free and open as the garden gate. It so happened that a gal wrote a magazine yarn years ago involving the all-important title and tried to peddle it to the studio but got a fast turndown. Time passes and the title appears in another literary property bought by the studio in question. So the gal ups and sues and just as quickly drops it when she is advised by letter that the yarn bought by the studio has absolutely no connection with or bearing on her fiction child. With this intelligence at hand the packager makes a deal with the gal and the client buys it.

Now the studio is up in arms and threatens to sue from here to breakfast. But it fazes him not for hasn't he the studio's letter saying that one was absolutely independent of the other. To protect its property, which has been a big money-maker, the studio insists that the star of the series be used in the radio conception. The budget, he teases, won't stand for the coin she would demand so he'll most likely use an AFRA player. The studio chief is beating his breast by now and really sweating it out. The packager, having had his fun and won his point, finally condescends to use the studio's star—but not at her price. Many's the time we've all had the same feeling—if we only hadn't written that letter.

Too much and too early sometimes is as bad or worse than too little and too late. We're questioning the efficacy of Warners radio campaign on the Gershwin picture, "Rhapsody In Blue." After dialers have been glutted with Gershwin music for weeks they're asked to come into the theatre for more of the same. Song publishers claim that radio can kill off a hit song in six weeks by constant pounding. How can the WB flackery justify such a prodigality of music from a picture on the air and, on the other hand, contradict the benefits derived from a single dramatization of a film's highlights. There's such a thing as pouring it on too thick and it will be interesting to see how the picture does at the boxoffice. Probably if it doesn't do too well they'll say radio flopped on the job.

HITCH HIKES . . . Radio crowd will miss Bill Chelios at the Brown Derby for the next few weeks. While he's vacationing Gus Constance presides as maitre d'. . . . Frederic William Wile, Jr., now in the Navy's Industrial Incentive Division, around town for a few days. . . . Mal Boyd, producer of the Albers and Purex shows for Foote, Cone & Belding, has left the agency to free lance. . . . Kellogg is dropping Tom Breneman's evening show after 37 weeks and turning back the time to the Blue. . . . That gent hotfooting it around New York with a record under his arm is Kenyon & Eckhardt's W. B. Lewis, who has 30 days to make a sale of the Barry Fitzgerald light drama exhibit, "His Honor, the Barber." On the record (ah, the secret is out) with Fitzgerald are top draw AFRANS and the music of Opie Cates. Carlton Morse wrote and directed and the price tag reads $13,500.

It will be quite a refreshing experience to tune a station below the border and not be plagued with nostrums, fortune tellers, pitch deals and seemingly endless commercials. Just off the KNX band XERB has put its house in order after a generous house-cleaning and what comes booming out of your receiver will be comparable to the home brand of programming and advertising. At least, that's the assurance we have from the new operators. At the head of the Mexican station at Rosarita Beach there's an old and familiar name—Charlie Hamp. With his wealth of experience he has pitched in to give the station a solid footing on both sides of the Rio Grande. Just to prove that they mean business and these are no vacant promises, they have tossed overboard commercial biz that would have netted the transmitter an additional $5,000 in weekly revenue. Continental Productions is representing the station here and copy ordinarily seized eagerly by Mexican operators will have to pass serious muster.

Our Guest Reviewer Cases "Rogue's Gallery"

"Easiest thing in the world to toss pot shots at 'Dead-Eye' Dick Powell's show. Program can be done only two ways—my way and Bill Spears'—only Spears is doing it while I'm clipping coupons. Superior production, great music and stellar performance can rise above haphazard scripting but former requisites (except for performer) missing in this series. After years of crowding the networks with dozens of whodunits, even a Carlton Morse, Jerry Devine or Charley Vanda can't make 'em really refreshing. With mysteries using up a half a million words every week, it's pretty tough to maintain high standard of original scripting. Point is proved merely by listening—if you must. Difficult enough to solve a plot in 30 minutes—much tougher to do it in 25. This Rogue's Gallery of candid shots is saddled with too many negatives. Powell will never solve this mystery."

HITCH HIKES . . . If those Hooper fluctuations seem out of line you are reminded that the measurement is affected by time of the day, nature of competing program, nature of preceding and following programs, presence or absence of guestars, competing national or international events, weather, season, etc. So you figure it out why Luckies Hit Parade skidded to 7.9 from 13.5 in the advance rating.

VIDEO, FM BANDS SET BY FFC FOOLS INDUSTRY AIM

with statements, polls and petitions calling for location at 50-68 megacycles.

At the same time final locations for six television bands in the region between 42 and 108 megacycles were announced. These are the channels which will be available for immediate post-war video pending completion of experimentation in the ultra-high regions of the ether. The channels, each six megacycles wide, are 54-60, 60-66, 66-72 and 82-88.

It seemed almost certain that the radio and FM crowd would get what it wanted until the final hearings conducted last Friday and Saturday. At that time the commissioners put a large group of witnesses through a stiff grilling and discovered that in many cases people who had been plugging for the lowger location wanted it there for reason other than it was best technically for FM.

One video spokesman said he wanted FM there because higher locations between 42-108 mc. would be better for television. Set manufacturers wanted 50-68 because they estimated they could get into production about four months sooner that way. One industry figure wanted it there because he was convinced the networks are out to spike FM and he felt that a start of four months was important for FM.

With this batch of testimony in hand the commission threw overboard the FM demands and made its selections on the basis of what it considered the best location technically. Although it originally had suggested 84-102 for FM, the final determination was made at 88-106. With the locations for video and FM all set, FCC now is in a position to begin early consideration of hundreds of applications which have piled up in its pending files for the last three years.

ARGENTINA RELAXES CURB ON U.S. PICTURES

Argentina's military junta is relaxing censorship reins on American pictures since her declaration of war against the Axis after long clampdown, Leon Britton, RKO sales manager for Argentina, Chile, Paraguay and Uruguay, disclosed here yesterday.

In last three months government okayed RKO releases of "Hitler's Children," "Days of Glory," Walt Disney's "Der Fuehrer's Face" and "Education For Death," and Samuel Goldwyn's "North Star." Argentina's audience reaction to such anti-Fascist pictures was "excellent," Britton said.

The nationalist trend still is on, Britton said, with Argentine producers demanding raw stock for their own films and decrees in effect fixing quota of import films to be shown.

In Buenos Aires, all theatres with capacity of more than 2,500 must show an Argentinian picture once every two months for minimum of seven days; in houses seating less than 2,500, one every month for seven days. Outside the capital every theatre must show Argentine products two weeks out of every five.

Here for studio conferences, Britton has been reassigned to his old post of general sales manager for RKO in the Far East. First, however, he'll return to Buenos Aires for two months to break in his successor, George Kallman, formerly RKO manager in the Philippines, who was interned by Japanese in Santo Tomas for three years and has been recuperating since his release earlier this year.

Britton said he will journey to India to wait until the rest of his territory has been cleared of Jap competition by guns and bayonets.

SAN DIEGO DANCERY SOLD TO STUTZ FOR $325,000

San Diego, June 27.—Sale of Pacific Square ballroom to Walter Stutz for $325,000 was announced here today by Wayne Dailard, former owner of the dancery. Building, which houses ABC outlet, KFMB, as well as the terpalace, will change hands July 1. Stutz, head of Walter Stutz Enterprises, is owner of several amusement spots around town and held the bar franchise in the Pacific Square bldg. for last several years. He represents a limited partnership in the buy.

Dance hall is the one named in the anti-trust suit filed by Larry Finley, franchise holder at Mission Beach ballroom. Finley charged that Music Corporation of America had entered into an exclusive booking contract, which limited his buying bands from that agency. In the sale of the terpery, the contract, which was between MCA and Dailard personally, will be dissolved.

Stutz offered $275,000 for the building last week, but was nixed by Dailard who had set a fixed price of $325,000 when he put the spot on the block four months ago. Another bid made some time ago was by Horace Heidt, who offered $280,000 but was turned down by Dailard, who held to original price.

Stutz formerly was a theatre-owner in the San Diego area, having three film houses under his banner at one time. Dailard, prior to taking over the dance hall, was an RKO executive for 13 years, and was managing director of the San Diego Exposition in 1936.

"C. H. Brainerd,
Philharmonic Auditorium,
427 West Fifth Street,
Los Angeles, Calif.

The Motion Picture Alliance for the preservation of American ideals, an organization which opposes totalitarianism in any and every form, protests vigorously the use of Philharmonic Auditorium by Gerald L. K. Smith. His doctrines have always been those of Intolerance, Bigotry and Racial Disunity. Those are cardinal principles in the Fascist Ideology which our country has just fought one war and is still fighting another to destroy.

Executive Committee,
The Motion Picture Alliance

On Tuesday afternoon, June 26, the following telegram was sent via Western Union:

"Gerald L. K. Smith,
1204 South Hill Street,
Los Angeles, California.

The Motion Picture Alliance has learned that you mentioned our organization approvingly during your speech at Philharmonic Auditorium Monday night. Our principles are so diametrically opposed to everything you stand for that we deem your misuse of our name an affront to our organization. The Motion picture Alliance was formed to combat those forces within our country which are a menace to the American way of life. We regard you as one of those forces.

Executive Committee,
The Motion Picture Alliance

guests of the studios during their stay. A special train is due in Los Angeles tomorrow, with press and State Department people, and another train Saturday. These people also will be guests of the studios while in town.

Radio commentators and executives who have been here for the last 10 weeks, did a fast fade, as did the newsreel men and their equipment. Veterans building, where all of the administrative events were conducted, which yesterday was the busiest place in the world, today was being cleared out of all the equipment, supplies, typewriters, and at sundown no one would have dreamed it had been the spot eyed by all the world for nine long weeks of charter drafting.

Big job started today with getting out the conference newsreel shots. The newsreels will furnish film to 32 countries, 17 of them with sound. The other 18 countries will get their film from OIAA and OWI. Former organization will put out eight and OWI will distribute 10, partially sound and part silent.

Within week after the newsreels have been released in South American countries, OWI next Tuesday will send to all Latin-American countries 10 prints each of the reel in 16mm., to be distributed in theatres and schools in South American countries where they have a 4,500,000 to 6,000,000 circulation. Jack Connolly, newsreel coordinator for the State Department, flew to Washington at noon today, with Lieut. Col. A. E. Holland of the Signal Corps, to assemble this film. OIAA also shot 5,000 feet during final days of session, of Russians, White Russians and Ukrainians at all important events, that will be shipped to Moscow for distribution by the Russians, as latter had taken back their cameramen several weeks ago.

United Nations theatre had its final conference performance last night, and today opened to the public with double-bill second-run policy. House will retain the moniker. During the nine-week period it operated for conference personnel and delegates. Fox West Coast spent around $40,000 on operations, with film being supplied by the motion picture industry. This included topical films and previews of pictures not yet released.

'Tin' Ears, Romance? 'Phooey,' Says Heisler

STUDIOS WILL CURB RAIL TRIPS TO LOCATIONS

slated for pictures, and great number are rearranging their location schedules so that such exteriors may be shot as close to home as possible.

As consequence of studios' decision, both Utah and Arizona are making strong bids for consideration as location sites, each being easily reached by motor. Even these states will be passed up, however, in majority of cases, as too far, and location managers are scratching to find suitable new locations within day's ride of Hollywood.

"Smoky" troupe will go to Kanab, Utah, for six weeks of filming, and "Leave Her To Heaven" may go to Arizona, but these are only 20th-Fox companies now slated to leave state. "An American Guerrilla In the Philippines," which was to have gone to Puerto Rico, now will not be made there, if studio decides even to produce it after having called it off last week. "Now It Can Be Told," currently winding in New York, was on location before new decision was reached. This includes Metro's "The Yearling," too, which has been in Florida for several weeks.

Sites within a few hours' ride of Hollywood, which were popular before studios got travel bug, are due to be rediscovered, with motion picture companies cleaving to their new no-rail-travel ban. Paramount already is using territory at Saugus, once so well patronized, for exteriors on "Calcutta," and Universal plans to use extensively the Newhall sector. Paramount also is using Occidental College campus for "The Trouble With Women."

Samuel Goldwyn selected situation near Malibu for "The Kid From Brooklyn," and 20th-Fox's "Enchanted Voyage" troupe has gone to Arcadia for outdoor scenes. Republic called off a Dakota location for Joseph Kane production, "Dakota," and another picture set to go to Minnesota for iron mine sequences has been rerouted nearer home for exterior scenes.

Writers hereafter will not include in their scripts any difficult and distant locations which must be filmed in their actual locale. Scribblers will be asked by their studios, too, to familiarize themselves as much as possible with standing sets on their respective lots and company ranches so that their stories may be slanted to take advantage of such sets or background near at hand.

Co-Star In 'California'

Alan Ladd and Betty Hutton will be co-starred in "California," Paramount announced yesterday. Seton I. Miller will produce the historical film, which is slated for a fall getaway. Bing Crosby was originally talked of for the role, but the story line was changed and the new co-starring duo has been set.

Metro Starts 'Mop-Up'

Metro has begun production on a Technicolor cartoon titled "Mop-up" in connection with the Western Division of the U. S. Signal Corps, Photographic Center. Fred Quimby is producing, and co-directors are William Hanna and Joseph Barbera.

It happened on NBC

MAY 1937

Chase and Sanborn launched a new variety program with such Hollywood celebrities as W. C. Fields and featuring the newly discovered team of Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. The first available Hooper rating was 12.5.

JULY 1937

Although novices in radio, Bergen and McCarthy caught on fast. The Chase and Sanborn rating was on the increase—even during the summer months.

FEBRUARY 1938

Less than a year after going on NBC, Bergen and McCarthy received a rating of 41.2—one of the highest Hooper ratings ever given to any program.

CARD TRICKS ON THE RADIO?

In 1937 the idea of putting a ventriloquist and his dummy on the air seemed just as absurd to many people. Half the fun of such an act was in the watching. But Standard Brands, ever alert to the possibilities of the new, put the ventriloquist and his dummy on the air over NBC—the network built by new ideas.

• The result? On July 10, 1937, the restrained New York Times for the first time in its history devoted an editorial to a dummy, writing in part: "Although Charlie is apparently still in his teens, his little voice is aweary of the world. When he feels he is stumbling into an awkward situation his voice can make a disarming plea for sympathy; it drops away into a choking tone of self-pity, impossible to believe or resist. His laugh

(The Story of Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy) NO. 4 OF A SERIES

1941-42

Bergen and McCarthy finished the winter season (October through April) with an average Hooper rating of 30.7.

APRIL 1943

For the sixth successive year, Bergen and McCarthy ended the winter season with an average Hooper rating of more than 30. (1942-43 average: 31.3)

MAY 1945

Bergen and McCarthy, now on 139 stations, begin their 9th year on NBC—firmly entrenched in the affections of a vast radio audience.

is mocking and precocious. When he is in a wooing mood beyond his years his voice fairly coos with insincere rapture . . . Since Charlie's radio audience cannot see him, Mr. Bergen has had to concentrate on the tone of the simulated voice and the wit of his script. Both these things he has done with such skill and originality that Charlie has become the most real personality on the comic air waves of the season."

• The new idea of Charlie McCarthy—a dummy on the air—backed by the skill and talent of Edgar Bergen, given NBC Network facilities and the great NBC audience, has resulted in one of the major paradoxes of the entertainment world —a wooden dummy who lives in the homes of millions of American families with an identity and character as real and full-blown as many national figures of flesh and blood.

THE courtesy usually extended to a radio star signing off one program for another, that of saying goodby to her following and wishing luck to her successor, was denied Joan Davis by her sponsor since 1941, Sealtest. Last night she walked out of the "Village Store" for the last time and next season starts a new series for Lever Bros. (Swan Soap.) Miss Davis made a pointed issue of the usual farewell ritual attending a final broadcast but the client (National Dairies), through its agency, McKee & Albright, was adamant and stood its ground. Its ruling yesterday was final—there would be no goodbys on the program and for all the dialers knew she would continue on the show. There was but one alternative, that of ad libbing it, but Miss Davis chose to abide by the official dictum. According to Miss Davis, she was charged by the client with being ungrateful of the long campaign by Sealtest to elevate her to stardom. Her reply to insinuations of disloyalty was that last season she turned down a deal with American Tobacco that would have doubled her weekly salary to remain with the dairy outfit. It is recalled that the contract offered Miss Davis by America was the most flattering ever drawn up for a femme star in the history of commercial radio. That dialers will be fully cognizant in the fall of Miss Davis' shift to Swan and CBS is assured in the announcement by Young & Rubicam agency that one of the most saturating advertising campaigns ever given a radio star will be launched in the weeks before she inaugurates her new series.

NONE of the American wounded in English hospitals seemed sorry for themselves, and all were in more or less cheerful frame of mind. This fact stands uppermost in mind of Mary Jo Ellis, leading lady of Actors Lab troupe playing USO tour of "Three Men on a Horse," just back from 10 months overseas. Company appeared almost exclusively for four months before wounded servicemen in English hospitals, and actress reports cast was tremendously impressed by high morale of the patients, who gave them thunderous applause wherever they played. Same high morale was experienced in audiences which troupe played to for six months on Continent, too, company giving two shows daily for several months before rest camps in Belgium. On several occasions, they were only eight miles from front. Two days in Paris was sufficient for company members to learn that inflation had hit French capital, to tune of $30 for pair of nylons.

PRODUCERS, research men, location managers and such already are getting set to handle an anticipated post-war motion picture headache. Hitherto the great mass of film fans has had only a smattering of knowledge of various far corners of the world. And so long as the scenes in a picture showing China, the South Seas, European locale, or African desert and jungle were reasonably accurate, the audience accepted them without a murmur. But now comes the shuddery thought to the producer that presently there isn't going to be an audience anywhere that won't have in it ex-service men who've been nearly everywhere. Just pull one boner in a foreign-land sequence and there'll be half a dozen guys leaping up to shout —"It ain't like that at all—I was there." It means that from now on writing is going to be carefully done to keep the story in locale that can be accurately filmed.

SEVERAL bids for commercial rights including a request from the Army have been received by producer-writers, Michael Fessier and Ernest Pagano, for the novel night club setup used in "Once Upon a Dream." Tagged the "Corn Crib," the entire floor, bandstand, and bar, is rigged to resemble a corn field. A hot pop corn wagon passes among the tables, and employes are dressed in husking garb. The Army declared the set so unusual they have asked Spike Jones to make a musical short in the setting for their morale series.

LATEST startling rumor around Hollywood accuses a major studio of fearing to release a picture because it is too good! Film is the work of a producer who has since severed his connection with the studio. It was his last production for them and is reported to be a superlative job—right up in the potential Academy winner class. And the producer's friends assert studio execs have buried the film in the vaults rather than risk building up reputation for a man who is no longer with them.

As It Looks to STERLING

(CBS News Analyst)

Neither the resignation of Mr. Stettinius as Secretary of State nor his appointment as United States representative to the United Nations Organization was a complete surprise. But one remains curious as to the reason for these moves. The reason lies, perhaps, less in what Mr. Stettinius did or did not accomplish in his term as secretary of state than in the matter of succession to the Presidency. Mr. Stettinius is not a well-established regular party Democrat. His past associations have been mainly with big business. Should anything untoward happen to President Truman the secretary of state would be, as things now stand, next in line for the Chief Executive's office. It is a prime party consideration to have such a potential successor a man who is of the party, for the party and by the party.

When idols ruled the matinees
In good old horse-and-buggy days
Of soulful adulation,
The heroes posed as single men
And never spoke of marriage then
At least, for publication.

Although the heroes' stage careers
Were ballyhooed to eager ears,
Their home life was forgotten.
Domestic themes were blotted out,
But now the players brag about
The kids they have begotten.

PCC ADOPTS ONE CAMPAIGN PROGRAM

riod from Nov. 1, 1945, to Oct. 31, 1946.

Decision to concentrate charitable collections into a single drive was reached following individual votes by motion picture industry workers and through action of the PCC. Ballots in the industry-wide poll were 7 to 1 in favor of the one-campaign plan and it was unanimously adopted by the PCC retiring board of directors, which had the idea under consideration more than a year.

It is believed no other industry or community in the country has a similar program, according to Freeman, who declared: "It is our hope that with one campaign we can raise more money because, knowing in advance that they will be asked to give only once, people will be better able to budget their charity contributions and thus give more. To the individual donor it will mean only one pledge, once a year, and elimination of all the complications which have arisen through overlapping payroll deductions."

Prior to the autumn drive, the PCC, with the assistance of an industry-wide advisory committee, will decide how the proceeds are to be distributed among charity agencies. The Motion Picture Relief Fund will not be included, nor will strictly sectarian appeals. Former derives its funds from regular weekly payroll deductions.

PCC has been operating at a cost of only 3% for administration, campaigns and collections, according to Edward Arnold, executive vice-president and treasurer. This figure is the lowest in the United States for any comparable organization, but by using the single-collection plan, Arnold hopes to establish an even more efficient record.

A uniform system of voluntary payroll deduction is being worked out by studio comptrollers for all who prefer not to pay their full pledges at once or in quarterly installments.

HOLLYWOOD RUNAROUND

By RADIE HARRIS

Reflections of the Hollywood scene after two years absence . . . Until you leave New York and arrive in this land of "optional illusion" and January in June climate, you don't realize how effortless everything is on the home front . . . private phone numbers of prominent producers, writers, and actors, are listed in the phone book right out loud! . . . You can reach any "big shot" without wading through his agent, press agent, and business manager . . . A $40.00 a week actress can walk into Sardi's and get a table just like Gertrude Niessen or Celeste Holm . . . Two people can be seen dining together without anyone suspecting a motivation behind it: "I wonder what story he is getting? Or what contract they're signing? Or if they're romancing each other? People give them the benefit of the doubt of ACTUALLY being with each other for the simple reason that they enjoy each other's company . . . Everyone doesn't call everyone "darling," except Tallulah Bankhead . . . Theresa Helburn and Oscar Hammerstein give parties with all NAME guests, and there isn't a sign of a "Hyman Fink" in sight! . . . Robert Sherwood, Claire Luce, William Knudsen, Leon Henderson, Mrs. Jock Whitney, James Thurber, Nicholas Schenck, Gladys Swarthout, Chet La Roche, and Ernest Hemingway can decorate the tables at "21" and no one blinks an eyelash . . . You can keep six or seven appointments in one day because if you haven't a car, and you can't get a taxi, you can WALK! . . . There are no pink haciendas, orange groves, mink-over-slacks, but there IS 5th Avenue at dusk; sunset on steel; Beekman Place where Katharine Cornell lives and the Dead End Kids swim; stopping at the Plaza, and stomping at the Savoy; the roar of the "40's" and the calm of the Hudson; curtain calls for Laurette Taylor; the Gay White Way, which after dimout and curfew is gayer than ever . . . "But don't get me wrong, I love Hollywood!"

EXCLUSIVELY YOURS: Frank Craven's illness is more serious than his friends would like to believe . . . When Cedric Hardwicke returns from London August 1st to check back to 20th-Fox for "Razor's Edge," it will be perfect timing for Edmund Gwenn, who took over his suite at the Bev-Wilshire. Simultaneously with Hardwicke's arrival, Gwenn leaves for New York to start rehearsals in the new Guthrie McClintock play. Helen Ford, back from the Pacific, and now a guest of the Bill Gardners on Linden Drive, had to muff a welcome chance for a screen test because of a facial allergy contracted while overseas . . . Marianne O'Brien will have to look for a new dinner partner now that Georgie Jessell is set for an advance exploitation trip to New York, Des Moines, and Columbus in conjunction with "State Fair" and "Captain Eddy," and if you don't think there will be some extra ad lib plugs for the "Dolly Sisters," you don't know Mr. J! . . . That was Hal Wallis sitting very patiently in the lobby of the Bev-Hills yesterday waiting to breakfast with Arthur Rank. As a ringside observer to the arrival of this front "Rank" Englishman, I never heard so many monocles in a throat, saw so much luggage, and o.o'ed such an entourage outside of a Freddie Lonsdale drawing room comedy! Wallis, who shoved off for New York to be on hand for the preem of "You Came Along," will also confab with Lillian Hellman about the completed script for "Searching Wind." Come Spring, he'll join Rank in London where, lucky bloke, he can appreciate the truth of: "Oh to be in England now that April's there!"

SCOOPING AROUND: Peggy Knudsen, the newest "sextacular" appeal on the Warner lot, who clicked with a small part in Bette Davis' "Stolen Life," draws the second femme lead opposite Errol Flynn in "Don't Ever Leave Me" . . . and I'll wager he won't want to! . . . Vincent Youmans coming to his senses again, is writing his OWN score this time for his next Broadway musical, and if he is especially excited about his book writer, you can hardly blame him—she's the "Harvey" girl, Mary Ellen Chase! . . . Helmut Dantine didn't give himself any time to recuperate from his New York trip, but immediately plunged into rehearsals of his production, "To Hell We March" (tentative title) a three-act drama by Peter Brooks dealing with the Nazi's plan for a Third World War . . . Play will open at the Biltmore theatre the 14th of July, featuring John Alvin, borrowed from Warners for the male lead . . . All profits to go to Naval Aid with "cuffo" rental of the theatre for one week . . . John Harvey, who was built up to a let down by 20th-Fox, burned his Hollywood bridges behind him today, and left for New York accompanied by his wife, Judy Parrish, where both of them hope to co-star in a play they co-authored. Metro, 'tis said, already put in a bid for the film rights, but they were nixed as the duo want a Broadway production first—A funny switch would be if 20th out-bid for the film rights—Play was authored while John was collecting a salary on the lot for doing NOTHING! . . . Sylvia Sidney, looking tres chic in a full-length leopard skin cape, table-for-twoing with Capt. Bill Atkinson at the Bev Hills . . . Three and a half years ago when John Lee Mahin checked off the Metro lot to enter Officer's Candidate School, he was scripting a Clark Gable film, "Strange Adventure." This week Capt. Mahin, now in civvies again, checked back on the Metro lot, and the first assignment handed him was a Clark Gable script called "Strange Adventure" . . . Watch Richard Conte get a big romantic build-up from 20th on the strength of one short love scene in "The Spider." Forty secretaries on the lot discovered his "woolf appeal" . . . Sidney Kingsley is hoping that Irene Dunne will like playing spouse to Clark Gable in "Ulysses Homecoming" well enough to share femme honors with Katharine Hepburn already slated for the role of his nurse. . . . Leonard Bernstein enroute to SF to conduct for the Symphony, was the house guest of Irving "Rapper"-sody . . . ROUND TABLE ON WLB POLICIES SET FOR AUG. 2

All unions in the film industry have been invited by Screen Office Employes Guild to send delegates to a round-table discussion on "War Labor Board Policies and Trends" with Wendell Phillips, AF of L member of the Tenth Regional War Labor Board as featured speaker. Conference is scheduled for Aug. 2 at Hollywood Woman's Club and only the five members delegated by each union will be invited.

Round table discussion was scheduled, according to Glenn Pratt, SOEG business manager and a member of the conference committee, because it will be helpful to every union negotiating committee. Pratt said "most union contracts in the industry expire around January, 1946, and we believe a round table discussion on what the War Labor Board may approve will be helpful."

In addition to Phillips, SOEG also has invited educators and labor attorneys to sit in as experts to answer any questions on WLB procedure union reps may ask.

that Bouche was violating AGVA's rules prohibiting performers from mixing with customers.

Jack Irving, AGVA secretary here, said, following a meeting of his board, that Bouche fired Nancy and Michael, dance team, before their two-week engagement had expired, and that he owes the entertainers $371.45. AGVA demands he make payment by tomorrow or else have all the entertainment jerked from the suburban nitery.

Irving also charged Bouche was forcing chorines to live and dine on the premises and that they could only leave the grounds during an engagement there with Bouche's permission. Also Bouche is charged with having signed and posted an order that the gals can't return to their rooms between the hours of 8:15 p.m. and 4 a.m., but must mingle with patrons during those hours. AGVA by-laws forbid such mixing, Irving pointed out.

Thrilling movies of our weapons in action spur workers to greater effort . . .

RECEIVING little public recognition—yet one of the motion picture industry's highly important contributions—is the work it does in cooperation with our armed forces in the making of "incentive" films . . . for presentation in war plants and movie houses.

Important? Yes, and for many reasons. In good part, production depends on workers' enthusiasm. In these incentive films they see their tanks, their planes, their guns blaze into action on the fighting fronts . . . the final test of their handiwork.

In terms of high-level war production, recruitment of workers, job attendance, the program of incentive films is measured and found worthy . . . another contribution of the movies at war.

NLRB HEARING ON DECORATORS' VOTE SET

mean an NLRB decision on jurisdiction would be unnecessary. Richard Walsh, IA prexy, has been invited to attend conference, at which union reps will meet with international heads of the various crafts involved. Invitation to national heads of the embattled unions was sent out by William A. Hutcheson, prexy of the carpenters' union.

Stewart Meacham, regional director, was advised yesterday by NLRB to hold a hearing at his convenience to determine three points in the May election:

(1) Whether the employment status of the set decorators, over whom the jurisdictional squabble arose March 12, has been lawfully terminated by a valid discharge or replacement of a permanent nature prior to the date of the election.

(2) Whether any or all employes hired between date of the strike and date of election, to take the places of striking set decorators, acquired the status of bona fide permanent replacements.

(3) Eligibility of any other challenged votes as to whom the regional director made findings and recommendations, and to which ruling exceptions have been made.

A total of 109 votes were challenged after the recent election.

Herbert Sorrell, prexy of the Conference of Studio Unions, declared the NLRB order only proved strikers' original contention that the strike would have to be settled in Hollywood and that trying to handle it through the National Labor Board would cause only one delay after another.

Pickets were out in force yesterday with signs in about 20 languages in anticipation of studio visits by delegates to the United Nations Conference. Only visitors reported during the day were six Panamanians who took a look at Republic studio. Influx of foreign visitors is expected to hit a peak today and tomorrow and strike strategy committee is reinforcing picket lines. Mass lines were concentrated yesterday at Metro, Paramount and Warners.

AMPAS WILL SPONSOR H'D BOWL CONCERT AUGUST 4

Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will sponsor the Hollywood Bowl program to be presented the night of Aug. 4. Music to be presented that night will be from motion picture musical scores and a special committee composed of members of the Music Branch of the Academy will arrange the entire program from music suggested by members of the branch, according to Walter Wanger, Academy prexy.

Soloists for the evening also will be drawn from film talent. On the committee to select scores to be presented are Jerome Kern, chairman; Robert Emmett Dolan, John W. Green, Abe Meyer, Edward Powell, Walter Scharf. Ex-officio members include Nat Finston, chairman of the Academy's Music Branch, and Margaret Gledhill, Academy executive secretary.

Program will be listed as a regular concert of the Symphonies Under the Stars season by the Hollywood Bowl Association. This is the first time the Academy has participated in the presentation of a Bowl concert, and it is hoped affair will be the start of an annual Academy night on the Bowl program. Total of 1,500 seats have been reserved for sale to Academy members.

URGE FCC TO RUSH FM APPLICATIONS

cast simultaneously in the new and old frequencies.

The case of immediate importance to the broadcaster, he said, is whether FM can go ahead on the new band and provide a better service than AM. The answer is that it can. The original FM was on 110-177 mc., and it was on this band that the superiority of FM over AM was demonstrated to the men who became FM's pioneer broadcasters.

FM will start going forward immediately that licenses are issued for the 400 or more applications on file. The Commission now can show its faith in this statement, that the same or greater coverage will be obtained in the new band by processing the applications as filed, immediately. If prompt action is taken then, in spite of the handicap imposed by the shift in the band, FM will be the major factor in post-war employment.

'Incendiary Blonde' Preem In August

CURFEW INJUNCTION HEARING HELD UP

Hearing on suit of Earl Carroll and Florentine Gardens asking for an injunction to prevent the Board of Equalization from enforcing the new midnight liquor closing law has been carried over until July 16. Judge Hartley Shaw had issued an order requesting the board to appear in Superior court tomorrow morning to show cause why the injunction should not go through.

Because the new law involves the state constitution, the Appellate department of the Superior court, composed of Judges Shaw, Clarence Kincaid and Edward T. Bishop, will have to hear the suit. Two of the judges will be out of town for the next two weeks, thereby causing the hearing to be postponed until the later date.

OPERATORS CALL OFF BAN ON HANDLING COL PICTURES

New York, June 28.—At the request of the IATSE, Herman Gelber, prexy of Local 306, Operators, today withdrew for the time being his instructions of June 18 to all projectionists in this area not to run or handle Columbia pictures commencing July 2.

This action followed breakdown of negotiations covering operators in screening rooms and subsequent refusal of Columbia to talk a deal separately. Local 306 felt it might get somewhere on an individual rather than a group basis and picked Columbia, top of the list alphabetically, as a starter.

Jim Brennan, third vice-prexy of the IA stationed here, has been requested by Richard Walsh to try to settle the dispute covering preview rooms, and a meeting with distributor representatives has been set for tomorrow morning. All distribs so far have been willing to grant projectionists in preview rooms a 5% increase. Union has asked for an increase from $77 to $100 weekly, plus improved conditions such as no free time preparing machines prior to scheduled openings for the day's grind.

CBS CORRESPONDENT SEES LONG WAR WITH JAPS

New York, June 28.—William J. Dunn, CBS correspondent on leave from his post in Manila, today expressed the opinion that the war with Japan would last another year, and probably two. He has been in the Pacific area for four and a half years, and landed on Leyte with General MacArthur.

"The Japs," he said, "have shown no tendency to surrender, so all that's left is to kill them. And don't forget, they have a lot of men under arms. The air force and navy are shot, but their army is practically intact."

'Concerto' Pushed Back
